83. It will be convenient to state here that the witnesses representing Fire, Life and Marine Insurance interests all expressed the desire that no obstacle should be interposed to prevent Insurers from carrying out any obligations which properly and equitably attach to them. They regard this as extremely important for maintaining the reputation of British Companies, and for enabling them to retain the confidence of clients in all parts of the world. This applies to countries which at present are friendly or neutral, rather than to the Enemy countries, since they do not expect or desire to continue business in the latter after the war.

84. As in the case of contracts generally, so in the case of Insurance, no solution of the questions arising with enemy countries will be satisfactory or effective if it is not accepted by the belligerents on both sides, and enforced in the countries concerned. It should be understood, therefore, that the recommendations which we make below are intended to indicate the conditions which it should be our object to insert in the Treaty of Peace, such conditions to be enforced, where necessary, by legislative or administrative measures in each country.

A.—Direct Contracts of Insurance.

Existing Law.

85. The English Law on the subject of the effect of war on direct contracts of Insurance is not clear. As regards Fire Insurance, no cases appear to have been decided either in this country or in America. The only case in this country bearing on the question of Life Insurance is Seligman v. Eagle Insurance Co. (1917, 1 Ch. 519), in which Mr. Justice Neville decided that a Life Insurance Contract does not become void only by reason of the Assured becoming an alien enemy, and that there is nothing illegal in the acceptance by the Insurer of premiums tendered during the war. There has been no appeal against this decision. Marine Insurances which cover risk of British or Allied capture become void at the outbreak of war; if they expressly purport to cover such risk they were illegal and void ab initio. We are not aware that it has been decided what the effect of war is on a policy which does not cover risk of British or Allied capture, but there is, in the opinion of some competent lawyers, reason to think that the Courts would hold such contracts also to have been dissolved at the outbreak of war.

Fire Insurance.

86. The amount of direct business done by British Companies in enemy countries was large, but practically no direct business was done in this country by enemy Companies. The usual form of contract in this country is an annual contract with premium payable in advance, but insurances may be for a term of years with a single or an annual premium. Long-term insurances are rare in this country, but a ten years' contract with annual premiums is the usual form on the Continent.

For the reason stated above, the British Companies desire that no action should be taken which would have the effect of debarring them from the payment after the close of the war of any claims which have arisen during the war under their policies issued before the war.

It appears that in many cases the business of British Companies in enemy countries has since the beginning of the war been transferred to enemy Companies without the consent of the British Company. In this way their business in the enemy countries will have been brought to an end, since all annual contracts will have expired, even if they were not transferred, and long-term contracts will probably in all cases have been transferred. The Companies do not desire to rescind such transfers, provided that they have been effected on equitable terms, but British Companies claim the right to receive full information as to the terms on which the transfer has been made, and to be protected against inequitable conditions.

87. We recommend, therefore, that it should be our object to include in the Treaty of Peace, provisions to the following effect, to be enforced, if necessary, by legislation or by administrative action in each country:—

- (1) Direct Fire Insurance Contracts will not be deemed to have been dissolved by the outbreak of war.
- (2) Where, by administrative or legislative action, an insurance effected before the war has been transferred during the war to another company, the transfer will stand good, and the liability of the original insurer will have ceased at the date of transfer, but the original insurer will be entitled to receive full information as to the terms of transfer, and to have these terms amended if they are not equitable.

An assured whose insurance has been forcibly transferred to an enemy insurer should have the right of retransferring it to the original insurer after the war, if the original insurer consents.

Life Insurance.

88. So far as British interests are concerned the question of Life Insurance is not to any great extent of a reciprocal character. Comparatively few British subjects are insured in enemy Companies, but British Companies have a large business in insuring the lives of subjects of or residents in the enemy countries. This business was done in two ways:—

- (1) Life Assurance Contracts issued in the British Empire on the lives of enemy subjects wherever resident. Such contracts are subject to the jurisdiction of the British Courts. Business of this kind is transacted by almost all the British Companies.
- (2) Life Assurance Contracts of British Life Offices issued through properly constituted branches in enemy countries. This class of business is transacted by a small number of British Offices only.

In Allied Countries, on the other hand, a large business was done in Life Insurance by German and Austrian Companies.

Life Assurance Contracts of British Companies issued in the British Empire.

89. Contracts of Life Insurance stand in a special position. So long as the premiums are paid the Insurer is bound by the contract; but the Assured is not bound to go on paying the premiums, and can cancel the contract at any time by ceasing to pay. To dissolve all Life Insurance Contracts at the outbreak of war would cause hardship to the Assured, even if the surrender value were paid. On the other hand, to regard the contract as merely suspended during the war would be unfair to the Company, since the Company would have no power to compel all the policy holders to revive their policies, while those whose health had deteriorated would almost certainly wish to revive theirs, thus leaving the Company ultimately with a deteriorated body of enemy policy-holders on its books.

90. After considering the suggestions laid before us by the Companies we make the following recommendations:—

1. Contracts of Life Insurance (including contracts for endowment insurances, annuities, &c.) should not be deemed to be dissolved by the outbreak of war, and any payments which have during the war become due thereunder should be recoverable after the war.
2. If a policy has lapsed owing to non-payment of premiums during the war, or has become void in consequence of the breach of any of the express conditions of the contract, the Assured should have the right to receive from the Insurer, as at the date of lapse or avoidance, the surrender value of the policy at that date. The Assured's claim should be presented within 12 months after the termination of the war.
3. In the case of lapsed or voided policies, it should be legal for an Insurer, if he so desires, to give to the Assured more favourable terms than those defined in (2). The Insurer should, for instance, be at liberty to pay a claim arising on a lapsed policy, subject to deduction of unpaid premiums and to allow the revival of a lapsed policy on payment of overdue premiums.

The Companies desire not to be debarred from admitting a claim which has arisen under the conditions of a contract, upon a death which has occurred since the beginning of the war, even when the death has been due directly or indirectly to taking up arms against the Allies. It is doubtful whether the existing law allows the admission of such claims, and, if it is decided to meet the wish of the Companies in this respect, the point should be expressly dealt with in the legislation which will be necessary. The Companies hold that the payment of such claims would be advantageous to their credit, and we see no sufficient reason for not meeting their wishes. The considerations which apply in similar circumstances to Marine Insurances appear to us not to apply, or at any rate not to have nearly the same force, in the case of Life Insurance.

Life Assurance Contracts of British Companies issued in Enemy Countries.

91. The Contracts issued in enemy countries are governed by the law of the country in which the business is done, and in most cases the Companies have been required, as a condition of doing business, to make deposits sufficient to cover their liabilities. It may be assumed that these contracts remain in force, and that if the Assured has wished to maintain the Insurance he has continued to pay his premiums. It is probable also that claims arising during the war have been met from the funds at the disposal of the local branches of the Companies, the business having generally been carried on under Government control and supervision.

It appears, therefore, that no special agreements or provisions are required for dealing with the validity of these contracts, or for the case of lapsed policies.

There are, however, certain special points on which we have received representations from the Companies concerned.

(a) Alteration of Conditions of Policies.

92. The Companies have reason to believe that in Hungary legislation has been passed modifying the conditions embodied in the policies, to the benefit of the Assured and to the detriment, consequently, of the general body of policy-holders elsewhere.

We think that the Companies should be protected against the effect of such legislation, and should be liable only for claims arising under the terms of their contracts.

93. It is stated also that in Turkey legislation has been passed which would nullify the condition, included in policies issued there, that questions arising upon the policies would be subject to the jurisdiction of the Consular Courts.

This is a question which will probably arise in its general application, and not only with reference to Insurance contracts. The question of Consular jurisdiction will, no doubt, be one of the matters to be dealt with in the settlement with Turkey.

(b) Inequitable Judgments.

94. Certain judgments have been given by the Courts in enemy countries which are held by the Companies to be inequitable. If an agreement is arrived at as to the treatment of Insurance questions in general any judgments which are at variance with such agreement should be rectified. If no such agreement is arrived at the Companies should at least have protection against the effects of judgments which are shown to be clearly inequitable. In the absence of full information as to the action of the Courts, we refrain from examining particular judgments from this point of view.

(c) Deposits in Enemy Countries.

95. In Germany and Austria-Hungary, Companies doing Insurance business are required to maintain deposits invested in specified securities, generally speaking Government securities, or securities guaranteed by the Government. In Austria the deposits must be not less than the full actuarial liability on the policies in force. In some cases these obligations have been imposed on a Company after it had begun to do business in the country in question.

The Companies represent that they will suffer from severe depreciation in investments which were not of their own selection, but which were imposed upon them by the Government; and, in particular, that they are exposed to the risk of default on the part of the Government.

Several of the Companies concerned have suggested that the whole of their business in the enemy country, and the assets held there in respect of it, should be handed over to the enemy Government as at the outbreak of war, or at the last balance-date before that time, on a fair transfer basis. The Government would thus receive assets sufficient to meet all liabilities before the war, and any subsequent deterioration in the assets in consequence of the war would be borne by the Government.

We cannot support this suggestion. We understand that the policies issued in enemy countries were expressly secured upon the whole assets of the issuing Company and not only upon the assets in the country where they were issued. To limit the liability to the latter, in the manner now proposed, would be an alteration of the contract to the benefit of the Company and to the detriment of the Assured. It would protect the Company, in respect of this particular business, against depreciation of investments, although such depreciation is not confined to the securities of the country concerned, but is general and extends to all securities with fixed rates of interest, though it varies in amount according to the circumstances. Such a proposal would, in the opinion of other British Insurance Companies, and also in our opinion, be gravely injurious to the reputation of British Insurance.

96. It is represented that by imposing the obligation to invest in certain securities, and particularly in its own securities, the Foreign Government has become a third party to the contract between the Insurer and the Assured, and that this creates a special position, giving the Company a right to protection. The Company, however, consented to do, or to continue business on these conditions, and the intervention of the Government does not make it a party to the insurance contract or give the Insurer a right to protection against general depreciation of securities. If there is actual default on the part of the Government, the case is somewhat stronger. It has been suggested by one Company that in the event of any default in payment of interest or capital of Austro-Hungarian securities held by the Company, the Company should be proportionately relieved of its liabilities in the country in question. We think, however, that it would be detrimental to the reputation of British Insurance Companies to arrange that, although the insuring company is solvent, the Assured should suffer from the insolvency of their own Government. 253

97. The same Company also desires to be protected against any "sudden demand" by the enemy Government at the close of the war that the funds invested in the "enemy country—actuarially sufficient before the war to meet every claim, but heavily depreciated in consequence of the enemy Government entering into the war—should be added to by new money or new securities in order to make good that depreciation." It appears to us that, provided the general funds of the Company remain liable for its obligations in the enemy country, it should certainly be allowed a reasonable period for complying with any legal requirements as regards the amount of its deposits.

(d) Recommendations of the Paris Conference.

98. In the Resolutions of the Conference on insurance matters held at Paris in October 1917, two other questions are dealt with in connection with Life Insurance.

(i) It appears that under French law, and probably under the law of other Continental countries, the Insurer remains responsible, even though the Assured has ceased to pay his premiums, until special notice of termination of the contract has been sent to the Assured. We agree with the recommendation of the Conference that where an Insurer has thus remained responsible for the risk during the war, he should be given the right of recovering the unpaid premiums.

(ii) Inhabitants of occupied territories, who were insured with an enemy Company may have been placed in such a position that it was impossible for them to pay their premiums. We agree with the recommendation that in such cases the Assured should have the right to require the enemy Insurer to continue the contract, subject to the payment, immediate or deferred, of premiums in arrear.

Marine Insurance.

99. Contracts of Marine Insurance (whether of a ship or of cargo) may be either Time policies, i.e., insurances for a fixed period, which in this country may not (except in certain special cases) exceed one year, or Voyage policies covering a specified voyage or voyages. The risk is accepted when the underwriter signifies his acceptance, usually by initialling the slip presented to him by the broker; but the risk does not attach until the period commences or, in the case of a Voyage policy, till the voyage is begun, and the insurance does not take effect till that moment arrives.

100. We accept the views put forward by the representatives of the Marine Insurance Companies from whom we have received evidence, and accordingly we recommend (a) that if a risk had been accepted and had attached before the war, the contract should not be dissolved, and the underwriter should pay for a loss covered by the insurance, even if the loss occurred after the outbreak of war, and irrespective of whether the premium had actually been paid; (b) that where the risk had not attached at the time of the outbreak of war the contract should be deemed to have been dissolved at that date. In most such cases the premium will not have been paid. If it had been paid it should be returned.

The acceptance of the above principles should be subject to reciprocity, but the obligation to pay losses occurring after the beginning of the war cannot in our opinion include cases where the loss was due to belligerent action by the forces of the insurer's country or by those of its Allies. As already stated, it has long been settled law in this country that a British insurer is prohibited from insuring against such losses.

101. In some cases, especially in France, persons who had insured marine risks with an underwriter who became an enemy effected a fresh insurance of the same risk, in whole or in part. We agree with the recommendation of the Paris Conference that such new insurance should be regarded as having been substituted for the original insurance, and that there should be a settlement of premiums in proportion to the period remaining to run at the time of substitution.

Miscellaneous (Accident, Employer's Liability, Fidelity, &c.).

102. We have not taken special evidence on the miscellaneous classes of Insurance, which are not important from the International point of view. It appears to us that direct contracts existing at the beginning of the war should remain valid, and that any reinsurances should be treated in the same manner as reinsurances of Fire risks.

B. Contracts and Treaties of Reinsurance.

103. There can be no doubt that a treaty of reinsurance between a British Company and an Enemy Company is, by our Law, dissolved at the outbreak of war, since for its execution it certainly requires intercourse between the parties.

The Insurance Companies, whatever the class of business with which they deal, do not desire any modification of this principle, but there are certain differences in their views as to the treatment of reinsurances of particular risks which were in force at the beginning of the war.

104. In the case of Fire Insurance, the question presents no difficulties. All reinsurance contracts should be cancelled at the outbreak of war, a balance being struck between the parties at that date, and premiums being apportioned accordingly.

105. In Life Insurance, reinsurance operations between British and Enemy Companies are rare, and negligible in amount. We agree with the recommendation of the Paris Conference that reinsurances of life policies, current at the outbreak of war, should remain valid.

106. In Marine Insurance (the other class of insurance where reinsurance is largely practised) the matter is less simple. There would, for instance, be great difficulty in apportioning the premium for an insurance on a voyage which began before and terminated after the outbreak of war. The principle should, in our opinion, be the same, viz., that all pre-war reinsurance treaties concluded with enemies should be dissolved at the beginning of the war. This principle should, however, be applied in the sense that no more transactions under the treaty should take place after the beginning of the war, but that where the cession of a risk had become effective, either specifically or generally, under the terms of the treaty, and the risk had attached before the beginning of the war, the contract with regard to that risk should remain valid even though the period of time or the voyage, as the case may be, extended beyond the beginning of the war.

107. As in the case of direct contracts, cases have arisen, especially in France, where an Underwriter has reinsured afresh, in whole or in part, a Marine risk originally ceded to a reinsurer who has become an enemy. We agree with the recommendation that such reinsurance should be considered as having been substituted for the original reinsurance, with adjustment of premiums in proportion to the period remaining to run at the date of this substitution.

108. The Paris Conference points out that Companies operating in occupied territory may have been made unable to effect fresh reinsurances of risks of various kinds reinsured with enemy Companies. We agree with the recommendation that in such cases the original reinsurance should stand.

C. General.

109. There remain certain points which apply to some extent to all classes of Insurance.

(a) Property.

Many Insurance Companies had property in enemy countries—either real property, or balances at banks or elsewhere, or securities deposited in conformity with legal requirements or for other purposes in connection with their business. They desire to have full information as to dealings with their property and protection against unfair treatment.

Their position is similar to that of other owners of property in enemy countries and their interests are of considerable magnitude. All protection which can be given in other cases should be extended to them.

(b) Inequitable Treatment.

110. We have made certain recommendations with regard to Life Assurance contracts issued in enemy countries, which, though arising specially with regard to those contracts, may have a more general application. We recommend, therefore, that—

(a) Allied Insurers and Insured in all classes of insurance should be protected against any modification of the conditions of their contracts effected by legislative or administrative action in enemy countries.

(b) Any decision of an enemy Court which violates the just rights of Allied Insurers or Insured ought to be subject to revision.

(c) Interest.

111. If it is decided that all debts, the payment of which has been deferred owing to the war, are to bear interest (see paragraph 45 of this Report) the Decision would naturally apply to payments of premiums or claims which fell due during the war and are paid after the war, although it is not the ordinary practice to allow interest on claims the payment of which is delayed.

There will, however, be difficulty in determining the date from which interest on claims should run. Life and Fire Insurance Claims are usually paid promptly, but in Marine Insurance, a long period (sometimes years) may elapse before the claim is finally established. If interest is to be paid it is necessary to find some rule of simple application, and we suggest that it should begin to run one year after the date of the casualty. In the case of Marine casualties it may be necessary in some cases to fix an estimated or an average date.

(iii) CLOSURE OF CONTRACTS UNDER THE REGULATIONS OF A RECOGNISED EXCHANGE.

112. At the outbreak of war contracts were running between members of organisations such as the Stock Exchange, the Metal Exchange, &c., and persons in Enemy Countries. These contracts were of various kinds, a feature common to many of them being that they are carried on from account to account, with a settlement of differences at each account. For instance, a cotton "future" contract gives the buyer the right to call for delivery of cotton in a specified month at a specified price, and in the intervening period a weekly cash settlement takes place between buyer and seller according as prices advance or recede. In the case of the Stock Exchange, transactions of various kinds were frequently carried on from account to account, with a settlement at each account.

113. There was considerable uncertainty at first as to the effect of war on such contracts with enemies. It is probable in the light of the decisions which have since been given by the Courts, that all such contracts were dissolved at the outbreak of war. This, however, was not clear at the time, and the Exchanges concerned made regulations as to the manner in which such current contracts should be closed, the regulations assuming, in some cases, that the contracts were not dissolved by English law.

It will be convenient to state briefly the most important regulations of this kind which have been brought to our notice.

114. Cotton "Futures."—The Liverpool Cotton Association decided that all "future" contracts with Enemies should be closed as on 31st July, 1914. This action was confirmed by the Cotton Association (Emergency Action) Act, 1915, and it is desirable that it should be made binding upon the enemy parties by agreement included in the Treaty of Peace.

115. Cotton Shipment Contracts (known as "c.i.f. and 6 per cent. contracts").—These contracts provide for shipments of cotton, in some cases at distant dates, extending even as far as 1920, and are not subject to periodical settlements of differences. The Association made no compulsory regulation, but advised that a settlement should be made, by arbitration if necessary, when the date for shipment came round.

There is, we think, no doubt that under the existing law any such contracts relating to shipment of cotton during the war were in fact dissolved at the outbreak of war. The Association desire that their action should be confirmed on the ground that its results would be more equitable, as between different firms, than the results of dissolving the contract as at the beginning of the war.

We see difficulty in confirming action which was not in conformity with the law as now declared and which was not obligatory but merely advisory. We think that these contracts should be treated in the same way as contracts in general.

116. The Stock Exchange made various emergency Rules and Regulations; but these will not, as a rule have applied to contracts with enemies, since such contracts were closed, either on the initiative of the member of the Stock Exchange who was a party to it or in accordance with the Committee's Notice of November 12th, 1914, which informed members that they were entitled to close transactions with enemies by sale or purchase as the case may be.

We recommend that action taken in conformity with this circular, whether before or after its issue, should be confirmed.

117. We do not enter into detail with regard to the Metal or other Exchanges; but we recommend generally that where an Exchange or Commercial Association is of such standing that contracts are habitually made under its rules and it has made special regulations dealing with pre-war contracts, such regulations should be confirmed unless it can be shown that they are unreasonable.

The same principle would apply as regards Exchanges and Commercial Associations in Enemy countries.

(iv) CONTRACTS RELATING TO PATENTS, DESIGNS, TRADE-MARKS AND COPYRIGHTS.

118. Contracts relating to Patents, Designs, Trade-marks and Copyrights, should, we think, be treated in the way we have suggested above for contracts which cannot be dissolved without forfeiting or cancelling rights of property, the title to a Patent, Design, Trade-mark or Copyright being regarded for this purpose as being analogous to a right of property.

It follows that a licence for the use of a Patent, Design or Copyright would be treated in the same manner as a lease of property; but if a licence has been granted to the same person by the Government under War Legislation it must be regarded as superseding the original licence.

119. We desire to record our appreciation of the excellent work performed by our Secretary, Mr. Mead Taylor, and of the valuable assistance which he has given us in the course of our enquiry.

VI.—SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS.

CLEARING SCHEME FOR SETTLEMENT OF PRE-WAR DEBTS.

1. By agreement between the belligerent Governments, embodied in the Treaty of Peace, an arrangement should be made for the settlement by the intervention of the Governments of all indebtedness arising out of commercial, banking and financial transactions which were not completed owing to the outbreak of war. The principle of such a scheme would be that each Government would be responsible for collecting the sums ascertained to be due from its own nationals, and would pay the sums ascertained to be due to its nationals, the balance being settled between Governments. [§ 2 (1).]

2. All settlements of such indebtedness otherwise than through the agency provided by the Governments should be prohibited. [§ 2(2).]

3. Existing prohibitions of payments to enemies and of the restoration of enemy property should be maintained until a satisfactory arrangement has been concluded, including adequate assurance in the form of tangible security or otherwise for its execution. [§ 2 (3)].

4. The scheme to be adopted should apply to the British Empire as a whole, and should, if possible, be concerted with our Allies. [§ 2(4).]

5. Immediate steps should be taken to consult the Dominions, India and other parts of the British Empire. As soon as practicable communications should be entered into with the Allied Governments with a view to common action. [§ 4.]

SCOPE OF THE CLEARING SCHEME.

6. Persons.—The scheme should apply primarily to persons of British nationality resident or carrying on business in the British Empire, and to British subjects resident or carrying on business in a place which is not British territory who are amenable to ex-territorial law administered by British Consular or other special Courts. [§ 7, 9.]

It might apply to Allied subjects resident or carrying on business in British territory; but, preferably, in such cases the British Clearing Office should act as agent of the Allied Clearing Offices. The scheme should not include neutral or enemy subjects in British territory. [§ 10, 12, 13.]

On the enemy side the definition of the persons to be included in the scheme should be similar to that to be adopted in this country. [§ 14.]

7. Territory.—The British Empire should take part in the scheme as a single whole. It is desirable that all the Allied countries should take part, not jointly, but severally. [§ 15.]

On the enemy side the scheme should apply to the enemy countries severally. [§ 16.]

In the case of Turkey it is suggested that the execution of the scheme might be placed under the control of the Council of Administration of the Ottoman Public Debt. [§ 16.]

British Protectorates generally should be included, as forming part of the British Empire; but the cases of Egypt and Cyprus require special consideration. [§ 17.]

Occupied territory which, after the war, is restored to its former status should for the purposes of the scheme be regarded as having its proper attribution. Territory which at the end of the war is annexed or transferred or made independent should be excluded from the scheme. [§ 18, 19.]

8. Debts.—The debts coming within the scope of the scheme would be primarily debts due or accruing due before the outbreak of war from a person coming within the scheme in the one country to a person coming within the scheme in the other; and debts which have become due during the war as the result of transactions or contracts entered into before the war. [§ 20.]

9. Claims against Governments in respect of requisitions, sequestrations, &c., should not be included in the scheme for the purpose of determining the amounts due; but when the amount has been ascertained the Clearing system should be employed for the actual settlement. The same applies to sums which have passed into the hands of Custodians for account of enemies. [§ 21.]

Claims against Governments in respect of wrongful acts are outside the scheme. [§ 21.]

The responsibility of the Government should extend to all the above-mentioned debts, including those which were doubtful before the war, if there had not been any formal indication of insolvency of the debtor before the war and if the debt had not at the outbreak of war been barred by a statute of limitations or a period of prescription [§ 23.]

ORGANISATION OF THE CLEARING SCHEME.

10. Operations after the War.—A "Clearing Office" under Government control should be created in each country taking part in the scheme. The procedure is indicated by which a claim would be communicated by the creditor to his Clearing Office, and presented to the debtor, who will admit or dispute it, in whole or in part. [§ 24, 25, 26.]

In all cases of difference the Clearing Offices, acting in communication with the parties, will endeavour to bring about a settlement. [§ 27.]

A claim may also be disputed by the Clearing Office on various grounds. [§ 28.]

11. Unsettled differences will be referred to an Appeal Tribunal, a joint body with an impartial president. Recommendations are made for facilitating the proceedings before this Tribunal. The decision of the Tribunal will be final. [§ 30.]

If a claim is decided to be outside the scheme, the creditor may prosecute it in any other way open to him. [§ 32.]

The creditor will have the option of taking his claim to the Courts instead of to the Appeal Tribunal. The parties may also agree to arbitration. In either case the decision will be accepted as determining the amount of the debt for settlement through the Clearing Office. [§ 32.]

12. As soon as the amount of a debt has been determined, by admission, or by a binding decision, the debtor's Clearing Office will credit the creditor's Clearing Office with the amount, and the latter will pay the creditor the amount due, with the interest (see below, No. 17), after deducting any sums due for commission and fees. [§ 33.]

The Clearing Office in the debtor's country will collect the amount due from him. Powers for enforcing payment through the Courts must be given to the Clearing Office by legislation. [§ 29.]

13. A Clearing Office should be created in each Dominion and in India and in individual Colonies or groups of Colonies as might be found expedient. [§ 34.]

These Clearing Offices should be at liberty to communicate direct with Enemy Clearing Offices as regards the amounts due; but settlement as between Governments should take place through the central British Clearing Office. The joint Appeal Tribunal should be common to the British Empire. [§ 34.]

14. The balance in the current account between the Clearing Offices should bear interest at 5 per cent. per annum. [§ 34.]

A commission should be charged on all payments made to persons claiming through the British Clearing Office, in order to meet (1) the working expenses of the scheme: (2) losses caused by failure to collect debts for which, under the scheme, the Government is responsible. A commission of 2½ per cent. will probably be sufficient for these purposes. A further fee should be charged where reference is made to the Appeal Tribunal. [§ 36.]

In order to discourage delay certain penalties are provided. [§ 37.]

15. Steps to be taken during the war.—For the reasons stated no steps should be taken during the war for the general collection of debts due to enemies, or for a distribution to creditors; but debtors should be at liberty to pay their debts to the custodians, and should be free of any claim to interest for any period subsequent to such payment. [§ 39, 40.]

16. Legislation.—Legislation will be necessary to carry out the scheme; but it is premature to examine the form of this legislation in detail. [§ 41.]

QUESTIONS AFFECTING THE VALIDITY OR AMOUNT OF DEBT.

INTEREST.

17. It should be our policy to secure an agreement with the enemy countries that all debts, the payment of which has been suspended owing to the war, should bear simple interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from the beginning of the war, or from the date at which the debt fell due (if later than the beginning of the war), except in cases where by contract or by law or by custom having the force of law, the debt bore interest at some other rate. In these cases the contractual legal or customary rate should continue to have effect during the suspension of payment. [§ 45.]

Interest should not be payable on sums due by way of dividends, interest or share of profits, or other periodical payments of a similar character. [§ 47.]

18. Recommendations are made regarding the special case of the Accepting Houses. [§ 50, 51, 52.]

If no general measure is adopted requiring the payment of interest, debts arising on acceptances should be specially dealt with and every effort should be made to obtain an agreement for the payment of interest on such debts at Bank of England rate or in any case at a rate of not less than 5 per cent. per annum. [§ 52.]

EXCHANGE.

19. All settlements of indebtedness should be upon a gold basis. An agreement to that effect should not apply retrospectively to debts which have been settled during the war except in cases where payments at a provisional rate of exchange have been made out of assets vested under the Trading with the Enemy Acts. In such cases an adjustment should be made in conformity with the rate agreed for post-war settlement. [§ 55, 57.]

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

20. It should be our policy to include in the Treaty of Peace agreements on the following points, such agreements to be enforced where necessary by domestic legislation in each country:—

Validity after the War.—If there are doubts in any country as to the validity, after the war, of negotiable instruments made before the war these doubts should be removed. [§ 59.]

21. Non-Presentment, &c.—Delay in presentment for acceptance or payment, notice of dishonour to drawers and endorsers, and protest should be excused where such delay is caused by the war, and not by the default, misconduct or negligence of the holder, and presentment, notice and protest within a specified period after the restoration of peace should have the same effect as presentment, &c., at the proper date. [§ 63.]

Neutral countries should be induced to adhere to a similar agreement. [§ 63.]

22. Debtors for Acceptance Credits.—Where a bill was accepted before the war under a credit granted to a client who became an enemy, any doubt as to the client's liability after the war should be removed. [§ 64.]

23. Acceptances given during the War under Confirmed Credits given on behalf of Enemy Clients before the War.—For the purposes of the contract between the Acceptor and the enemy client, the confirmation of the credit before the war should be deemed equivalent to the acceptance of the bill. [§ 65.]

24. Periods of Prescription.—As between enemies the period of the war should be excluded in calculating any period of prescription. Legislation providing for this should apply not only to bills of exchange but to all debts and pecuniary obligations similarly affected. [§ 66.]

25. Sale of Security.—The outbreak of war should be held to have conferred on a creditor holding security from an enemy, if he is unable to obtain payment of his debt when due, the right but not the obligation to sell the security without notice to the debtor, and there should be no claim on the part of the debtor on the ground that the price realised was insufficient, if the sale has been effected with reasonable care and skill. [§ 68.]

Legislation giving effect to the above recommendation should be passed in this country even if no agreement on the subject is reached. [§ 68.]

CONTRACTS.

26. It is necessary to include in the Treaty of Peace provisions as to what should be the effect of the war on pre-war contracts between enemies, such provisions to be enforced where necessary by domestic legislation in each country. [§ 73.]

27. All debts of every sort and other direct pecuniary obligations arising from a pre-war contract (for instance from a negotiable instrument) should remain in force and should be duly discharged when peace is restored. [§ 74.]

A contract should not be deemed to be dissolved merely by the fact that one of the parties to the contract becomes an enemy, if the effect of this dissolution would be to forfeit or cancel a right of property. [§ 75.]

With the above exceptions (and apart from certain special classes of contracts mentioned below) every pre-war contract between parties who have become enemies should be regarded as dissolved on the outbreak of war, without prejudice to the enforcement of any rights or obligations which arise from the part performance of the contract before the war began. This would mean that the contracts most usual in commercial transactions (contracts for sale and purchase of goods where the property had not passed, contracts of agency, affreightment, &c.) would all be dissolved. [§ 76.]

28. In the case of pre-war contracts of a mixed character containing some provisions conferring or defining rights of property, and other provisions creating obligations of the kind which, under these recommendations, would be dissolved, it is proposed :—

- (a) Where the two parts of the contract are separable, the provisions of the latter kind should be dissolved, while those of the former kind should remain valid.
- (b) Where the two parts of the contract are inseparable, the whole would be dissolved. [§ 77.]

INSURANCE AND REINSURANCE CONTRACTS.

29. In principle, but subject to the special recommendations which follow :—

- (a) Direct contracts of insurance should remain valid.
- (b) Contracts and treaties of reinsurance should be deemed to have been dissolved as at the beginning of the war. [§ 82.]

It should be our object to include in the Treaty of Peace provisions to the following effect, to be enforced, if necessary, by legislation or by administrative action, in each country :—

DIRECT CONTRACTS OF INSURANCE.

30. Fire Insurance.

- (1) Direct Fire Insurance contracts should not be deemed to have been dissolved at the outbreak of war.
- (2) Where, by administrative or legislative action, an insurance effected before the war has been transferred during the war to another Company, the transfer should stand good. The liability of the original insurer will have ceased at the date of transfer, but the original insurer should be entitled to receive full information as to the terms of transfer, and to have these terms amended if they are not equitable. [§ 87.]

31. Life Insurance.

1. Contracts of Life Insurance (including contracts for endowment insurances, annuities, &c.) will not be deemed to have been dissolved by the outbreak of war. Any payments which have during the war become due thereunder should be recoverable after the war. [§ 90 (1).]
2. If a policy has lapsed owing to non-payment of premiums during the war, or has become void in consequence of the breach of any of the express conditions of the contract, the Assured will have the right to receive from the Insurer, as at the date of lapse or avoidance, the surrender value of the policy at that date. The Assured's claim should be presented within 12 months after the termination of the war. [§ 90 (2).]
3. In the case of lapsed or voided policies, it shall be legal for an insurer, if he so desires, to give to the assured more favourable terms than those defined in (2). The insurer should, for instance, be at liberty to pay a claim arising on a lapsed policy, subject to deduction of unpaid premiums, or to allow the revival of a lapsed policy on payment of overdue premiums. [§ 90 (3).]

If this liberty extends, as the Companies desire, to the payment of a claim on a death due to taking up arms against the Allies, such payments should be expressly legalised. [§ 90.]

If the insurer has remained responsible, even though the assured has ceased to pay his premiums, he should be given the right of recovering the unpaid premiums. [§ 98 (i).]

Inhabitants of occupied territories, who were insured with an enemy company and have been placed in such a position that it was impossible for them to pay their premiums, should have the right to require the enemy insurer to continue the contract, subject to the payment, immediate or deferred of premiums in arrear. [§ 98 (ii).]

32. Life Assurance Contracts of British Companies Issued in Enemy Countries.—Insurance Companies should be protected against the effect of enemy legislation which may have been passed modifying the conditions embodied in the policies. [§ 92.]

Inequitable Judgments.—If an agreement is arrived at as to the treatment of insurance questions in general, any judgments at variance with such agreement should be rectified. Insurance Companies should at least have protection against the effects of judgments which are shown to be clearly inequitable. [§ 94.]

Deposits in Enemy Countries.—In the event of Insurance Companies having deposits abroad being required by enemy Governments to increase such deposits, a reasonable period for complying with any legal requirements should be assured to them. [§ 97.]

33. Marine Insurance.

If a risk had been accepted and had attached before the war, the contract of insurance should not be deemed to have been dissolved, and the underwriter should pay a loss covered by the insurance, even if the loss occurred after the outbreak of war, and irrespective of whether the premium had actually been paid. If the risk had not attached at the time of the outbreak of war the contract should be deemed to have been dissolved at that date, with return of the premium, if it had been paid. [§ 100.]

The obligation to pay losses arising after the beginning of the war should not include cases where the loss was due to belligerent action by British or Allied Forces. [§ 100.]

Where a person who had insured marine risks with an insurer who became an enemy, effected a fresh insurance of the same risk, in whole or in part, such fresh insurance should be regarded as having been substituted for the original insurance, and there should be a settlement of premiums in proportion to the period remaining to run at the time of substitution. [§ 101.]

34. Miscellaneous (Accident, Employer's Liability, Fidelity, &c.).—Direct contracts existing at the beginning of the war should remain valid, and any reinsurances should be treated in the same manner as reinsurances of fire risks. [§ 102.]

REINSURANCE.

35. Reinsurance Treaties of all kinds between a British Company and an enemy Company should be regarded as dissolved at the outbreak of war in accordance with our law. [§ 103.]

36. Fire Insurance.—Reinsurances of fire risks should be deemed to have been cancelled as at the outbreak of war, premiums being apportioned accordingly. [§ 104.]

37. Life Insurance.—Reinsurances of life policies, current at the outbreak of war, should remain valid. [§ 105.]

38. Marine Insurance.—Where the cession of a risk had become effective, either specifically or under the terms of a treaty, and that risk had attached before the beginning of the war, the contract with regard to that risk should remain valid, even though the period of time or the voyage extended beyond the beginning of the war. [§ 106.]

Where an underwriter has reinsured afresh, in whole or in part, a marine risk originally ceded to a reinsurer who has become an enemy, such fresh reinsurance should be considered as having been substituted for the original reinsurance, with adjustment of premiums in proportion to the period remaining to run at the date of his substitution. [§ 107.]

39. Where companies operating in occupied territory have been unable to effect fresh reinsurances of various kinds of risks reinsured with enemy companies the original reinsurance should stand. [§ 108.]

GENERAL.

40. Property.—Insurance Companies have large property in enemy countries. All protection which can be given in other cases should be extended to them. [§ 109.]

41. Inequitable Treatment.—Allied insurers and insured in all classes of insurance should be protected against any modification of the conditions of their contracts effected by legislative or administrative action in enemy countries. [§ 110 (a).]

Any decision of an enemy Court which violates the just rights of Allied insurers or insured ought to be subject to revision. [§ 110 (b).]

42. Interest.—If it is decided that all debts, the payment of which has been deferred owing to the war, are to bear interest the decision should apply to payments of premiums or claims which fell due during the war and are paid after the war, and as it is not the ordinary practice to allow interest on claims the payment of which is delayed, it is proposed (as affecting the special case of insurance) that interest should begin to run one year after the date of the casualty. It may be necessary in the case of marine casualties to fix in some cases an estimated or an average date. [§ 111.]

CLOSURE OF CONTRACTS UNDER THE REGULATIONS OF A RECOGNISED EXCHANGE.

43. Where an Exchange or Commercial Association is of such standing that contracts are habitually made under its rules, and it has made special regulations dealing with pre-war contracts, such regulations should be confirmed, unless it can be shown that they are unreasonable. [§ 117.]

The action of the Liverpool Cotton Association with regard to cotton "future" contracts, which has been confirmed by legislation, should, by agreement, be made binding upon the enemy parties to the contracts. [§ 114.]

44. As contracts for cotton shipments known as "c.i.f. and 6 per cent. contracts" were in fact dissolved at the outbreak of war, it is not recommended that the regulations relating to them (which were not compulsory), made by the Liverpool Cotton Association, should be confirmed. [§ 115.]

45. Action taken in accordance with the notice of the Committee of the London Stock Exchange of November 12th, 1914, which informed members that they were entitled to close transactions with enemies by sale or purchase should be confirmed. [§ 116.]

CONTRACTS RELATING TO PATENTS, &c.

46. For the purpose of applying the proposed rules concerning Contracts, Patents, Designs, Trade-marks and Copyrights should be regarded as property; but a pre-war licence for the use of a patent, design or copyright must be regarded as superseded by a Government licence granted under war legislation to the same person. THE CONFERENCE of Allied Delegates, having been requested by the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, President of the Comité Permanent International d'Action Economique, to consider the course to be followed in regard to Insurance and Reinsurance Contracts entered into with enemies before the war:

I.

CONSIDERING that it would be prejudicial to the interests of the insured in every branch of insurance to declare their contracts cancelled, seeing that they may have found it impossible to insure afresh on the same conditions, more especially as regards Life insurance: that the position is not the same with regard to reinsurance (except in the case of undertakings situated in invaded territory, which had no possibility of effecting new reinsurances at the appropriate time), and that it is important in this matter finally to release Allied companies from their engagements with enemies:

RECOMMENDS AS FOLLOWS:—

1st. With regard to Insurance contracts:—

It is desirable not to pronounce the cancellation of contracts of insurance which were entered into before the war with the Enemy and which had become effective by the fact that the risk had begun to run before the war. It is consequently desirable that the Allied Governments should take all necessary steps with this object.

With regard, however, to Marine Insurance, if, on account of the uncertainty of the position, an assured whose underwriter has become an Enemy has taken out a new insurance covering in whole or in part the risk covered by the original contract, this new insurance ought to be considered as having been substituted in place of the former, with an adjustment of premiums in proportion to the unexpired period after the date of this substitution.

In regard to Life insurance, those companies which have continued during the war to cover the risk for the benefit of Enemy insured ought to be enabled to claim from the latter, if necessary by judicial process, the amount of the premiums unpaid during this period. Where an insured, on account of the war, has not fulfilled the conditions of his policy, more especially if he has not paid his premiums, and if he has thus lost all right to claim under his policies, he ought nevertheless to have the right to claim from his insurer after the war the surrender value of his policy as at the date of lapse, the insurer having at the same time the option of allowing to the insured more favourable conditions according to the circumstances.

Those insured, who, on account of the invasion of their country, have been unavoidably prevented from paying their premiums, ought to be able to claim from their Enemy insurer the revival of their contracts on payment, either immediate or deferred, of the premiums.

2nd. As regards Reinsurances:—

It is desirable on the contrary to pronounce the cancellation of treaties, policies, or other contracts of reinsurance governed by the laws of an Allied or Enemy country, as from the respective dates of the declarations of war, with a reciprocal adjustment of accounts, this cancellation being subject to the reservation set forth in the initial paragraph with reference to invaded territory.

Reinsurances, however, in force at the respective dates of the declarations of war, whether effected in pursuance of treaties or by policies or other contracts, should be governed by the following rules:—

In the Life branch reinsurances will be maintained in force until the extinction of the reinsured policies.

In the Marine branch every cession which became effective before the war, whether in pursuance of a treaty or otherwise, should be maintained in force if the risk reinsured had commenced to run before the war.

Following what has been said with regard to direct insurances, if, on account of the uncertainty of the position, an insurer has reinsured afresh, in whole or in part, a risk originally ceded to a reinsurer who has become an Enemy, such fresh reinsurance should be considered as having been substituted in place of the original reinsurance, with adjustment of premiums in proportion to the unexpired period after the date of this substitution.

In the Fire branch, reinsurances in force will cease completely as from the respective dates of the declarations of war, subject to pro rata return of premiums and immediate withdrawal of the portfolios.

II.

THE CONFERENCE, considering further that it is desirable in the common interest of insurers and insured of Allied nationalities, having regard especially to the importance of the deposits or guarantees which have been lodged in Enemy countries, and also with the object of remedying the deficiencies of the law at present in force, to set forth at this juncture the general rules which, together with the recommendations above recorded, ought to be provided for in the treaty of peace or in a supplementary agreement attached thereto, and put in force in each of the belligerent countries, Allied or Enemy, by legal enactment or by decree:

EXPRESSES THE FOLLOWING VIEWS:—

1st. If by administrative or legislative action or under pressure of necessity an insurance contract entered into before the war has been transferred from the original insurer to another insurer, such transfer should be upheld, and consequently the liability of the original insurer should cease as from the date of the transfer. The original insurer should have the right of claiming full information with regard to the conditions under which the transfer was effected, and if these conditions were inequitable they should be subject to revision.

2nd. Both insurers and insured should be protected against the effects of any alterations made during the war in the conditions of their policies in Enemy or invaded territories.

3rd. Any decision of an Enemy court which violates the legal or equitable rights of Allied insurers or insured should be revised.

4th. The magnitude of the material interests of Allied insurers and insured in Enemy or invaded territory should be especially brought under the attention of the several Governments, in order that these interests may receive special consideration in the terms of the treaties of peace.

ENEMY DEBTS COMMITTEE.

MEMORANDUM ON RETURNS OF DEBTS AND PROPERTY.

1. In accordance with the terms of our reference, we have considered the Returns made to the Custodians of Enemy Property, and to the Public Trustee and the Foreign Claims Office. It appears convenient to submit our observations upon these returns as a separate memorandum, since if our main Report is published it may be thought inadvisable to give publicity to the figures.

2. In order that what follows may be understood, it is necessary first to explain the nature of the returns, &c., on which the statistics are based.

DEBTS DUE TO ENEMIES AND ENEMY PROPERTY IN BRITISH TERRITORY.

(i) Returns of property, debts, &c.

Under the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Acts, 1914 (section 3 (1), (2)), and 1915 (section 2 (1), (2)), all persons resident or carrying on business in the United Kingdom (including companies) are required to make returns of:—

(a) Enemy property held or managed by them.

This includes all stocks and shares held for enemies, other than those included under (c) below.

(b) Bank balances and deposits held for enemies and all debts of 50l. and upwards due to enemies.

A return must also be made of—

(c) Enemy holdings of shares, stock, debentures, debenture stock and other obligations of British companies or companies having a share-transfer office in the United Kingdom, and of enemy capital in firms in the United Kingdom.

The Acts provide heavy penalties for failure to comply with these requirements, and it may be assumed that the returns are fairly complete.

Returns have also been called for in all parts of the British Empire, and the results have been reported in all important cases with the exception of Canada.

(ii) Property vested in the Custodians.United Kingdom.(a) Interest, &c.—All sums due to enemies in respect of interest, dividends and share of profits must be paid to the Custodian. This includes sums due from Governments, corporations, and other public bodies, as well as those due from companies and persons; and also all sums due for payment off of securities, on maturity, drawing, &c. (Trading with the Enemy Amendment Acts, 1914, section 2 (1); 1915, section 1 (1)).(b) Property.—Property may be vested in the Custodian either by the Court (Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, section 4), or by the Board of Trade (Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916, section 4). Large amounts of property have been vested by both forms of procedure, and partly converted into cash.(c) Proceeds of liquidations.—When a liquidation has been ordered by the Board of Trade any sums due to enemies, whether as surplus or otherwise, are transferred to the Custodian (Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916, section 1 (3)).

(d) Securities held by London Branches of Enemy Banks.—Large amounts of securities were, at the outbreak of war, in the custody of the London branches of the German and Austrian banks, mainly held for account of—

(a) Enemy customers free from lien.(b) Enemy customers subject to lien on the part of the London branches.(c) Head offices and branches.

Securities under (a) have been vested in the Custodian; certain securities under (b) and (c) have also been vested. Those held for head offices and branches—the ultimate beneficial owners of which are not known to the London branches although it is presumed that they are mainly enemies—will shortly be vested by the Board of Trade. To prevent the free delivery and release of these particular securities, in the event of peace being concluded before they could be vested, the Court, some months ago, made orders in respect of each bank, vesting the right, title and interest of the enemy bank to and in any such securities so held without particularising them; but such vesting was not to prejudice the sale of the securities and the collection of income thereon by the respective banks (other than the Deutsche Bank, which has discharged its liability to the Bank of England and paid or provided for the payment of its other non-enemy liabilities) to enable the funds so received to be utilised for the purpose of the licences, viz., repayment of the Bank of England advances, and, in the case of the Laenderbank, payment of its other non-enemy liabilities. The proceeds of sales and income will be available in the same way when the securities are vested by the Board of Trade. The estimated value of securities vested in the Custodian and delivered to him (excluding certain securities which possess no market quotations), or the proceeds of their sale if retained by him, are included in the cash and property stated to be in the hands of the Custodian. Securities not yet vested, or, if vested, undelivered to the Custodian, including securities held for account of head offices and branches, have been included in the returns of enemy property, but in this case also no value has yet been assigned to certain unquoted stocks.*

As will be seen from the statements below, the amount of cash now in the hands of the Custodians in the United Kingdom amounts to more than 19,000,000l. and in addition they hold property valued at about 7,500,000l.

British Dominions Overseas.

Custodians of enemy property have also been appointed in most parts of the British Empire. They hold cash to the amount of 1,936,000l. and property valued at 722,000l.

DEBTS DUE TO BRITISH SUBJECTS AND BRITISH PROPERTY IN ENEMY TERRITORY.

3. Under the Proclamation of 7th September 1916, all British subjects in the United Kingdom and outside the British Empire are required to make returns of all property in enemy territory and claims against enemy persons or enemy Governments. Similar returns have been required from British subjects in the British Dominions Overseas.

No penalty is provided for failure to make a return, and it may be taken as certain that the returns are incomplete. On the other hand, there is a natural tendency on the part of those who have made returns to place a high value upon their property and their claims; but we have no means of judging how far this tendency counterbalances the incompleteness of the returns.

Where the claims are against an enemy Government, they are lodged with the Foreign Claims Office. All other returns are made to the Public Trustee.

* The debts of the London branches of the enemy banks to the Bank of England (which exceed 4,000,000l.) have been incorporated in the returns; but the assets in this country of the London branches, including the available assets of the Deutsche Bank (a little more than 500,000l.) not required for the payment of non-enemy liabilities under the Bank's licence and deposited at the Bank of England to the order of the Treasury, are not dealt with in the returns.

(i) Returns made to Foreign Claims Office.

The returns made to the Foreign Claims Office fall into two classes:—

- (a) Claims for compensation for loss caused by wrongful acts of the enemy.
- (b) Claims in respect of property requisitioned, seized, sequestered or liquidated, or in respect of debts due from an enemy Government.

We do not deal with class (a), since claims of this character are entirely outside the terms of our reference.

The returns made under (b) have to be verified by a statutory declaration; but when the claim refers to property (such as concessions) of which the value is conjectural, it may be assumed that a high value has been stated.

(ii) Returns made to the Public Trustee.

- (a) Debts, bank balances and deposits.—In the case of debts due from enemies, sums below 50*l.* are not (as in the case of debts due to enemies) excluded from the returns.
- (b) Property in enemy countries.—In addition to securities of all kinds of which the documents of title are held in enemy countries, this class includes securities of enemy Governments, States and Municipalities, and also enemy industrial and commercial securities of all kinds, wherever the documentary evidence of title may be held. It also includes capital invested in enemy businesses; trade stocks in enemy hands; patents, copyrights and concessions; and cargoes on enemy ships.

CONSIDERATION OF THE RETURNS.

4. We have considered the returns from two points of view: (I) the amount, and the balance, of the debts and claims which would, if our proposals are adopted, pass through the Clearing Office; (II) the amount of enemy property, credits and claims which are within our control, and the amount of British property, credits and claims which are within enemy control: or, to put it in other words, the value of the pledge on each side.

(I) Debts and Claims to be settled through the Clearing Offices.

5. It will be seen from Table I that the debts, bank balances and deposits due to enemies (United Kingdom and Overseas returns together) amount to 21,509,000*l.*, while the corresponding figure for sums due to British subjects is 85,338,000*l.* The division of these sums as between the different enemy countries (in relation with the United Kingdom only) is shown in Table II, and as between different parts of the British Empire overseas (in relation with the enemy countries jointly) in Table III.

The figures contained in these tables must be taken with all reserve, and may have to be largely modified after the war, when verification becomes possible. But it is clear that the amount to be collected from enemy debtors is much larger than that to be collected from British debtors, and the disparity would be increased if the debts, bank balances and deposits in Allied countries in enemy occupation (8,812,000*l.*) were also included. It follows that the risks attending a Government guarantee are less, and the benefits greater for us than for the enemy. The situation may not, however, be the same in the case of some of the Allied countries.

We have proposed that, in addition to sums due in respect of debts, balances, &c., all cash held by the Custodians should pass through the Clearing Offices. The cash at present so held, including the overseas returns, amounts to 21,427,000*l.* In addition there is property valued at 8,365,000*l.*, part of which will be converted into cash before the end of the war, making, with the cash, a total of 29,792,000*l.* The counterpart of these sums is included in the sum of 65,792,000*l.* for claims against enemy Governments in respect of property requisitioned, property sequestered and liquidated, and debts. For the reasons already stated, the claims probably exceed considerably the sums that will be obtained in settlement; while on the other hand the cash and property in the hands of the Custodians do not represent by any means the whole of the claims that will be put forward by enemies. These two totals must therefore not be regarded as indicating the balance between the claims on both sides.

(II) The Pledge.

6. In order to arrive at some idea of the value of what we have called the pledge on each side, we must take into account property, as well as debts and claims.

It will be seen from Table I that there is no great disparity in the total value assigned to property on the two sides of the account. Including the Overseas returns, the enemy property in British territory (apart from that held by the Custodians) amounts to £104.5 millions, while British property in enemy territory amounts to £95.8 millions.

These figures cannot, however, be accepted without great reserve, for the following reasons:—

(a) A large part of the property consists of stocks and shares. Some of these have been included in the returns at their face value—which does not (except accidentally) correspond to the market value at any given time. Others have been valued at the market quotation at the time of the return, and may have changed in value since that date. Others have no market quotation, and either these have not been valued or a more or less arbitrary value has been placed upon them.

(b) The returns of property belonging to British subjects include stocks and shares, valued at 65,621,000*l.* This comprises stocks and shares amounting to 33,819,000*l.*, in respect of which the certificates or other documents of title are held in non-enemy countries. Where the securities are registered, the enemy control is complete; but it appears that about 85 per cent. are bearer securities, and since these can pass freely from hand to hand, it might be difficult for enemy Governments to apply to them any measures of retention or embargo which they were enforcing as regards enemy property in general. It is probable, however, that means might be devised by enemy Governments for discriminating against bearer securities which have been in Allied possession during the war. We, therefore, consider that these securities should not be excluded from the total.

A similar question hardly arises as regards enemy holdings of British securities, since few of such securities are to bearer; and when they are to bearer, there is generally no knowledge of where the bond or other bearer document is held, and therefore they do not appear in the returns.

(c) The returns of enemy property held in the United Kingdom (69,137,000*l.*) include all stocks, shares, &c., of which the documentary evidence is held in the United Kingdom for enemy account. Amongst these there are some enemy registered securities, over which the certificate or other documentary evidence does not give any effectual control; while even in the case of bearer securities the control is not always complete.

Property in Occupied Territory.

We have excluded from the summary—

- (a) Property of British subjects in Allied territory occupied by the enemy valued at 19,191,000*l.*, and
- (b) Property of enemies in German Colonies in British occupation at 25,000,000*l.*

Both these figures must be regarded as extremely uncertain, especially the latter.

7. The returns do not include enemy merchant ships detained in British ports, or British merchant ships detained in enemy ports at the beginning of the war. The enemy ships so detained exceeded in tonnage the British ships; but the value of the excess tonnage is not great enough to affect the balance materially. Enemy-owned British Patents, also, are not included. The number of United Kingdom patents granted to Germans largely exceeds the number of German patents granted to persons in the United Kingdom; but no estimate of their value can be framed.

8. When all allowance has been made for the uncertainty of the figures based upon the returns and for any factors omitted, it remains clear that, taking debts and property together, the value of the pledge in the hands of the enemy largely exceeds that of the pledge in British hands. This fact, if it is known to the enemy, necessarily limits the use which can be made of the pledge as a means of bringing pressure to bear on the enemy to secure proper treatment for British claims and property. If effectual pressure of this character is to be exercised, it must depend upon pledges of another character (e.g., territorial).

We have no information as to the corresponding figures for the Allied countries; and we are therefore unable to say whether the balance would be altered if they were included and a bloc made of the whole.

9. The scheme recommended in our main Report will probably be criticised on the ground that it contemplates a Government guarantee for the payment of irrecoverable debts, including even those which were doubtful before the war. The result will be that where a British debtor has failed during the war, an enemy creditor will receive his claim in full, while British creditors will have received less. We do not consider, however, that the criticism is well founded. The guarantee of such debts will be a much greater benefit to British creditors of enemies than to enemy creditors of British subjects, since a much greater volume of debts is due to the former than to the latter, and also it appears probable that the percentage of irrecoverable debts will be greater in the enemy countries. These appear to us to be sufficient reasons for adopting our recommendation, even though the result may be in some individual cases anomalous.

10. In this connection we may point out that a substantial part of the pecuniary advantage arising from the payment of debts or claims which would not otherwise be recoverable will accrue to the Exchequer in the shape of Income Tax and Excess Profits Duty.

11. We recommended in our Interim Report that the existing prohibitions of payments to enemies, and of the restoration of enemy property, should be maintained until a satisfactory arrangement for the settlement of indebtedness had been concluded.

We may point out here that it is provided by section 7 of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916, that "any restrictions imposed by Act or Proclamation on dealings with enemy property shall continue to apply to property particulars whereof are or are liable to be notified to the Custodian in pursuance of section three of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, as extended by any subsequent enactment, not only during the continuance of the present war, but thereafter until such time as they may be removed by Order in Council, and Orders in Council may be made removing all or any of those restrictions either simultaneously as respects all such property or at different times as respects different classes or items of property." This section applies both to property held and managed and to debts (see Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1915, section 2). It is also provided by section 5 of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, that money and property in the hands of the Custodians shall be dealt with after the war as may be directed by Order in Council.

It follows that the restrictions at present existing, so far as they come within the definitions of these sections, will remain after the restoration of peace, until a release is given by Order in Council.

We are not aware, however, that any prohibition of the restoration to the owner of enemy property held or managed in this country has been imposed by Statute or Proclamation. The Common Law prohibits intercourse with enemies, and consequently forbids the handing over to an enemy, during the war, of any property held for his account. But as soon as the war is over, and the owner of the property has ceased to be an enemy, the section quoted above would not apparently prevent the holder from delivering to him his property. Legislation may be required to provide against this, as the value of the property concerned is very large. If such legislation is undertaken, it might be well to provide also for the case of property in British territory owned by enemy subjects residing in British Territory, and possibly for debts under 50*l*.

The Dye-Manufacturing Industry in the United Kingdom.

MEMORANDUM BY THE BOARD OF TRADE.

(See discussion on pages 96-104 of [Cd. 9177].)

THE position of the United Kingdom at the outbreak of war in respect of the supply of dyestuffs, which are of such vital importance not only to the textile but to numerous other trades, was most unsatisfactory, for practically the whole of the world's supply of synthetic dyes was in the hands of the Germans. It is true that there were a few works in this country engaged in the manufacture of dyes, but their combined output did not amount to one-tenth of the home demand, which totalled about 18,000 tons per annum.

The manufacture of synthetic dyes is by far the most important and characteristic of the "key" industries the control of which had been gradually allowed to fall into the hands of our present enemies, and the recovery of which is essential to our economic welfare during the period of reconstruction. Unless the United Kingdom is enabled by the establishment of a dye-manufacturing industry of adequate magnitude and scope to supply immediately the War is over as large and as satisfactory a range of dyed materials as any of our competitors, it will be possible for Germany to cripple our textile industries by refusing to supply dyes, or to charge us exorbitant prices for them, or to prevent the development of our newly-established dye industry by insisting, as a condition of supplying us with dyes which we cannot possibly do without, that we shall also buy from her other dyes which we are now in a position to manufacture for ourselves. Faced with such a position we might be compelled to purchase concessions from Germany by concessions on our part in respect of raw materials over which we have control. That is to say, unless the dye-manufacturing industry can be rapidly built up so as to supply by far the greater part of the requirements of the United Kingdom and the Empire, Germany will have a very powerful economic weapon in peace negotiations, and evidence is not lacking that she places much reliance upon this particular weapon.

Action already taken by His Majesty's Government, and the present position.

From the beginning of the War the problem thus indicated has received the constant attention of His Majesty's Government, and particularly of the Board of Trade, and in March, 1915, a limited company for the manufacture of synthetic dyes was established in the form of a producing association of dye consumers, with Government financial assistance. That company, British Dyes, Limited, has made considerable progress during the three years which have since elapsed, but the company has, nevertheless, not fulfilled expectations as regards the actual production of dyes. This has been due in part to the fact that its energies were necessarily diverted to a considerable extent to the manufacture of explosives. But extensive works have been erected, and development is still proceeding, and a number of the commoner dyes have been produced on a fairly considerable scale. Meanwhile, other companies, without assistance from the Government, have made much progress.

As a result of this State action and private enterprise about 24,000 tons of dyes are now being produced by British manufacturers, but it must not be assumed that the United Kingdom is even yet in a position to satisfy her own requirements. The dyes which are at present being manufactured are those which are required largely for war purposes and for meeting the needs of a small portion of the civilian trade. Under existing conditions, and in the absence of world competition, it is possible to utilize inferior dyes without much detriment to the dye-using trades, as it is generally realized in all markets that the limited range and unsatisfactory nature of the colours now available must be accepted for the present. As soon, however, as better and more varied colours are again obtainable, the demand for them will become so persistent, particularly from the export markets, that unless the United Kingdom is in a position to supply as complete and as satisfactory a range of coloured goods, and to a lesser extent of dye-stuffs themselves, as were available before the War, her position in international competition may be seriously prejudiced.

It is therefore necessary to examine more closely the lines along which progress has been made. In the first place, it may be stated in general terms that, as regards the commoner dyes, the present production is probably equal to about three-quarters of our normal requirements, but with the exception of a few isolated colours, none of which are being made in sufficient quantities, progress in the production of the special and more difficult dyes has been very slow. During the War it has been necessary to concentrate on meeting the immediate needs for War purposes of ourselves and our Allies; in this British manufacturers have been very successful, but the civilian or normal trade has perforce taken a secondary place, and has been catered for to a considerable extent by supplies of dyes from Switzerland, manufactured from British raw materials. The greatest development of the British manufacture has consequently been in the wool-dyeing series known either as acid wool colours or chrome and mordant colours, and of these it is estimated that at least eighty per cent. of what will be required under normal conditions will be obtainable from United Kingdom sources and the balance from Switzerland. On the other hand cotton and union dyes (direct dyes) are only available in limited quantities and are restricted in range, whilst printing colours, with few exceptions, are only obtainable from Switzerland. The development of the manufacture has been retarded partly by the scarcity of some of the necessary raw materials, e.g., toluol and methyl alcohol; partly by difficulties in respect of the supply of dye-making plant; partly by the shortage of trained chemists; and finally by the lack of co-ordination among dye-making firms, which has resulted in a certain amount of overlapping and in the failure to make the best use of the limited amount of technical skill available. Many of the colours which were introduced by the Germans in the few years immediately preceding the War were the products of an intensive system of research work, and their successful manufacture can only be attained by the application of scientific methods to the industry.

The preceding remarks apply more particularly to the dye industry in relation to the domestic requirements of the United Kingdom, but at the same time it is apparent that the industry cannot be confined to the United Kingdom alone for an outlet for its products if it is to develop on such a scale as to hold its own against German competition after the War; and this is still more the case if it is to assume a position even approximating to that formerly held by the German industry. In order to make good so far as possible the shortage of dyes in the Self-governing Dominions, India, and other parts of the Empire, and in Allied countries, and to obtain for the British dye manufacturers a footing there, the export of all dyes that can possibly be spared has been permitted during the War, but the gaps caused in those markets by the cutting off of German supplies have so far been filled only to a limited extent.

The demand for dyes from various parts of the Empire is very considerable, the principal markets being India (which is by far the most important), Canada, Australia and New Zealand, and Egypt. The position and prospects of supplies to each of these markets is discussed in the Appendix to this memorandum.

Further Government assistance to the Dye-making Industry.

The whole position has recently been carefully reviewed by His Majesty's Government, having regard to the need for the more rapid development of the dye-making industry in the United Kingdom, in order that the great dye-using trades may be made independent of German supplies at the earliest possible date, and that Germany may be prevented so much as possible from making use of her position in regard to supplies of dyes as a counter in peace negotiations; and it has been decided that further assistance shall be given. That assistance is to be three-fold:—

(a) Financial assistance is to be given to dye manufacturers in the form of subsidies, advances on loan, and grants in aid of research; a maximum sum of £2,000,000 has been allocated for the three years 1918 to 1920, and the financial assistance will be conditional upon the observance by manufacturers of such directions as the Board of Trade may give in order to secure co-ordination of effort, the avoidance of overlapping, and increased attention to the manufacture of the special and more difficult classes of dyes, to which reference has been made earlier in this memorandum.

The most effective co-ordination can only be secured by a fusion of the more important manufacturing companies, and a scheme for the amalgamation of the two principal concerns, British Dyes, Limited, and Levinstein, Limited, is now under consideration, and has been approved by His Majesty's Government, subject to certain conditions as to the State control of prices and provision for the equitable distribution of products among the various classes of consumers.

(b) Special assistance in respect of plant and materials is being given to the industry, which is to rank in this regard as a war industry, and steps are being taken to improve the supply of trained chemists.

(c) In order to promote enterprise and encourage the investment of private capital in the industry, His Majesty's Government have decided that the importation of foreign dyes, except under licence, shall be prohibited for a period of ten years—since it is clear that the great German dye-making firms, which are now working in close combination, will make every effort to destroy the new British industry by a campaign of underselling, against which protective duties would be of little avail.

The expediency of the adoption of a similar prohibition throughout the Empire is a matter which the Board of Trade commend to the consideration of the Governments represented at the Imperial Conference.

Board of Trade,

June, 1918.

APPENDIX.

The following paragraphs set out the present position and future prospects of the supplies of dyestuffs to the principal consuming markets in the British Empire.

Canada.—From a comparison of the imports of artificial dyestuffs into Canada during the years 1913-14 and 1916-17 it would appear that, as regards quantity, Canadian consumers are able to obtain supplies to about four-fifths of their pre-War requirements. A large proportion of the dyestuffs have, however, been supplied by the United States.

Acid wool dyes and direct cotton colours are those most required, and there is every hope that the United Kingdom and the United States between them will be able to provide the bulk of both these classes of dyes. Owing to their proximity the American manufacturers possess a distinct advantage, of which they have not been slow to avail themselves, and as most dyestuffs are on the free list British manufacturers are afforded no special preference.

Australia.—The bulk of the dyes required in Australia are wool colours, and no great difficulty is anticipated in meeting a substantial proportion of pre-War requirements of the Commonwealth from British sources. The principal British manufacturers have established agencies in Australia, and supplies are also being exported through the agents in this country of various Australian mills.

New Zealand.—The above remarks with regard to Australia apply equally to the case of New Zealand, though the requirements are, of course, much smaller.

South Africa.—The consumption of dyes in South Africa is very small, and, so far as can be seen at present, there should be no special difficulty in supplying the needs of the Union to a large extent. A considerable proportion of the colours required are for leather dyeing or the colouring of foodstuffs, and these colours are at present available in sufficient quantity.

Egypt.—Egypt is a growing market, which is likely to prove of considerable interest after the War. By far the most important colour is synthetic indigo, and arrangements are being made at the moment by Messrs. Levinstein, Limited, with a view to supplying the British product on the Egyptian market. There is also a considerable demand for aniline oil and salt, which is being met to a large extent.

India.—In 1913-14 India imported two thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight tons of alizarine dyestuffs, of which nearly two thousand five hundred tons came from Germany; four thousand three hundred and sixty-five tons of other coal tar dyes, of which about three thousand tons were imported from Germany; and three hundred and three tons of synthetic indigo, practically the whole of which was of German origin. The shortage of supplies in the United Kingdom has so far made it impossible for much to be done to meet these very large demands, and the situation of dye-users in India has consequently been one of very great difficulty. The development of the dye-making industry in the United Kingdom has, however, brought about some improvement in the Indian position, but the shortage is still very pronounced.

The demand in India is for bright colours, the most important single dye being alizarine red, which is required in the form of a twenty per cent. paste, this being the quality most easily handled by the native dyers. Many of the colours are not known by the natives by their European names, but are recognized by the mark or label of the tin containing them. Such tins frequently contain very small quantities ($\frac{1}{2}$ lb. or 1 lb.), and in former times the dyes were in many cases of very inferior strengths. It is feared that during the War British exporters have not always recognized the necessity for supplying the special packing demanded by the Indian trade, though the scarcity of tinplate has no doubt been a serious obstacle. There has also been a tendency on the part of some less scrupulous exporters to take advantage of the great need for dyes in India and to ship products of almost useless strengths at abnormally high prices, and this practice has to some extent prejudiced British manufacturers in the eyes of the Indian consumer. About the middle of last year the position in this respect became so serious that the Board of Trade was compelled to take action to deal with it, and in all cases evidence is now required that dyestuffs have been sold by the manufacturers for export before applications for licences are considered. Concurrently with this arrangements have been made with the British Alizarine Company to export large consignments of alizarine to India for distribution among actual consumers at fixed prices, and advantage is being taken of every shipping opportunity for exporting lots of about twenty tons both to Bombay and to Madras. It is estimated that, owing to the somewhat restricted demand for alizarine for the home trade, it would be possible at present to export at the rate of about five hundred tons per annum to India, providing the necessary freight is available. This quantity only represents about one-sixth of the total pre-War consumption of alizarine in India, but the output of the British Alizarine Company is being continually increased, and there is a reasonable prospect that, with active Government assistance for the development of the manufacture on the lines indicated in the final section of the preceding memorandum, it will be possible to meet the demands of India for alizarine to a much more considerable extent in the near future.

Another important colour is synthetic indigo, the manufacture of which is now being carried on in this country in considerable quantities by Messrs. Levinstein, Limited, at the works formerly owned by Messrs. Meister Lucius and Bruning, and if the supply of the necessary raw materials is maintained, Messrs. Levinstein should be able to provide a substantial proportion of the pre-War Indian consumption of about three hundred tons per annum. It is understood that some difficulty has been occasioned in supplying synthetic indigo in the form generally used in India, but this is now being rapidly overcome. In the meantime, natural indigo is being substituted for the synthetic product to a large extent.

As regards other dyestuffs, it is not to be expected that for a few years to come this country will be in a position to meet fully the demands of India, but the importance of the Indian market is fully realized by British manufacturers, the principal of whom have already established their own agencies there. Unfortunately, the dyes most in demand are those required for cotton dyeing, as well as a number of special dyes producing very fast bright shades, and, as explained in the preceding memorandum, such dyes are only available at present in limited quantities. The difficulty is the same for the important sections of the United Kingdom textile trades using these colours as for the Indian users, and the rapidity with which the demands can be met is dependent on the success of the new measures which, as indicated in the memorandum, are now being taken by His Majesty's Government.

Petroleum Position of the British Empire.

MEMORANDUM BY LORD HARCOURT.

(See discussion on pages 148-163.)

THE present world-War has demonstrated the numerous purposes for which the British Empire is dependent on petroleum and its products, and the many difficulties incidental to the provision of the necessary supplies from overseas have caused more than ordinary anxiety. The United Kingdom to-day is dependent on the United States for about eighty per cent. of its supplies, and it is obvious that the United States have the power to place this country in an impossible position should they desire to be unfriendly.

As regards the British Empire, it must be pointed out that sixty-five per cent. of the world's production to-day is in American hands, and it is notorious that the great Standard Oil Company of America is leaving no stone unturned to secure oilfields all over the world.

Of the remainder of the world's production, thirteen per cent. comes from Russia, and eleven per cent. from Mexico. The entire British Empire produces only just over two per cent. of the world's supply, of which four-fifths comes from India.

This huge and obvious gap in the Imperial requirements must be regarded as unsatisfactory in the extreme, and the more so when it is realized what an absolutely vital part oil plays in modern industrial economy on land, as well as in the activities of the British Navy and Mercantile Marine.

It is unnecessary to dilate on the results to the Empire if America at some future date should become hostile, or even only strictly neutral, in a great war. The Roumanian and Russian oilfields are, at present at any rate, under German domination, and at no time can be regarded as a certain source of supply for British Imperial requirements. Mexico and the Dutch East Indies, for different reasons, are also an uncertain factor.

Those who have studied this question, which is of ever-increasing importance, feel most strongly, therefore, that every effort must be made, now and in the future, not only to develop existing oilfields in British territories or spheres of influence, but to acquire new fields that will be from the outset in British commercial hands and under British control. It seems clearly to be of first rate importance that no foreign influence, under any guise, shall be permitted in British territories.

The exact steps to secure this will vary with different countries and circumstances, but it would seem proper to consider the advisability of introducing, in some form or another, legislation which will prevent persons or corporations of foreign origin acquiring concessions or prospecting licences over oil-bearing lands, whether actual or potential.

To exclude foreigners eo nomine would perhaps be unwise, as this might lead to similar or retaliatory action in other countries, but it is thought that it might be sufficient if all prospecting for, boring, and getting of oil in Crown lands was subject to a Government licence, with an understanding that such licences would not be granted to foreigners. Legislation on these lines is already under consideration in this country.

Lands, the surface of which has been leased for agricultural or building purposes, but under which oil is now found, would appear not difficult to deal with. Application for permission to bore for oil involves an alteration in the terms of the original title, to which the Government sanction has to be obtained, and it is suggested, for example, that such sanction might be withheld until the applicants showed that the enterprise was in British hands and likely to remain so.

Again, in regard to prospecting licences, it is thought that these should only be issued to persons or companies of British origin. The issue of a prospecting licence to a foreign person or corporation, which would then spend money in boring, only to be told they could not develop a successful bore, would, it is thought, create a legitimate grievance.

A satisfactory solution might in many cases be found to be in the introduction, mutatis mutandis, of a "Pipe-line Ordinance," such as exists to-day in Trinidad.* Oil cannot as a rule be got away from its site without conveying it over alienated or Crown lands. Even where a concession extends to the sea coast, or to the bank of a river, a small margin is generally reserved as Crown land. The proprietor of oil is, therefore, obliged to come to Government for compulsory powers to construct his pipe-line through other persons' lands. In the Ordinance quoted the grant of such powers is in the absolute discretion of "the Governor in Council," and can readily be refused where British control of the undertaking is not shown to exist.

The above is only the briefest indication of possible lines on which appropriate legislation might be considered, but it cannot be too strongly emphasized that it is absolutely vital to the British Empire to get a firm hold of all possible sources of petroleum supply, and the Government will welcome the introduction of any such measures in the Dominions as may tend to this end, and will be ready to offer any advice or assistance in the matter that may be sought.

APPENDIX.

Trinidad and Tobago.—Petroleum (Pipe-Lines).—No. 19, 1911.—31st May.

An Ordinance relating to the laying of pipes for the purpose of conveying oil.

GEORGE R. LE HUNTE,
Governor.

12th June, 1911.

BE it enacted by the Governor of Trinidad and Tobago with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council thereof as follows:—

1. This Ordinance may be cited as the Petroleum (Pipe-Lines) Ordinance. Short title. 1911.

2. The Petroleum (Pipe-Lines) Ordinance, 1910 (15—1910) is hereby repealed. Repeal

3. In this Ordinance the term "person" includes a corporation, whether aggregate or sole. Interpretation.

4. It shall not be lawful for any person to use or to lay and connect on any land in this Colony (whether such land is or is not the property of any such person) any pipes for the purpose of or capable of being used for conveying oil (hereinafter called pipe-lines) without permission first had and obtained. Permission to lay pipe-lines necessary.

Every person desirous of obtaining permission to use or to lay and connect any such pipe-line shall petition the Governor in Executive Council for leave to do so.

Such petition shall be accompanied by a plan of the lands showing, as nearly as may be, the names of the owners and occupiers thereof, and also the course and direction of the pipe-line and the position of any pumping stations, tanks, or other works in connexion with such pipe-line.

The Governor in Executive Council may thereupon, in his absolute discretion and upon such terms and conditions as he may think fit, grant permission to such petitioner—

(a) To use any pipe-line;

(b) To lay and connect any pipe-line over such lands as may be the property of the petitioner or over which he may have obtained way leave, and as to such lands, if any, as are not his property or over which he has not obtained way leave, to proceed under section 8 hereof.

5. If any pipe-line shall be used or laid and connected in contravention of the provisions of section 4 hereof, it shall be lawful for the Governor in Executive Council by notice in writing to be served upon the owner or occupier of any lands whereon such pipe-line may be laid or through which it may pass, to require that such pipe-line be immediately disconnected and rendered useless for the purpose of conveying oil. Notice to disconnect pipe-line laid without permission.

In any case in which the owner or occupier of any such land is not known or cannot be found, such notice may be served by affixing the same in some conspicuous place in such lands.

Should the requirements of any such notice not be complied with within forty-eight hours of the service or affixing thereof, it shall be lawful for any person authorized in writing by the Governor in Executive Council with such workmen and assistants as may be necessary to enter upon any land and carry out the requirements of such notice, and thereafter to re-enter from time to time to enforce and keep enforced such requirements without other or further authority.

Production of such written authority shall be sufficient evidence of the issue thereof, and no proof of the signatures thereon shall be necessary.

Any person obstructing the execution by any person so authorized, his workmen, or assistants of anything required to be done to give effect to the requirements of any such notice so long as the same shall be in operation is on conviction before any Stipendiary Justice of the Peace liable to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds.

6. If any person shall, after any pipe-line has been disconnected in accordance with the provisions of the last preceding section, reconnect the same, without having petitioned and received permission under section 4 hereof, such person shall be liable to a penalty of fifty pounds, and to a further penalty of ten pounds for each day during which such pipe-line continues so reconnected. Penalty for reconnecting without permission.

Recovery of penalties.

7. All penalties under the last preceding section shall be sued for and recovered by action of debt as between subject and subject in any competent Court of civil jurisdiction in the name of the Attorney-General.

Notice to land owner
lay pipe-line.

8. Every person desirous of laying pipe-lines on the lands of other persons who has obtained permission to proceed as mentioned in (b) of section 4 hereof, shall give notice in writing to the owners of such lands of his desire to lay down such pipe-lines, and of his intention after the expiration of fourteen days from the date of such notice on a specified day to enter upon such lands for the purpose of fixing the location of such pipe-lines, and within fourteen days of such entry shall serve each of such owners with a statement in writing containing full particulars of the description and proposed location of such pipe-lines.

9. Any such owner after receipt of such notice and statement of particulars may by deed assent to the laying down of such pipe-lines upon payment of such compensation as may be agreed upon, and any assent so given shall be binding on all parties having any estate or interest in the land, subject to the following provisions:—

- (1) That any arrangement entered into by any owner under any disability or incapacity, or not having power to give such assent except under the provisions of this Ordinance, shall not be valid unless the same is approved by two valuers, one of whom is to be nominated by the person giving notice and the other by the owner; and each of such valuers, if they approve of the arrangement, shall annex to the document containing the same a declaration to that effect subscribed by them;
- (2) That any compensation to be paid by the person giving notice to the owner, in cases where such owner is under any disability or incapacity or has not power to assent to such application, except under the provisions of this Ordinance, shall be applied in manner in which the compensation coming to parties having limited interests or prevented from treating and not making title is applicable under the Land Acquisition Ordinance No. 42;
- (3) That any occupier or person other than the owner interested in the lands shall be entitled to compensation for any injury he may sustain by the laying of such pipe-lines, so that the claim therefor be made within twelve months after the laying of such pipe-lines, the amount of such compensation to be determined in the case of dispute in the manner in which disputed compensation for land is required to be determined by the Land Acquisition Ordinance No. 42.

proposal.

10. An owner shall be deemed to have dissented from the proposal to lay pipe-lines on his land if he fail to express his assent thereto within one month after the service of the notice on him under section 8 hereof; and in the event of such dissent there shall be decided by the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace of the district on the application of the person desiring to lay pipe-lines, unless such owner require the same within such period of one month to be decided by arbitration, the questions following; that is to say:—

- (1) Whether the proposed pipe-lines will cause any injury to such owner, or to the occupier or other person interested in the lands;
- (2) Whether any injury that may be caused is or is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated for by money.

The result of any such decision shall be as follows, that is to say:—

- (a) If the decision is that no injury will be caused to the owner, occupier, or other parties interested in the lands, the person giving notice may proceed forthwith to lay the pipe-line;
- (b) If the decision is that injury will be caused to the owner, occupier, or other party interested in the lands, but that such injury is of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace or arbitrators shall proceed to assess such compensation and to apportion the same amongst the parties in his or their judgment entitled thereto subject to the provisions contained in section 12 hereof; and on payment of the sum so assessed the person giving notice may proceed to lay the proposed pipe-line;

- (c) If the decision is that injury will be caused to the owner, occupier, or other party interested in the land, and that such injury is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, the person giving notice shall not be entitled to lay the proposed pipe-line.

11. Where any application is made under the last preceding section, the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace may summon the parties to appear before him at a time and place to be named in the summons, and, upon the appearance of such parties, or in the absence of any of them, upon proof of the due service of the summons, it shall be lawful for such Justice to hear and determine the question and amount of the compensation, and for that purpose to examine such parties, or any of them, and their witnesses upon oath, and the cost of every such inquiry shall be at his discretion and he shall settle the amount thereof. Such costs shall be recoverable in manner provided by sections 45 and 46 of the Ordinance No. 9, 1911, or any Ordinance repealing or amending the same.

12. Where the compensation assessed by the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace or arbitrators under the last preceding section is payable to any owner or other person who is under any disability or incapacity, or is not entitled to receive the same for his own benefit, or is absent from the Colony, such compensation shall be applied in the manner in which the compensation coming to parties having limited interests or prevented from treating and not making title is applicable under the Land Acquisition Ordinance, No 42.

13. If any difficulty or question shall arise as to the person entitled to the compensation under this Ordinance, the Stipendiary Justice of the Peace shall deposit the compensation payable in such case in the name and with the privity of the Registrar of the Supreme Court with the Receiver-General, to be placed to the credit of the persons interested.

14. Upon the application by petition of any person making claim to any moneys deposited under the last preceding section, the Supreme Court may, in a summary way, at the cost of the person giving notice under section 8 hereof, and after such notice as the Court may deem fit, and to such person or persons as the Court shall direct, order distribution and payment of such moneys according to the respective rights and interests of the persons making claim to such moneys or any part thereof, and may make such other order in the premises as to the Court shall seem fit.

15. After pipe-lines have been laid in accordance with the provisions of this Ordinance, it shall be lawful for the owner or person in charge of such pipe-lines, or any person authorized in writing by either of them, from time to time as it becomes necessary, to enter upon the lands through which such pipe-lines have been laid for the purpose of inspecting and with such assistance as may be necessary repairing the same, or in case such pipe-lines shall no longer be required, for the purpose of removing the same. Where pipe-lines are removed, the surface of the land shall forthwith be restored to its former condition. In default thereof such restoration may be carried out by the owner of the land, and the costs thereof shall be recoverable from the person liable therefor in the Petty Civil Court of the district without limit of amount.

16. Any person hindering, obstructing, or interfering with the exercise by any owner or person in charge of a pipe-line, or by any other person, or by the servants or agents duly authorized in writing of any such owner or person of any right of entry upon lands conferred by this Ordinance for the purpose of laying and connecting or repairing, inspecting or removing any pipe-line is on conviction before any Stipendiary Justice of the Peace liable to a fine not exceeding twenty pounds.

17. The provisions of this Ordinance shall not relieve any owner of a pipe-line of the liability to make compensation to the owner or occupier of the land or the agents, workmen, or servants of such owner or occupier for any damage or injury done or caused by the exercise or use of any power or authority hereby conferred, or by any irregularity, trespass, or other wrongful proceeding in the execution of this Ordinance, or by the breaking or bursting of any pipe, or by reason of any defect in any pipe: Provided that if before action brought in respect thereof such owner of pipe-lines make tender of sufficient amends to the party injured such last mentioned party shall not recover in any action.

18. It shall be lawful for the Governor in Executive Council to declare that any pipe-line or system of pipe-lines shall be deemed to be and be common carriers; and from and after the publication of such declaration in the Royal Gazette the owners or operators of every such pipe-line or system of pipe-lines shall at all times, in accordance with such rules and regulations as may from time to time be made by the Governor in Executive Council and published in the Royal Gazette, make full and adequate provision in regard to the carriage of crude oil, as such common carriers, and shall, if required so to do by the Governor in Executive Council, increase the carrying capacity of any such pipe-line or system of pipe-lines and the capacity of their pumping stations, tanks, and other appliances.

Provided always that such owners or operators shall not be bound to increase the capacity of their pipe-lines, tanks, pumping stations and other appliances save upon the requisition of producers of crude oil, who have given guarantees satisfactory to the Governor in Executive Council of the permanence of the supply of crude oil to be carried by such owners or operators, and that such owners or operators shall not be bound to carry crude oil below a flash point which may from time to time be fixed by the Governor in Executive Council, or otherwise than in accordance with rules and regulations to be made as aforesaid.

Provided also that such owners or operators shall not be obliged to place at any one time at the disposal of the public more than twenty per cent. of the full carrying capacity of their pipe-lines as then constituted.

Rules and regulations.

19. The rules and regulations in the last preceding section mentioned may, among other things, fix a limit to the rates which the owners or operators of pipe-lines may charge for the carriage of oil, and the terms and conditions upon which such owners or operators shall be bound to carry oil, and may attach a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds to the breach by such owners or operators of any such rule or regulation, and provide a method for deciding all questions as to the performance of their obligations towards the public, including questions as to the damages payable by such owners or operators or others their liabilities for failure to perform such obligations. Such owners and operators shall execute in favour of the Colonial Secretary and his successors a bond with two or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Governor, in the sum of one thousand pounds, conditioned for the payment by them of any penalty or payment of any sum to which they may have become liable under such rules or regulations and for compliance with any such decision as aforesaid.

Bond.

Naval Defence of the British Empire.

ADMIRALTY MEMORANDUM.

(See discussion on pages 166-168.)

THE Imperial War Conference which met at the Colonial Office on 30th March, 1917, passed the following resolution:—

"That the Admiralty be requested to work out immediately after the conclusion of the War what they consider the most effective scheme of naval defence of the Empire, for the consideration of the several Governments summoned to the Conference, with such recommendations as the Admiralty consider necessary in that respect for the Empire's security."

It was further suggested at the Conference that it would be of great assistance if the Dominion Governments could receive in advance a general outline of what the Admiralty consider best, so that the matter might be studied locally and no time be lost in coming to an agreement on principles.

2. In considering this large question the Admiralty have recognized that any suggestion put forward at the present time for the closer co-ordination of the naval force of the British Empire may be affected by constitutional changes decided upon subsequently. It is thought, however, that any such changes will be in the direction of associating the self-governing nations with questions of Imperial policy, and this has been borne in mind in approaching the subject.

3. It is assumed that the great struggle in which we are now engaged has proved to all concerned that it is upon the maintenance of its sea-power that the communities which form the British Empire must rely for their independent existence, and that, as in the past, the various Dominions are willing to share in the provision of the necessary force. Hitherto the choice before the Dominions has lain between forming separate fleet units or contributing men and money to the British Fleet.

Money contributions have always been unpopular. Fleet units are not within the reach of some of the Dominions, and can never be so economical or effective as would be one single fleet under one control in peace and war.

For the preparation of adequate and effective war plans, knowledge of what naval forces can be counted on with certainty, a peace distribution to meet probable war requirements, and the power to dispose the fleet as requisite instantly on the development of a critical situation are essential.

4. In its scattered nature the British Empire differs from all others. Its only lines of communication are by the sea, and the continuance during the War of its sea-borne traffic is necessary to its existence. The problem always before the Navy is to keep the waterways free.

The present war has dispelled much of the doubt surrounding the problem, but has also disclosed new difficulties. The primary duty of the Navy is now, as formerly, to sink the enemy or to drive him from the sea; and, so far as surface craft are concerned, it may claim to have been successful, but the new element which has arisen—the submarine—requires special measures, including a large increase of small craft in proximity to enemy bases and protection from the submarine cruiser at sea.

5. The strength and distribution of naval force in peace and its disposition on the threat of war are primary factors in maintaining that command of the sea without which no community within the Empire can hope to retain the freedom it now enjoys; and it will be one of the first duties of the Admiralty, on the conclusion of peace, to report on the needs of the Empire in these respects, and of the self-governing nations together to decide upon the best method of meeting them.

6. In view of the above considerations, the Admiralty, convinced as they are that a single Navy is necessary for the security of the whole Empire, have drawn up the following proposals for a naval organization, and, in so doing, have borne in mind that:—

- (i) With a single Navy the right of the nations within the Empire to partnership with the United Kingdom in the provision, administration, and disposition of the Fleet must receive full recognition.
 - (ii) Uniformity and avoidance of overlapping in administration and supply are essential if economy in personnel and matériel is to be attained.
7. The outline of the proposed scheme is as follows:—
- (i) The whole naval force of the Empire to form one Navy, all effective units being under the control of an Imperial Naval Authority, both in peace and war. Ships to be available to serve in any waters, and officers and men in any ship.
 - (ii) Local Navy Boards, each under a Minister for the Navy, to be established by the partner nations, working in co-operation with the Imperial Naval Authority but directly responsible to their own Parliaments.
 - (iii) The Imperial Naval Authority and its staff would deal with all questions of naval strategy, and subjects connected with the provision, equipment, efficiency, organization, and utilization of the Navy as a fighting force; promotions and appointments; principles of training; the formulation of requirements on which the annual Estimates would be prepared; types of ships and matériel, etc.
 - (iv) The Navy Boards would control all local naval establishments, such as dockyards, training colleges, and schools; undertake construction, repairs, and carrying out of works, and deal with the entry and training of personnel, the provision of matériel and supplies, and other subjects connected with the maintenance of the Fleet in a state of efficiency.
 - (v) The naval Commander-in-Chief on each station would be in command of all naval forces afloat, including local defence vessels when in commission.

The Imperial Naval Authority would keep the Ministers for the Navy informed of orders given to the Commander-in-Chief.

- (vi) Each nation would decide, with due regard to its resources, the extent to which it would share in the total cost of the Navy, and, as far as possible, control the expenditure of the money it provides.

After considering estimates, prepared annually, on a statement of the requirements of the Empire drawn up by its staff, the Imperial Naval Authority would make proposals as to the share of work each nation would take, subject to the approval of the respective Parliaments.

- (vii) Local resources would be developed and utilized for shipbuilding, repairs, provision of war matériel, etc., special attention being attached to interchangeability of all resources, personnel, matériel (especially munitions), designs, etc. Members of the Navy Boards would be required to keep in touch with the corresponding members of the Maintenance Committee of the United Kingdom Admiralty, with a view to ensuring uniformity in such matters.
- (viii) Officers and men would be entered for the Navy locally, with equal prospects of advancement.

Navy colleges for junior officers, depôts for newly-entered men, schools for gunnery, torpedo, etc., would be established by each Navy Board in the same way as at the home naval ports in England. The curriculum and examinations would be in accordance with the requirements of the naval staff, and as nearly as possible uniform, so that officers or men might qualify or requalify for special ranks or ratings in whatever part of the world they might be serving.

- (ix) Discipline, uniform, qualifications for promotion and advancement, etc., to be the same for all. The selection of officers for promotion and appointment to commands might be dealt with by a Committee of the Imperial Naval Authority.
- (x) The question of pay would require special consideration, and would depend largely on conditions prevailing after the War; the rates to be as uniform as practicable.

8. It is not possible in this paper to make any final proposals as to the composition, title, and constitutional status of the proposed Imperial Naval Authority. The manner in which a chain of responsibility is to be established between it and the nations of the Empire must, it is thought, be determined by the form in which it may be ultimately decided to give expression to the desire for the closer union of the Empire. The Admiralty, however, make the following tentative suggestions for covering what may, perhaps, be looked upon as a transitional period.

9. The Ministers of the Navy of the self-governing nations should attend whenever possible as members of the Imperial Naval Authority, and at least once a year, for the consideration of the annual Estimates and deliberation on large matters of policy.

In their absence they could be represented generally by the First Lord of the Admiralty, with whom they could be placed in direct communication, and through this channel they would be consulted and would have at all times an opportunity of expressing the views of their Governments on the distribution of the naval forces and other important questions affecting the squadrons in their waters.

10. These are, however, only temporary suggestions. On the political and constitutional side they would, it is hoped, be superseded by more continuous representation as part of the solution of the larger problems referred to. On the naval and professional side the staff of the single Navy would form the basis of an organization which would gradually become fully representative as officers drawn from the overseas nations acquired sufficient naval experience to fill the higher administrative posts on, or under, the Imperial Naval Authority.

11. If the proposed scheme is accepted by the other nations it should be possible to devise arrangements to enable India to share in it. It is recognized that the status of the Royal Indian Marine would require adjustment.

Publication of Conference Proceedings.

MEMORANDUM BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(See discussion on page 208.)

It will be desirable to publish in the form of the usual Blue Book so much of our proceedings as are not of a confidential character. It is not possible, without careful examination, to say precisely how much this will be, but I think the following may be taken as a fairly accurate indication:—

All the resolutions may, I think, be published, excepting No. 6, Enemy Debts, and, perhaps, the last part of No. 3, that is the list of raw materials. The first two paragraphs of No. 3 have already been published. No. 5, Imperial Meat Supplies, and No. 15, Channels of Communication, should, perhaps, not be published at present. They, in any case, require some consideration.

With regard to the proceedings themselves, I think we may publish practically the whole of the first two days, excepting a few passages containing some confidential figures. From the third, fourth, and fifth days we must omit, I think, the discussion on Raw Materials. The debate on Non-Ferrous Metals Act, except for a few passages, can, I think, be published. The sixth day, which deals with the imports and exports question, which is really a branch of the Raw Materials question, and the discussion on Imperial Meat Resources, cannot, I think, be published.

On the seventh day we can publish the Address to His Majesty with the reply; and the part about the Imperial Bureau of Mycology. The rest, which relates to Meat and Enemy Debts, is confidential. The whole of the eighth day can, I think, be published—it covers Double Income Tax, the Statistical Bureau, Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, and News Service. The ninth day, which covers Dyes, Shipping, and Inter-Imperial Parcels Delivery, can, I think, be published, subject to the omission of certain passages containing confidential information. On the tenth day, Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau and Emigration can be published, but the discussion on Medals is not suitable for publication, and some at least of the discussion on Cable Communication will require careful editing. On the eleventh day we can publish the discussion about Imperial Court of Appeal. The twelfth day, which covers Meat and Channels of Communication,* must, I think, at present be omitted. On the thirteenth day the discussion on Temptations to Oversea Troops is not suitable for publication, but those on the Mineral Resources Bureau and on Preference in Government Contracts can well be published. On the fourteenth day the discussion on Naturalization, but not that on Demobilization or on Petroleum, can, I think, be published. On the fifteenth day, covering Reciprocity with India, and the discussion on the Imperial Court of Appeal, can be published. That on the Suez Canal Dues is clearly not suitable for publication.

If the Conference agrees to the general lines indicated I will have a Blue Book prepared at once and a proof circulated to all members of the Conference who are still in England.

Empire Cotton-Growing.

MEMORANDUM BY THE BOARD OF TRADE.

(Circulated to the Conference but not discussed.)

THE Board of Trade appointed in July, 1917, in consultation with the Foreign, Colonial, and India Offices, a Committee to investigate the best means of developing the growing of cotton within the Empire, and to advise the Government as to the necessary measures to be taken for this purpose. The Committee is representative of the Government Departments concerned, of the Governments of India, Australia, and South Africa, and of merchants, manufacturers, and workpeople; and representatives of Indian interests are about to be added.

The Committee have presented to the Board of Trade the appended Interim Report, with the request that it may be laid before the Imperial Conference. The Board of Trade concur in the recommendations contained in the report.

Board of Trade,

1st June, 1918.

Enclosure.

Empire Cotton Growing Committee,

Board of Trade, Gwydyr House,

SIR,

Whitehall, S.W.1, 16th May, 1918.

WE have the honour to present a brief Interim Report on the work of the Empire Cotton Growing Committee since its appointment on 25th July, 1917.

You will remember that the Committee was appointed in accordance with a recommendation of the Textiles Committee of the Board of Trade, supported by representations made by the British Cotton Growing Association and other bodies representing important trade interests.

The Committee includes representatives of India, Australia, South Africa, and Egypt, as well as of the Foreign Office, the Colonial Office, the India Office, the Board of Trade, the Imperial Institute, and various cotton trade associations, including those which represent labour.

We hope that such a report may be of interest to the representatives of the Self-governing Dominions and of India, who will be present at the approaching Imperial Conference, as showing what progress is being made in the study of the Empire's resources for the production of raw material for the cotton industry. The question of increasing the supply of raw cotton from Imperial sources is of vital interest to all parts of the Empire, as consumers of cotton goods or cotton seed products, if not as growers of cotton.

India.

Our attention was first drawn to India, which appeared to offer the best opportunity for a considerable increase of supply in the near future. Any investigation on our part was, however, rendered unnecessary by the appointment by the Indian Government on 27th September, 1917, of a committee to inquire into the whole situation with regard to the possibilities of extending the cultivation of long staple cotton in India. Our efforts were, therefore, for the time being confined to assisting in the selection of a suitable representative of the Lancashire industry to join the Indian committee, and this was done. The committee has, it is understood, almost completed its inquiries, and we trust that we shall be given an opportunity to advise on its report before action is taken by the Government of India.

The Sudan.

The Committee next turned its attention to the position in Egypt and the Sudan, and advantage was taken of the presence in this country of Sir Murdoch Macdonald, Adviser to the Ministry of Public Works in Egypt, and an official deputation from the Sudan, to obtain from them valuable evidence as to the whole position, both in Egypt and the Sudan. As the result of this evidence, the Committee joined the Sudan deputation in making representations through the Board of Trade to the Treasury with regard to the urgent necessity for an immediate grant, in advance of the proposed loan of £3,000,000 which had been authorized just before the outbreak of war for railway and irrigation works in the Sudan. These representations were successful in securing a grant of £500,000, which will enable the Sudan authorities to undertake at once certain essential preliminary works in preparation for the actual work of construction of the main irrigation works upon which the Gezira scheme depends.

Egypt.

With regard to Egypt, it appeared that the drainage works in the northern delta, which had already been begun under Lord Kitchener, were suspended by the War, owing partly to scarcity of labour and partly to the impossibility of procuring the necessary engineering plant for the large pumping stations upon which the whole scheme turns. For this there is unfortunately no immediate remedy. It was pointed out, however, to the Committee that a large part of the work of constructing and realigning the main drains had already been done, and that if this work could only be carried a little farther it would at once begin to yield results which, although far short of the maximum benefit to be derived from the full scheme, would yield some return upon the capital already expended, and would add considerably to the area under cotton in Egypt, as well as to the yield of those areas affected by the scheme. The Committee therefore suggested that the Egyptian Government should be urged to take immediate steps for providing the funds necessary to complete these parts of the scheme in so far as this is possible under present conditions.

From further information, however, it appears that the difficulties in the way of proceeding even with the partial completion of these works are serious, apart from the question of finance. The demands of military operations in Egypt and Palestine have made heavy calls upon the labour supply available in Egypt, with the result that the military authorities are opposed to the execution under present conditions of any schemes which would involve a large amount of labour, as the works in question admittedly would. It appears, therefore, to be very doubtful whether works of such an important character even as those in question can be carried out under present conditions in Egypt; nor is there any reason to believe that these conditions are likely to be substantially modified in the immediate future.

In connection with the Egyptian crop the Committee caused to be prepared a special report on the world's supply of fine cotton, the position of which is becoming increasingly acute. The Committee felt that this was an important factor in the question of the restriction of acreage in Egypt, which had been decided upon by the Egyptian Government in August, 1917, owing to the shortage of foodstuffs and the urgent necessity of increasing the area to be put under cereals in Egypt during the winter of 1917-18. This report was accordingly forwarded to the President of the Board of Trade for communication to the Egyptian authorities and to the various departments of the home Government specially interested from the point of view of the supply of fine cotton for aeroplane cloth. It was pointed out that, in view of the scarcity of flax for the manufacture of linen for aeroplane cloth, it was important that steps should be taken to maintain and increase the supplies of fine cotton within the Empire.

Other Colonies and Dependencies.

With regard to the Colonies and Dependencies generally, it was agreed that the first step should be the issue of a circular letter or questionnaire by the Colonial Office to all Colonies which possessed possibilities for cotton-growing. The terms of such a circular were settled with the Colonial Office, and it was despatched on 31st August, 1917. Replies have now been received from all the Colonies and Protectorates, as follows:—

Africa.—Nigeria; Gold Coast; Sierra Leone; Gambia; Nyasaland; Uganda; Rhodesia; Zanzibar; British East Africa.*

West Indies.—Leeward Islands (Virgin Islands, Antigua, Montserrat, St. Kitts Nevis); Windward Islands (St. Lucia, Grenada, St. Vincent); Dominica; Jamaica; Barbados; Trinidad; Bahamas; Bermuda; British Guiana; British Honduras.

* A report has also been received from the Administrator of German East Africa.

Many of these replies may be described as mainly negative in their character, but valuable reports have been received with regard to Uganda, Nigeria, and Nyasaland, and from Sir Francis Watts with regard to the general position in the West Indies.

Reports have also been received as to the possibilities of Queensland, where considerable quantities of excellent cotton have been grown in the past, and renewed efforts have recently been made to encourage its cultivation. In various parts of South Africa, too, especially Natal and certain districts of the Transvaal, recent developments have given encouraging results, and there are signs of cotton-growing becoming a success on a commercial scale. We have also initiated inquiries into the prospects of cotton-growing in Mesopotamia, where experimental cultivation has been commenced under an officer of the Madras Department of Agriculture. All these will be more fully gone into.

Having now received these reports and also heard evidence from various witnesses as to the progress already made in cotton-growing in all parts of the Empire, our next step must be to proceed to consider, in view of the information thus obtained, what organizations will be required to develop on a really large scale the growing of cotton within the Empire.

Speaking broadly, the Committee is of opinion:—

- (1) That the present position of the world's cotton supply cannot be regarded by the Empire without misgiving, not only because the supply is altogether deficient, but also because the cotton trade of the Empire is, to a most undesirable extent, dependent upon an outside source for its supply of raw material, and
- (2) That if the proper measures be taken it is reasonably certain that in course of time a large proportion of the cotton required by the British Empire could be grown in its own territories.

These two propositions are very briefly treated in the following pages:—

I.—General Position of the World's Supply.

Even before the War there was already a deficiency in the world's annual cotton crops as compared with the actual consumption, which was only limited by the supply actually available.

The effect of the War was to reduce very materially the world's supplies of cotton, through a serious reduction of the acreage in all the countries which contribute most largely to the supply, while the demand after the first few months of the War exhibited a quite unexpected power of recovery. The resulting scarcity shows no signs of being materially mitigated while the War lasts; indeed, it is highly probable that the deficiency will be still more marked when peace brings a return to something like normal consumption among the Central Powers, who have been practically cut off from the world's supplies.

The War has brought home to the whole cotton trade the dependence of the industry upon the United States for its supply of raw material. While the general tendency of the American supply has been to increase, the annual returns show marked variations from season to season. These variations are mainly responsible for the violent fluctuations in price which have been experienced during recent years, and are most injurious to every branch of the cotton trade. Another point which must be taken into account in connection with the American crop is the increasing quantity which the American mills are taking for their own use.

An important advantage of the development of the resources of the Empire in medium cottons would be the provision of large areas for cotton-growing in different continents not subject to the same climatic vagaries as those of the American cotton belt, so that the world's supply would not be so largely dependent on the fortunes of the weather in one comparatively limited area.

II.—Possibilities of the Empire for Cotton-Growing.

The actual and potential sources of supply within the British Empire are India, Egypt, and the Sudan, the West Indies, and some of the African Colonies and Protectorates, more particularly Nigeria, Uganda, and Nyasaland. South Africa, Rhodesia, and Queensland have also proved their capacity to grow excellent cotton.

Of these, India offers the most promising prospects of a considerable increase of output within a reasonably short time; though the bulk of the Indian crop is of shorter staple than is required by the Lancashire industry and that of the British Empire outside India.

The cottons grown in the West Indies and in Egypt are each of a special character, which cannot at present be produced on a large scale in any other part of the world, and the exclusive possession of these sources of supply enables the British Empire to control to a great extent the spinning of fine counts of yarn which are mainly used in the production of the finer cotton materials. This is the more important inasmuch as there has been for many years a marked tendency, especially in Lancashire, towards the manufacture of finer fabrics, which require the use of longer stapled cotton.

In Uganda and in Nyasaland the cotton mostly grown has been of a grade intermediate between that of Egyptian and American. This grade is becoming increasingly important to the cotton industry, because in America of late years there has been a falling off in the production of similar cotton.

The Empire's supply of cotton is chiefly deficient in the medium grades which form the raw material of the great bulk of the Empire's trade. Of such qualities the Empire's total production has hitherto been trifling compared to the world's production; but there have been distinct evidences of development on a large scale of new areas for the production of such medium cottons. Both India and West Africa have proved their capacity to produce such cotton in much larger quantities than hitherto.

The share of the British Empire in the world's cotton supplies is brought out in the following table, which shows the various grades of cotton, from the finest to the lowest, and the share of the British Empire in each grade.

THE WORLD'S COTTON SUPPLY AND THE BRITISH EMPIRE'S SHARE IN IT.

NOTE.—In the case of Egypt, the allocation between grades II. and III. is based on the most recent figures available.

From this it will be seen that, while the British Empire produces thirty-three per cent. of the very highest grade, eighty-nine per cent. of the second, and seventy per cent. of the third, its share of the great medium grade, the fourth, is only about two-and-a-half per cent., while in the lowest grade again it accounts for sixty-four per cent. of the total supply.

These facts have been generally known for some time past, and it was in view of them that the British Cotton Growing Association was formed in 1902. The Association, after much excellent and useful work, has reached the limit of its resources, and it has become necessary to consider how its work is to be carried on in the future. In the meantime there has become available much more knowledge of the scientific principles underlying the cultivation and improvement of cotton.

The Committee consider that the extension of cotton-growing within the Empire should form an integral part of any general plan for developing the resources of the British Empire and making it economically independent and self-supporting. It is undeniable that the measures which would lead to the extension of cotton-growing in various parts of the Empire, e.g., the extension and improvement of means of communication and transport, and the provision of irrigation facilities where necessary, are exactly the conditions which would lead to development in respect of every other crop which they are capable of producing, and at the same time would have the effect of raising the general standard of well-being of the inhabitants and increasing their purchasing power.

In view of these considerations, we are convinced that the appointment of the Empire Cotton Growing Committee, representative as it is of the various parts of the Empire, is amply justified. We are satisfied that the work of the Committee will expand and that its functions as a standing Imperial committee on cotton-growing should include the following:—

- (1) To secure the systematic collection, examination, and dissemination of information with regard to cotton-growing in various parts of the Empire, as well as in other parts of the world.
- (2) To consider and advise upon all questions affecting the development of cotton-growing within the Empire, including applications to or through the Imperial Government for funds for the execution of necessary public works, such as railways, roads, harbours, or other means of communication or transport, or of irrigation or drainage works.
- (3) To consider and advise upon the relative urgency and importance of schemes of development in connection with cotton-growing, and to secure the co-ordination of effort in different parts of the Empire.
- (4) To stimulate and secure the co-ordination of scientific research on cotton-growing, whether conducted by local Governments in the cotton-growing areas, or by suitable agencies in this country upon large questions of general interest to the Empire.

Much of this work has during recent years been performed in varying degrees by the British Cotton Growing Association and the Imperial Institute.

The Committee desire to put on record their appreciation of the admirable pioneer work done in many parts of the Empire by the British Cotton Growing Association, and in particular of the work of Mr. J. Arthur Hutton, Chairman of the Council of the Association, who gave to the Committee very full and most valuable evidence with regard to all the areas in which the Association has carried on its operations. The work of the Association in trying and proving the capabilities of various areas throughout the Empire for cotton-growing has been of value even where the results have been negative, as well as in other areas where success has been clearly established, and cotton-growing upon a more or less commercial scale has followed from the efforts of the Association. Whatever be the future of the British Cotton Growing Association, certain branches of its work must be continued in one form or another in areas where cotton-growing is not fully established upon an independent commercial basis. The question of the most desirable form of this future organization is still under consideration by the Committee.

The Committee also desire to acknowledge the valuable work done by the Imperial Institute in connection with cotton-growing, especially in examining and reporting on samples of cotton grown in various parts of the Empire and in maintaining reference collections.

In conclusion, we desire to express the hope that the President of the Board of Trade will commend the work of the Committee to all the members of the Imperial Conference, and will endeavour to secure their co-operation and support in furthering its main object, namely, the development of the British cotton-growing areas, so as to free the Empire as far as possible from its dependence upon foreign sources of supply.

I have, &c.,
HENRY BIRCHENOUGH,
Chairman.

The Right Honourable
Sir Albert Stanley, M.P.,
President of the Board of Trade.

RESOLUTION XXI. (OF 1918): RECIPROCITY OF TREATMENT BETWEEN INDIA AND THE DOMINIONS.

The Imperial War Conference is of opinion that effect should now be given to the principle of reciprocity approved by Resolution XXII of the Imperial War Conference, 1917. In pursuance of that Resolution it is agreed that:—

1. It is an inherent function of the Governments of the several communities of the British Commonwealth, including India, that each should enjoy complete control of the composition of its own population by means of restriction on immigration from any of the other communities.

2. British citizens domiciled in any British country, including India, should be admitted into any other British country for visits, for the purpose of pleasure or commerce, including temporary residence for the purpose of education. The conditions of such visits should be regulated on the principle of reciprocity as follows:—

(a) The right of the Government of India is recognized to enact laws which shall have the effect of subjecting British citizens domiciled in any other British country to the same conditions in visiting India as those imposed on Indians desiring to visit such country.

(b) Such right of visit or temporary residence shall, in each individual case, be embodied in a passport or written permit issued by the country of domicile and subject to visé there by an officer appointed by, and acting on behalf of, the country to be visited, if such country so desires.

(c) Such right shall not extend to a visit or temporary residence for labour purposes or to permanent settlement.

3. Indians already permanently domiciled in the other British countries should be allowed to bring in their wives and minor children on condition (a) that not more than one wife and her children shall be admitted for each such Indian and (b) that each individual so admitted shall be certified by the Government of India as being the lawful wife or child of such Indian.

4. The Conference recommends the other questions covered by the memoranda presented this year and last year to the Conference by the representatives of India in so far as not dealt with in the foregoing paragraphs of this Resolution to the various Governments concerned with a view to early consideration.

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 10th October, 1919.)

[Answered by No. 15.]

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 9th October, 1919.
I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Montagu to invite the consideration by Viscount Milner of the position of British Indian subjects in territories for which a mandate is conferred upon the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, or the Dominion of New Zealand in accordance with paragraph 6 of Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

Mr. Montagu understands that the Mandatory will in each case have full power of administration and legislation, and may apply its own laws to the new territories subject to local modifications. Under these conditions it would appear that the Mandatories can extend their own immigration laws to the territories in question, while a position of some difficulty may arise where (as in South Africa and Australia) there is no Federal law on such matters as trade licences, occupation of land, and regulation of particular industries (such as sugar cultivation). If, on matters at present regulated by Provincial or State legislation, the existing system of the Transvaal were reproduced in South West Africa, or that of Queensland in Pacific Islands, certain classes of British subjects would be prejudicially affected. And on the broader question of the right of entry, the application of Dominion immigration laws to former German territories would apparently result in the imposition on British Indian subjects of disabilities from which they were exempt when the territories were under German rule.

* Nos. 30 and 32.

Mr. Montagu will be greatly obliged if Lord Milner can convey an appeal from him to any Dominion Government which is to receive a mandate, to take into consideration the local position of British Indian subjects in the light of the place of India in the British Empire and the share taken by India in the War. It may, he trusts, be possible to express on the part of His Majesty's Government the hope that, in applying or modifying their own laws as regards the territories under mandate, the several Dominions will give full weight to the importance to India of this question.

I am, &c.,
T. W. HOLDERNESS.

COLONIAL OFFICE to INDIA OFFICE.

SIR, Downing Street, 21st November, 1919.
WITH reference to your letter of the 9th October,* I am directed by Viscount Milner to state, for the information of the Secretary of State for India, that, so far as he is aware, no, or if any very few, British Indian subjects were to be found before the War in the territories to be administered under a mandate by the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa. According to "Das Deutsche Kolonialreich," there were no British Indian subjects in the German Pacific territories in 1909. In German South West Africa the position was that the German Government discouraged the settlement of foreigners, and that such coloured foreign population as existed was mainly composed of labourers from South Africa.

2. The position as regards the future is that under paragraph 6 of Article 22 of the Peace Treaty with Germany, South West Africa and the Pacific Islands are to be administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory. In these circumstances, Mr. Montagu will, no doubt, agree that the principle enunciated in paragraph 1 of Resolution XXI. passed by the Imperial Conference, 1918, will be applicable, should the Dominion Governments desire, in respect of the immigration of British Indian subjects. So far as Lord Milner's information goes, the intention of the Dominion Governments is to apply their existing immigration laws to the territories in question.

3. Mr. Montagu will appreciate that, if the immigration laws of the Self-governing Dominions are applied in the manner suggested, the other points to which reference is made in your letter will not arise.

I am, &c.,
HENRY LAMBERT.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(No. 275.)

MY LORD,

Government House, Ottawa, 27th March, 1919.

WITH reference to previous correspondence, and more particularly to your despatch of the 28th January last,* on the subject of reciprocity of treatment between India and the Self-governing Dominions, I have the honour to transmit herewith copies of an approved minute of the Privy Council for Canada, setting forth the views of my responsible advisers.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure in No. 17.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 26TH MARCH, 1919.
(P.C. 641.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 22nd March, 1919, from the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, to whom was referred despatches dated respectively 7th August, 1917, 28th August, 1918, and 28th January, 1919, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to Your Excellency, on the subject of reciprocity of treatment between India and the Self-governing Dominions, submitting that the memorandum of the India Office, bearing date of 22nd March, 1917, which was under consideration by the Imperial War Conference, calls attention especially to:—

1. The policy of restriction of British East Indian immigration adopted by almost all the Self-governing Dominions;
2. The policy of Canada, which places the East Indian, who is a British subject, in a less advantageous position than Japanese and other Asiatics who do not belong to the Empire;
3. The existing regulations of Canada which offer almost insuperable obstacles to the entry of wives and families of British East Indians now domiciled in Canada;
4. The difficulties met with by tourists and other non-immigrant classes in establishing their right to free access to Canada, as provided by our law;
5. The existing regulations, which practically constitute an embargo against the entry of immigrants of the labouring classes.

The memorandum also suggests the possibility of an agreement between India and the Self-governing Dominions on the following lines:—

1. As regards Indians already permanently settled in the Dominions, they should be allowed to bring in wives (subject to the rule of monogamy), and minor children, and in other respects should not be less privileged than Japanese settled immigrants.
2. Future admissions of Indians for labour or settlement should, if possible, be regulated on lines similar to, and not less favourable than, those governing the admission of any other Asiatic race.

* No. 16.

3. If this is not possible, there might be reciprocal treatment in India and each Dominion of immigration for purposes of labour or permanent settlement. If a Dominion is determined to exclude these two classes of immigration from India, India should be free to do the same as regards that Dominion. It would be clearly recognized that the exclusion in either case was not motivated by prejudice of race, but was the outcome of different economic conditions.

4. Along with such exclusion, reciprocal arrangements would be made for granting full facilities for the admission of tourists, students, and the like, and for business visits entailing temporary residence, so long as this residence was not for labour purposes or for permanent settlement.

At the request of the representatives of India, the subject of reciprocity of treatment between India and the Self-governing Dominions came up for further consideration at the Imperial War Conference in 1918. At this Conference, all the Self-governing Dominions and India were represented, and it was unanimously agreed that:—

1. It is an inherent function of the Governments of the several communities of the British Commonwealth, including India, that each should enjoy complete control of the composition of its own population by means of restriction on immigration from any of the other communities.

2. British citizens domiciled in any British country, including India, should be admitted into any other British country for visits, for the purpose of pleasure or commerce, including temporary residence for the purpose of education. The conditions of such visits should be regulated on the principle of reciprocity as follows:—(a) the right of the Government of India is recognized to enact laws which shall have the effect of subjecting British citizens domiciled in any other British country to the same conditions in visiting India as those imposed on Indians desiring to visit such country; (b) such right of visit or temporary residence shall, in each individual case, be embodied in a passport or written permit issued by the country of domicile, and, subject to visé there by an officer appointed by, and acting on behalf of, the country to be visited, if such country so desires; (c) such right shall not extend to a visit or temporary residence for labour purposes or to permanent settlement.

3. Indians already permanently domiciled in the other British countries should be allowed to bring in their wives and minor children, on condition (a) that not more than one wife and her children shall be admitted for each such Indian, and (b) that each individual so admitted shall be certified by the Government of India as being the lawful wife or child of such Indian.

The principal movement of East Indians to Canada occurred in 1907-1908, the total immigration being under seven thousand. Of this number, possibly not more than twelve hundred now remain in Canada, there having been a heavy exodus to the United States, in addition to which quite a number have returned to India. Climatic, industrial, and social conditions in Canada have not, on the whole, been found congenial. Disease has made considerable inroads upon East Indians. Their caste system has seriously interfered with their employment in many walks of life. Notwithstanding the fact that only a small proportion of those who originally emigrated to Canada are now resident here, the Minister submits that certain modifications of the restrictive provisions of the Immigration Act and Regulations should be made for the relief of such of our fellow-British subjects of the East Indian race as may be affected by the resolution of the Imperial War Conference of 24th July, 1918, as above recited.

The Minister, therefore, with the concurrence of the Minister of Immigration and Colonization, recommends that the following declaration, unanimously adopted at the Imperial War Conference, 24th July, 1918, be approved, viz., that—

1. It is an inherent function of the Governments of the several communities of the British Commonwealth, including India, that each should enjoy complete control of the composition of its own population by means of restriction on immigration from any of the other communities.

2. British citizens domiciled in any British country, including India, should be admitted into any other British country for visits, for the purpose of pleasure or commerce, including temporary residence for the purpose of education. The conditions of such visits should be regulated on the principle of reciprocity, as follows:—(a) the right of the Government of India is recognized to enact laws which shall have the effect of subjecting British citizens domiciled in any other British country to the same conditions in visiting India as those imposed on Indians desiring to visit such country; (b) such right of visit or temporary residence shall in each individual case be embodied in a passport or written permit issued by the country of domicile, and subject to visé there by an officer appointed by, and acting on behalf of, the country to be visited, if such country so desires; (c) such right shall not extend to a visit or temporary residence for labour purposes or to permanent settlement.

3. Indians already permanently domiciled in the other British countries should be allowed to bring in their wives and minor children on condition (a) that not more than one wife and her children shall be admitted for each such Indian, and (b) that each individual so admitted shall be certified by the Government of India as being the lawful wife or child of such Indian.

The Committee of the Privy Council concur in the foregoing report, and the recommendations therein contained, and recommend that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy thereof to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the information of His Majesty's Government.

All which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

MY LORD,
With reference to your predecessor's despatch of the 28th August last, Dominions No. 476,* transmitting a copy of a resolution† relative to reciprocity of treatment between India and the Dominions passed by the Imperial War Conference, together with a copy of a memorandum‡ on the subject by Mr. S. I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 19.

(S.C. 443/5.)

Commonwealth of Australia, Prime Minister,
Melbourne, 10th April, 1919.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,
With reference to the Secretary of State's letter of the 28th August, 1918, Dominions No. 476, I desire to inform Your Excellency that the documents transmitted have been considered, and Ministers have had the advantage also of perusing the report of the Conference dealing fully with the question of reciprocity of treatment between India and the Dominions.

As far as Australia is concerned the position is that in 1904 the Commonwealth Government agreed to permit the admission of Indian merchants, students, or tourists, with their wives, on passports for a period of one year, the question of subsequent stay to be considered on application.

In view of the resolution, and with the desire to give full effect to the spirit which animated the Conference, the Government is now prepared to extend the former arrangement so as to permit Indian merchants, students, and tourists to be admitted to Australia on passports, and to remain here indefinitely without the need for further application, so long as they preserve the capacity in respect of which the passport was issued.

In order that there may be no doubt as to the meaning which this Government attaches to the term "merchant," it is desired that the Indian Government should understand that the Commonwealth Government does not consider that the term "merchant" includes retail shopkeepers as such, or hawkers, but that its application is confined to persons engaged in the wholesale oversea trade between India and Australia.

It is further agreed that Indians already here permanently domiciled in the country may bring in a wife and minor children. To give effect to this it will be necessary in the first place for persons desiring to take advantage of the arrangement to apply to the Commonwealth Government, in order that their status may be ascertained, and it will be further necessary that the Indian Government should issue a certificate that the persons proposed to be admitted are the wives and children of the respective applicants.

The departure from Australia for India of any persons will not be permitted unless they are in possession of passports issued or visaed by the Commonwealth Government. No passports or visas will be given to persons if they are of such classes as would be objected to by the Government of India in the light of the agreement reached at the Conference.

* No. 8. † Resolution XXI: see page 5. ‡ Pages 245-248 of [Cd. 9177].

It is understood that the claims of Indians to enter Australia for the purpose of labour or permanent settlement are not pressed. It appears from the memorandum that Indians will be satisfied if they receive treatment not less favourable than that accorded to other Asiatic people who are not subjects of the British Empire. As Australia does not discriminate against Indians in favour of any other Asiatics, it is thought that the position should be regarded as satisfactory.

The main points of internal Australian administration which create a differentiation between Indians and Australian-born persons or white British subjects appear to be two: (1), exclusion from the Parliamentary franchise, and (2), exclusion from the privileges of the old age and invalid pension law. The Commonwealth Government, after giving the matter full consideration, regrets that it cannot see its way at present to admit Indians to the Parliamentary franchise; but, in regard to the old age and invalid pensions, legislative proposals will be submitted as soon as possible to place Indians on an equality with other British subjects.

I shall be pleased if Your Excellency will ask the Secretary of State to bring this communication under the notice of the Government of India, with an assurance of the sincere desire of this Government to work in most complete harmony with them in regard to all matters arising out of the agreement reached at the Imperial Conference.

Yours faithfully,
W. A. WATT,
Acting Prime Minister.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 318.)

SIR, Downing Street, 30th August, 1919.

With reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 95, of the 14th April,* relative to reciprocity of treatment between India and the Dominions, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that I duly communicated to the Secretary of State for India the letter addressed to you by your Acting Prime Minister on 10th April.

2. Mr. Montagu informs me that he welcomes the steps which the Commonwealth Government are prepared to take to give effect to Resolution XXI. of the Imperial War Conference, 1918. He notes that Indian visitors admitted to the Commonwealth in the capacity of merchants, students, or tourists, and their wives will be permitted to remain so long as they continue in the capacity in which they were admitted; and that Indians permanently domiciled are to be allowed to introduce into Australia a wife and minor children who are certificated by the Indian Government. In this connexion it is suggested that the most convenient procedure would be that any Indian resident in Australia applying to bring his wife or children should be required to submit on a prescribed form full particulars of their identity to the Commonwealth immigration authorities, who would then, if they were satisfied that he had no wife already in Australia, transmit the application for the authorities in India to verify and grant, or withhold, as the case might be, the necessary certificate.

3. Mr. Montagu further observes, with satisfaction, that legislation is to be introduced with a view to removing the disabilities of domiciled Indians in regard to old age and invalid pensions. He regrets that the Commonwealth Government cannot at present see their way to admitting Indians to the Parliamentary franchise, but he recognizes that the steps proposed, taken together, constitute a substantial advance from the point of view of India, and are an earnest of the sincere desire of the Commonwealth Government, expressed in the last paragraph of the Acting Prime Minister's letter, to work in harmony with the Government of India in all matters arising out of the agreement reached at the Imperial War Conference.

Claiming in its substance that as they are not Canadian citizens they do not come within the scope of the Military Service Act, local Hindus have issued a statement. It is their claim to the Government for exemption under the Act.

On reading the article in local papers that Hindus must register before 10th November, the petition says: "The Hindus held a meeting in the Sikh Temple on Sunday, and, having in view the staunch loyalty of Hindus to the British crown, the article was read and interpreted to the audience.

After discussion, it appears from the statement, a resolution was passed and instructions given to a committee to present it to the Canadian Government.

Lawful Rights Denied.

The resolution is to the effect that conscription should not be applied to Hindus as they are not citizens and have not been enjoying the full rights of citizens of Canada, "and, moreover, have no voice or hand whatsoever of any nature in the legislation of this country." The petition goes on to say: "Instead, we have been brutally deprived of the lawful and natural rights of humanity, such as the entrance of dear wives and children, who long to see us but are not permitted to land, and if we venture to go and see them we are afraid lest we should not be allowed to land again.

A Pointed Question.

"When we have no right to vote, then how can the Canadian Government expect to enlist us by force in the national service of a country where we are not allowed to enjoy the ordinary rights of citizens?" the petitioners will ask the Government.

"In spite of being a peaceful and law-abiding nation, we are not being treated as human beings," states a concluding paragraph. "We are barred from going into public places where everybody has a right to go, no matter what class or creed. Even there, we Hindus are held in contempt, such as restaurants, rooming houses, theatres and shows.

"We are loyal to the heart, however, and wish the success of British arms, and will do, and have been doing, our best for the cause."

Numbers Affected.

Hindu leaders say there are between 800 and 1,000 of their race scattered over British Columbia, 500 of whom are working about lumber mills in Vancouver, New Westminster, Fraser Mills and Victoria. There are less than a hundred in the capital and between two and three hundred in Vancouver. Of this total, however, they say a very small proportion, indeed, come between the ages of Class A men—20 to 30.

No Hindus in Vancouver have registered, and on the gentlemen of the turbans waiting upon Mr. Lennie, registrar under the Act, following their Sunday meeting, to express the views outlined in the petition quoted above, they were informed that he could do nothing for them either way, and referred them to the officer commanding the military district.

The petition will be sent immediately to the Government, when, it is expected, a public statement on the Government's proposed action will quickly follow, as the liability of the Hindu [?].*

The enlistment of Hindus under the Military Service Act can hardly have been in the contemplation of the Ottawa authorities. The Hindus are not citizens though they are British subjects, and, as such, come under the provisions of the conscription law. Sympathetic treatment might be given their case, however, particularly as Sir Robert Borden at the Imperial Conference this year when the principle of reciprocal treatment of Canadians in India and Indians in Canada was adopted, undertook on behalf of Canada to see that a fair and reasonable settlement of the Hindu question would be reached if possible.

HINDUS OBJECT TO CALL FOR SERVICE.

Being Denied Franchise, They Claim to be Outside Conscription.

Hindus are claiming exemption from the Military Service Law on the ground that it is not applicable to them so long as they are not given a franchise in Canada. Upon reading an article in the Province on 9th November, in which it was pointed out that Hindus must register now, leaders of the local colony called a meeting in the Sikh Temple and appointed a committee to make representations to the Government. The committee comprised Kapoor Singh, Sumond Singh, Lachman Singh, Gurdit Singh, Harbaus Singh, and Harman Singh. The Hindus' formal statement of their case follows:

"The conscription law can be applicable to the Canadian citizens only and not to us, the Hindus, as we are not the citizens of this country and have not been enjoying the full rights as real citizens, and moreover have no hand or voice whatsoever of any nature in the legislation of this country. Far from giving us the rights of public life, we have been brutally deprived of the lawful and natural rights of humanity such as the entrance of our dear wives and children, who long to see us but they are not permitted to land, and if we venture to go and see them we are afraid lest we should not be allowed to land again. In this connexion we did all we could by sending a delegation to Ottawa, London, and India, but a deaf ear was turned to all our entreaties and groans, though the landing of our wives and children was no favour to us but a justice.

"When we have no right to vote, then how can the Canadian Government expect to enlist us by force in the national service of a country where we are not allowed to enjoy the ordinary rights of a citizen?

"In spite of our being a peaceful and law-abiding nation we are not being treated as human beings, as we are barred from going into public places where everybody has a right to go no matter what class or creed, but even there we Hindus are held in contempt, such as restaurants, rooming-houses, theatres and shows.

NOBLE RED MAN SHIES AT KHAKI.

B.C. Indians so Anxious to Avoid Fighting they even Engage Lawyer to Plead Cause.

Victoria, 13th Nov.—The British Columbia Coast Indians are up in arms against the conscription measure. A large number of excited Indians paraded the city thoroughfares yesterday, coming as duly elected representatives of the East Coast tribes located between Nanaimo and Victoria. In the native tongue these Indians are expressing their sentiments. They have a strong grievance against the white man, which has particular reference to the application of the provisions of the Military Service Act. These native delegates express themselves as strongly opposed to being forced to serve their country under arms. While they are law-abiding citizens, the eligible Indians are not over eager to don khaki, and their mission here is to express the disapproval of the military measure by the natives as a whole. They propose to put their cases in the hands of lawyers in an effort to fight the measure as it affects the natives of the Island.

It is understood that all Indians who do not live on the Government reserves are liable to service under the Conscription Act. The reserve Indians have no vote and are looked upon as minors in the eyes of the law.

Registrar Lennie Tells Petitioners He Can do Nothing for Them.

Yesterday Registrar Lennie told a deputation of nine Hindus who appeared asking exemption for the local Hindu colony, that he could do nothing for them, and that they would have to report for service at the First Depot Battalion at Hastings Park.

Offices within the jurisdiction of the post office inspector on the mainland are continuing to report on their last day's registrations, and yesterday afternoon 1,445 registration forms were turned over to Registrar Lennie's office. Of these 1,228 were exemption claims. The total now stands at 2,798 applications for service and 9,441 claims for immunity. The exemption claims include many duplicates.

SIR,

India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 30th January, 1918.

IN reply to Mr. Lambert's letter, dated 15th January,* on the attitude of the Hindu population of the Dominion towards the Canadian Military Service Act, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India to state, for the information of Mr. Secretary Long, that, under Army Council Instruction No. 1771/16, dated 12th September, 1916 (copy enclosed), natives of India of unmixed Asiatic descent, and men whose fathers are or were natives of India of unmixed Asiatic descent, are not to be called up for service under the British Military Service Acts. The effect of that instruction read with article 1 of the agreement with France, dated 4th October, 1917, respecting the liability to military service of British subjects resident in France, is that certificates of exemption from military service are granted to Indians in France.

I am to suggest that the Dominion Government should be invited to consider whether Indians resident in Canada should not be placed on the same footing as regards liability to military service as they now are in the United Kingdom and France.

(P.C. 111.)

Privy Council, Canada.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA, THURSDAY, THE 17TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1918.

Present:

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

WHEREAS petitions and memorials have been received from and on behalf of Indians pointing out that, in view of their not having any right to vote, they should, although natural-born British subjects, not be compelled to perform military service, and that in the negotiations of certain treaties expressions were used indicating that Indians would not be so compelled, an instance of this recently brought forward being the expression of the Lieutenant-Governor in negotiating the North West Angle Treaty as it appears in the despatch of the 14th of October, 1873, quoted in Morris's "Treaties of Canada with Indians," pages 50 and 69;

And whereas petitions and memorials have also been received from and on behalf of persons formerly subjects of the Emperor of Japan but naturalized in Canada, pointing out that, although naturalized, they are not in the Provinces in which they reside entitled to vote under the existing franchise laws, and that, since they are consequently not entitled to any benefit by reason of their naturalization, either within or beyond Canada, the obligation to perform military service should not be imposed upon them by law;

And whereas in the War Time Elections Act, 7-8 George V., chapter 39, Parliament provided that the naturalized persons thereby deprived of the franchise should, by reason of that deprivation, be relieved from the duty of performing combatant military service, and it would appear just and reasonable that a similar course should be pursued in relation to other disfranchised persons, whether natural born or naturalized subjects of His Majesty;

And whereas, in view of the foregoing, the Acting Minister of Justice on the recommendation of the Central Appeal Judge and with the concurrence of the Military Service Council, has recommended that the following Regulations be added to the Military Service Regulations:

Therefore His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, by virtue of the powers conferred on the Governor in Council by the Military Service Act, 1917, the War Measures Act, 1914, or otherwise, is pleased to make the following additional Military Service Regulations, and the same are hereby made and enacted accordingly:—

Regulations.

14A. Any British subject who, under the laws in force from time to time, is disqualified from voting at a Dominion election otherwise than under Section 67 of the Dominion Elections Act, R.S.C., 1906, or Section 6 of the War Time Elections Act, 7-8 George V., chapter 39, shall be entitled to exemption from combatant military or naval service, unless he has in fact voted at a Dominion election although at the time disqualified from so doing.

18A. Any Indian Agent may make application for the exemption of any Indian attached to the Reserve over which such agent has jurisdiction, and it shall not be necessary for the Registrar to assign to a local tribunal any application made or transmitted by an Indian Agent on behalf of an Indian, but the Registrar shall forthwith issue to such Indian and transmit to the Indian Agent for delivery to him a certificate of exemption from combatant military service. In the event of any man thus exempted from combatant military service being hereafter called upon to perform any military duty he may then put forward any claim for exemption even from non-combatant service which he may then have.

WHEREAS a despatch, dated 14th February, 1918, has been received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, together with copy of a letter from the India Office, on the subject of East Indians in Canada as regards liability to military service;

And whereas the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs represents that in this letter it is set forth, by direction of the Secretary of State for India, that under the Army Council Instructions No. 1771/16, dated 12th September, 1916, natives of India of unmixed Asiatic descent are not to be called up for service under the British Military Service Act; and the effect of that instruction, read with Article 1 of the agreement with France, dated 4th October, 1917, respecting the liability to military service of British subjects resident in France, is that certificates of exemption from military service are granted to Indians in France;

Civic Status of Orientals.

When Honourable N. W. Rowell spoke in Vancouver the other day he explained, among other things, the status to be accorded our Hindu population. Those of them who are already here will be allowed to remain and to import their wives—one wife for each Hindu. No more male Hindus of the labouring class will be admitted.

A point upon which he failed to touch is the political status of these Orientals. They are British subjects. Are they and their children to be eligible to vote and hold office in Canada? British Columbia may continue to refuse to place them on the voters' lists for provincial purposes, but the Dominion authorities can give them the federal franchise if such a course is judged proper. Will it be done? Is this phase of the matter covered by the agreement made at the Imperial Conference?

And, as far as that is concerned, hasn't the time about come for the Province of British Columbia to revise to some extent its attitude with regard to all of our Asiatic residents? There is no danger of this Province ever being other than a white man's country. Why should there continue to be a distinction of civic status among persons who have been born and brought up here?

The Dominion Government, in the War Time Election Act, abolished this distinction in so far as it concerned those who have enlisted. Would any harm be done if the Provincial Government were to follow suit?

MY LORD, Government House, Ottawa, 10th March, 1919.

I have the honour to inform you that application has been made to the Department of Immigration by an East Indian, named Babu Singh, for permission to bring his wife into British Columbia from India. It has been stated, however, that as he has resided away from her for more than three years she has taken advantage of a provision of India law which enables her, by making a public declaration, to separate herself legally from her husband. It is desired by the Department of Immigration to ascertain whether there be such a law in India recognized by the Indian Government, as, if that is the case, it would have a material effect on the recognition of women as the legal wives of East Indians domiciled in Canada.

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 19th May, 1919.)

(Extract.)

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W., 17th May, 1919.
I am directed by the Secretary of State for India to refer to Sir H. Lambert's letter of 4th April,* transmitting copy of a despatch† from the Governor-General of Canada, which raises the question of the law of separation between husbands and wives in India, in connexion with the subject of the admission of wives of British Indians domiciled in the Dominion.

In reply, I am to forward, for the information of Viscount Milner, extract from a memorandum by the Legal Adviser at this Office dealing with the position in the Punjab, i.e., the Province from which most of the immigrants in Canada, and presumably the Babu Singh referred to, were drawn. With reference to the memorandum, I am to suggest that it may be desirable to point out to the Canadian Government that in British India the religious laws of non-Christians are, in such matters as marriage, fully recognized and administered by the British Courts. Thus there is no general or territorial marriage law in India, Hindus being bound by Hindu law, and Mohammedans by Mohammedan law. I am to add that the Sikhs, to which community most of these settlers belong, are in this matter, practically speaking, bound by Hindu law or custom. It will therefore be seen that in the majority of districts of the Punjab, among the Sikh community, the Hindu law prevails, and a wife cannot be released from her husband on any ground whatever, but that in some districts a wife's claim to separation may be recognized by local custom in the event of the husband's absence through emigration for a number of years or of his disappearance. The law in any particular case would depend on the district in which the immigrant had resided in India.

It does not appear to Mr. Montagu that this diversity of custom, in so far as it affects the Indian immigrant in Canada, need cause any embarrassment to the authorities in the Dominion in recognizing the legal status of the wives and children who are to be admitted in accordance with Resolution XXI. of the Imperial War Conference, 1918.‡ In accordance with the terms of that Resolution (3) (b), the onus of deciding whether any individual, for whose admission an immigrant applies, is his lawful wife or child, will lie upon the Government of India, which will have to settle any difficult question that may arise owing to the law to which such applicant is subject, and will give or withhold its certificate as the case may be. The terms of the Resolution seem to be expressly framed in such a way as will obviate any difficulty of this nature.

At the same time I am to suggest, for Viscount Milner's consideration, that the possibility that the wife of an immigrant may separate herself from him as a result of his immigration increases the hardship of the present position in such cases as may exist where the immigrant is subject to a customary law of this character, and provides an additional argument for hastening such administrative or legislative action as may be required to give effect in Canada to the terms of the Resolution which was wholeheartedly accepted by her representatives at the Conference.

I have, &c.,
P. H. DUMBELL.

* 18955: not printed.

Enclosure in No. 31.

It is provided by the Punjab Laws Act that in questions regarding, amongst other things, marriage and divorce, the rule of decision shall be (a) any custom applicable to the parties which is not contrary to justice, equity or good conscience, and has not been altered or abolished by legislative enactment or declared to be void by any competent authority; (b) the Mohammedan law in cases where the parties are Mohammedan, and the Hindu law where the parties are Hindus,* except in so far as such law has been altered or abolished by legislative enactment or has been modified by any such custom as is above referred to.

Owing to the extraordinary diversity of custom, in different districts, disputes regarding customs are very common in the Punjab, and the local Government has accordingly prepared a record of customs district by district.

One of the questions to which attention has been specially directed refers to the grounds, if any, on which a married woman may claim to be released from the marriage tie. In the majority of the district records it is stated that among Hindus the ordinary Hindu law prevails in this matter, and a wife cannot claim to be released on any ground whatever. In others, it is stated that she may claim release when the husband changes his religion or has become a leper or insane. In the Ferozepore record it is stated that there are many instances of a woman whose husband has emigrated remarrying after a few years, but there is a difference of opinion as to whether the husband may claim his wife if he returns. In the Ludhiana record it is stated that if a husband disappears and the wife is ignorant of his whereabouts she may marry again, and the second marriage is not invalidated by the reappearance of the first husband, and that cases have occurred when a wife has remarried when her husband has been transported.

SIR, British Consulate-General, Batavia, 17th July, 1917.

I HAVE the honour to report that in December last year the British Indian firm of F. K. Hoondamall & Company, of Medan, inquired, through the Vice-Consul at that port, as to the restrictions that would be imposed by the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia on the immigration into Australia of British Indians and the opening of a branch of that firm at Melbourne.

2. In reply to my inquiries His Excellency the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia stated that, if it were the intention of the firm merely to open a branch and leave it in charge of a permanent resident, the admittance of the members of the firm in charge of such opening might, under certain circumstances, be permitted for a period of twelve months in the first place. If, however, this were not the intention of the firm, His Excellency desired to be furnished with particulars as to the nature and extent of their business, before consideration could be given to the question of granting them any further concessions.

3. The desired particulars were forwarded to Melbourne in due course, and I inquired whether the Commonwealth was then in a position to grant the firm any further concessions under the circumstances.

4. I have the honour to enclose copy of the Governor-General's reply, in which His Excellency states that it would be inconsistent with the intention of the Commonwealth Parliament and with administrative practices to grant the desired authority.

5. I have instructed the Vice-Consul at Medan to communicate this decision in general terms to the firm in question, without however, giving details of the reasons.

6. I am not aware what exactly is meant by the "intention of the Commonwealth Parliament and administrative practices," unless this refers merely to the restrictions on the immigration of coloured nationals into Australia, but I have the honour to report this concrete instance of refusal of admittance to British Indians into Australia in view of the discussions at present taking place relative to the extension of equal privileges to all classes of subjects within the British Empire, and in view of the loyal and considerable participation by British Indian subjects in the War both at the front, and as a specific case as far as the British Indians in Sumatra are concerned, by their exceedingly generous attitude towards war charities such as the British Red Cross Fund, to which they have contributed continually ever since the War began.

7. I venture to suggest that, with the concurrence of the Government of India, the Government of the Commonwealth be approached with a view to relaxing the restrictions now in force upon the immigration of British Indians into Australia, because the time would seem to be ripe for the promotion of oversea trade to the benefit both of Australia as well as India, so that more perfect and intimate relations may be woven between these two most important partner-nations of the British Commonwealth to the detriment of German trade after the War.

SIR, London, S.W.1, 22nd September, 1917.

WITH reference to the Foreign Office memorandum of the 20th instant,* which is understood to have been communicated to your Department, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Montagu to inquire whether he may be favoured by Mr. Secretary Long with his opinion on the case. Prima facie, the action of the Commonwealth Government would appear to be based on section 4 (3) (j) of the Australian Immigration Act of 1912, in connexion with which I am to invite reference to the correspondence ending with Mr. Lambert's letter of the 13th February, 1913.†

SIR, Downing Street, 10th October, 1917.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Long to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd September‡ regarding the admittance of British Indians into Australia, and to request you to inform Mr. Secretary Montagu that, as the correspondence furnished by His Majesty's Consul-General at Batavia is incomplete, the full intention of the letter of the 8th June§ from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia is not clear.

2. Apparently, however, the application of the British Indian firm of F. K. Hoondamall was treated as one for a special certificate of exemption under section 4 of the Immigration Act, 1901-1912.

3. Mr. Long observes that Mr. Beckett has sent a copy of his despatch to the Governor-General, but he does not think it advisable to communicate with the Commonwealth Government in the matter, as he feels strongly that any attempt to hasten unduly a decision on the question of the entry of Indians into Australia, or to force the Commonwealth Government into a declaration of policy, would be most ill-advised.

I am, &c.,

HENRY LAMBERT.

Commonwealth of Australia, Prime Minister,
Melbourne, 4th October, 1917.

SIR,

WITH reference to the despatch dated 17th July, 1917, from His Britannic Majesty's Consul-General at Batavia, on the subject of the admission of British Indians into Australia, I have the honour to invite Your Excellency to be so good as to inform the Consul-General that the Government and people of the Commonwealth are by no means unmindful of the powerful assistance that has been rendered by the Government and people of India in the prosecution of the War; and in no portion of the Empire have the valiant deeds of the Indian soldiers in France, Gallipoli, and Mesopotamia excited warmer admiration than in the Commonwealth of Australia.

The decision which has occasioned the Consul-General's letter was therefore given out of no feeling of disrespect to the people of India, but only in accord with what has long since been established as the settled policy of Australia.

The Consul-General is doubtless familiar with the terms of the Immigration Act, but he may not be aware that the form of this law was adopted in direct consequence of the representations of the Imperial Government. The object of the law, as is well known, was to prevent the introduction of Asiatic and Polynesian races into Australia, and though the law does not particularly refer to any races its administration has always been conducted with that specific end in view.

It is the practically unanimous desire of the people of Australia that this continent should be peopled by white races, and it is universally believed that this ideal cannot be achieved or maintained if free admission is permitted to people who, however worthy they may be and dignified their traditions, for social or economic reasons cannot be assimilated into our community. Trade reasons have no relation to, and derogate nothing from, the standings of races that biologically may not be adapted to form a composite whole.

The Consul-General will therefore understand that the reference to the policy of Parliament in the previous communication meant the principles which the Parliament had in view in passing the Immigration Act, and the administrative practices referred to are those rules of departmental procedure which have been laid down to give effect to that policy.

I do not propose at the present time to anticipate discussions which may arise at the end of the War, should any suggestions be made by the Imperial Government to the Dominions to modify their policy with regard to the Indian people, further than to say that I see no indication of any willingness on the part of the people of the Commonwealth to abandon principles which they believe are essential for their very existence.

I am heartily in accord with the suggestion of the Consul-General that an endeavour should be made to promote the oversea trade and the most effective relations of friendship and co-operation between India and Australia, and any specific means of combating German influences or ousting them from the trading position which they occupied prior to August, 1914, will receive the attention of this Government, but the specific case which he had in view appears to have no bearing on that aspect of our commercial relations.

It is now over ten years since an arrangement was made with the Indian Government similar to that in force with regard to Japanese and other people, under which bona fide merchants or tourists from that country were allowed to visit Australia, but, while the Japanese have taken extensive advantage of that arrangement, I am not aware that the people of India have made use of it to any appreciable degree. Unfortunately the class of Indians who in the past used to come to Australia were not, in most cases, of the commercial orders. They were nearly always mere labourers or hawkers.

While on the whole they have proved themselves respectable law-abiding men, their presence is not desired, and no additions to their numbers can be permitted.

The admission of the particular persons to whom the Consul-General referred would undoubtedly have involved a serious departure from the settled policy of Australia, and would have created a precedent leading possibly to the introduction of substantial numbers of persons of a class whose admission the law was designed to prevent.

I have, &c.,
W. M. HUGHES.

Governor General,
His Excellency
The Right Honourable
Sir R. C. Munro-Ferguson, P.C., G.C.M.G., of 1917 and 1918.

No. 37.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 21st February, 1919.)

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 8th January, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that I have referred to my Ministers, for their consideration, your despatch, Dominions No. 476, of the 28th August,* on the subject of the treatment of British Indians in the Self-governing Dominions. I have not yet received the views of the Union Government on the resolution† of the Imperial Conference or on the questions affecting South Africa which were raised by Sir S. P. Sinha in his memorandum.‡ Ministers will no doubt desire to discuss the subject with Mr. Burton, and, as he has been in Pretoria only for a very short time since his return, I have not mentioned the matter. I shall take an early opportunity of doing so, but, in the meantime, I think it well to send you my own views on the various questions involved.

2. The number of Indians in Natal is about 135,000 (against a white population of 120,000), in the Cape Province 7,000, in the Transvaal 10,000, and in the Orange Free State only a few hundreds. The most important, and, I think, the most difficult problem affecting these people is that of the issue of trading licences. Apart from those who are waiters or domestic servants, most of the Indians in the Cape and the Transvaal, and many of those in Natal, are engaged in wholesale or retail trade. As traders they are in direct competition with the only other trading community in the country, the European. In some branches of trade, such as hawking and peddling, the Indians have a practical monopoly; as shopkeepers and wholesale merchants they are as yet only formidable competitors. The European view appears to be that the position of the white shopkeeper is being more and more seriously menaced by the extension of Asiatic trading; and, indeed, the growing vehemence of the denunciations of local authorities by the Indian community to some extent confirms this opinion. I have endeavoured to test the accuracy of the current statements on both sides by actual figures of licences issued to Asiatics and to other persons in each Province over a period of years, but, in the absence of any proper record of Asiatic applications, I have been unable to obtain any such figures.

3. I attach a memorandum on the requirements of the present licensing laws in the Cape, the Transvaal, and Natal. In view of the suggestion made by Sir S. P. Sinha that there should be "the fullest right of appeal to the Provincial Division of the Supreme Court," I have thought it desirable in the memorandum also to explain the powers of the Courts in each Province, and to refer to some of the many decisions affecting Indians. I may here briefly review, and on certain points supplement, what is said in the memorandum.

4. In the Transvaal the Magistrates' Courts have established, I think, beyond question, their right on appeal to consider the merits of applications, and not merely the correctness of the procedure before the local authority. It is characteristic of Transvaal legislation that an appeal should be allowed from the Town Council to the Magistrate, and not to the Supreme Court. Since the days of Crown Colony Government the Magistrates in this Province have had more extensive judicial and administrative powers than those of other Provinces. The Transvaal has a strong magisterial bench, and Indians can be confident of obtaining substantial justice. On the other hand, there are signs of a possible agitation for an amendment of the present Ordinance, which would leave municipal authorities free to persecute Indian traders. I enclose a Press report* of a public meeting held recently in Krugersdorp, from which you will see the trend of, at any rate, one section of public opinion. Krugersdorp has for years been a dying town, owing to the disappointing development of the reef at that end of the Rand, and it is probably difficult for any trader to make a living there; but similar meetings have been held in other towns in the Transvaal, and there is no doubt as to the strength of the anti-Indian group.

5. In the Cape the legal position is perhaps less satisfactory than in the Transvaal. The Courts are reluctant to intervene, partly because the wording of the Ordinance does not encourage intervention, but also no doubt owing to the greater respect felt for local authorities in the Province in which they have been longest in existence. The Administrator has used the limited power of review allowed him by the Ordinance in at least one recent instance, and that against the Cape Town City Council; but his action led to a strong protest from the rate-payers, which would have intimidated any Administrator who was not, like Sir Frederick de Waal, temperamentally incapable of being intimidated. As regards public opinion, it is true that the Indians have the municipal franchise in the Cape, and also that there is no real colour bar in that Province. But it must be remembered that the total Indian population of the Cape is less than seven thousand souls, so that their power of influencing municipal elections is not very great; and the colour bar is more a matter concerning the artisan and labouring classes than the trading community. On the whole, the Press report,† which I attach, of a discussion the other day in the Cape Town City Council on Indian licences, probably reflects present European opinion in that Province.

6. Natal is the real home of the South African Indian. The people of that Province deliberately fostered Indian immigration, and they owe much of their prosperity to the Indians. This is often forgotten in Natal, but some sense of the obligation persists in the licensing laws. They go further than those of any other Province to meet the Indian demand for justice, and the officials and Courts which have interpreted them appear on the whole to have done their work in a liberal spirit. As Sir William Solomon's Commission of 1914 pointed out, half the objections to Indian applications for licences in Natal come from other Indians. In the other Provinces the Indian traders are a small minority competing against Europeans; in Natal the Indian population is larger by one-third than the European. From time to time strong local prejudice against Indian traders comes to light. In a recent licensing case which made some stir, that of Kavodia versus The Dundee Chamber of Commerce, it was brought out in Court that the Chamber of Commerce had retained a solicitor to oppose all applications by Asiatics to the Licensing Officer, whether for new licences, transfers, or renewals. But Dundee, like Krugersdorp, is a stagnant, even a moribund, community; and I can find no evidence that in the normally prosperous towns, such as Durban, Indians who are fit and proper persons to hold licences have any difficulty in obtaining them.

7. This, briefly, is the position in each Province to-day. If I am asked what practical steps can be taken to remove causes of friction and to provide further safeguards in the interests of the individual Indian, I can only reply in the words which Mr. Gandhi used in his last public speech in South Africa in 1914:—"Most Indians are natural traders. There are bound to be trade jealousies and those various things that come from competition. I have never been able to find a solution of this most difficult problem." It is no doubt wrong in principle that a Town Council, many of the members of which are trade rivals, should be the authority empowered to issue licences to Indians. It would be more satisfactory if such licences were issued by officers of the Union Government, such as the Magistrates. But I can see no prospect of any such change being brought about. The great majority of the Indians whose applications are refused are undoubtedly persons who, for sound reasons of public health, are unfit to hold licences for the sale of food; and it is inconceivable that local authorities would admit any outside official, even a Magistrate, as the arbiter of its public health by-laws. Again, while it is right that Indians and all other applicants for licences and objectors against the grant of licences should have access to the Courts, a wide discretion must clearly be left to the original licensing authority unless the Courts are to be flooded with trivial actions that cannot possibly be sustained. It would, of course, be desirable that the legal position should be the same in all Provinces, but there seems little prospect at the moment of obtaining any such uniformity, and the attempt, if unsuccessful, might leave the Indians in a much less favourable situation than at present.

8. It is possible that the system of Provincial Government may be radically altered. In that event a general reconsideration of the licensing laws might be necessary, and special attention could then be drawn to the position of the Indians. But, unless and until some change takes place, and provided that the present licensing laws remain in force, I feel grave doubt as to the wisdom of any attempt to benefit the Indians through the intervention of the Union Government. If in any Province legislation were contemplated limiting the rights now enjoyed by the Indians (e.g., if the incipient agitation in the Transvaal led to any proposal in the Provincial Council for the abolition of the appeal to a Magistrate) an entirely new situation would arise, and there would be every reason for strong representations to the Union Government.

9. In close relation to the subject of trading licences is that of the ownership of fixed property in the Transvaal, which is also mentioned by Sir S. P. Sinha. Most Indians who wish to acquire fixed property intend to use it for purposes of trade; and those Europeans who object to the acquisition do so, not because they think it wrong in principle that an Indian should own property at all, but because they do not wish to see new Indian businesses set up in localities inhabited by Europeans, thereby depreciating the value of property generally and diminishing their own trade profits.

10. The legal position is simple enough. By Law 3 of 1885 of the South African Republic Asiatics are prohibited from owning fixed property in the Transvaal. For years they evaded the prohibition by the costly process of arranging for property to be acquired and registered in the name of a European, who then passed a bond in favour of the Asiatic. In 1916, however, the Supreme Court ruled that the prohibition contained in Law 3 of 1885 was of no effect against a limited liability company, even though the incorporators of that company were all Asiatics. This decision has enabled Indians to acquire fixed property freely in the Transvaal by forming limited liability companies of two or more persons under the Transvaal Company Law—a privilege of which they have naturally not been slow to take advantage. The Indians now press for the repeal of Law 3 of 1885, whilst a strong section of the Europeans demands an amendment of the Company Law which will effectively prevent further acquisition of fixed property by Asiatics.

11. This question bristles with difficulties. The encroachment of Asiatic property owners in townships in which Europeans predominate is undoubtedly a serious menace to the European community. On the other hand, if Asiatics are expelled from such townships—expropriation is frequently suggested by rate-payers' associations and similar bodies—it is not clear where they are to go. The bazaars are usually indicated as their appropriate refuge, but even if the number of bazaars were much increased there is no reason to believe that Indian traders would lose their customers (most of whom are the poorer classes of Europeans) as long as they were able to undersell the white trader. The Indians could not be prevented from delivering goods outside the bazaars.

† Cape Times, 29th November, 1918.

12. It is no doubt the intrinsic difficulties of the subject which have led both the South African Party and the Unionists to shirk it. I am convinced that the longer the question can be kept in the background the better it will be for the Indians. A decision may be forced in a year or two, when the Bill to consolidate the Company Laws of the four Provinces comes before Parliament. That Bill was drafted some years ago, but has been held back owing to the uncertainty as to the legislation which would be introduced in the United Kingdom as a result of the War to regulate the position of alien shareholders. The Union Government have, at the request of certain municipalities on the Witwatersrand, undertaken to consider the question of limited liability companies of Asiatics when the new Company Law is being prepared. All the information before me suggests that it would be impossible for any political party for some time to come to support the Indian request for the repeal of Law 3 of 1885, and the maintenance of the present position is the most that can be hoped for. For this reason I feel that the Indians would be extremely ill-advised to press for the repeal, or even to refer at all to their claims to be on an equality with Europeans as regards the ownership of property. They have the substance, and if they ask for the shadow they are likely to lose both.

13. The suggestion that the municipal franchise, or both the municipal and parliamentary franchises, should be extended to Indians in all the Provinces of the Union raises many difficult questions.

14. As regards the parliamentary franchise, I need hardly remind you that there is no Union franchise law. In each Province the qualification is that which existed in that Colony before Union. It is no secret that the work of the National Convention would have broken down if a common Union franchise qualification had been insisted on. The differences of opinion which confronted the National Convention do not appear to be any less acute to-day. Sooner or later a Union Government must face the question; but there is a general disposition at the present time to leave things as they are. It may ultimately be found that the problem of the native and coloured vote can be circumvented, and that the solution lies in the creation of special electorates. But it does not seem to me that there is much prospect for some years to come of a Government in the Union strong enough to carry out any such radical policy. Nor do I think it likely that any Government which was not prepared to undertake a general revision of the franchise laws would be either willing or able to enfranchise the Indian population or any part of it. For these reasons I am glad to think that Sir S. P. Sinha does not press for the parliamentary franchise, and, indeed, recognizes the obstacles in the way before the Indians could obtain it.

15. The claim of the Indians to the municipal franchise is no doubt stronger, but the real difficulty to be overcome is substantially the same. In the Cape the Indians already have the franchise, "every person of full age" who has the necessary property qualification being entitled to be enrolled as a municipal elector. In Natal, also, they have the municipal franchise. In my despatch No. 506, of 26th June, 1917,* I sent you a report on a draft Municipal Ordinance for Natal which contained a clause disfranchising Indians. As I explained to you, the draft had been prepared by a municipal association, and was not an official draft. The natural anxiety felt by Natal Indians over the disfranchising clause has since been set at rest; the Executive Committee of the Province refused to accept the clause, and the Ordinance passed the Provincial Council as Ordinance 11 of 1918, in a form entirely acceptable to the Indian community. It is thus only the Transvaal Indians whose claim to be allowed to vote at municipal elections remains unsatisfied. Under the Transvaal law the municipal franchise is restricted to "white persons." The natives and the Cape coloured people are under the same disability as the Indians. This exclusion of all persons who are not white from the elementary duties and privileges of citizenship is a part of the deliberate policy of the "colour bar" which still prevails in the Transvaal. How long that policy can be maintained is daily more in doubt. It has been publicly condemned by the Chief Magistrate of the Transkei as the principal underlying cause of recent native unrest on the Rand; it is repudiated by a growing body of intelligent opinion; it is widely recognized to be economically unsound and, indeed, untenable. On the other hand, there is the dead weight of the uninformed and unreasoning masses in favour of maintaining the colour bar at all costs. It is perhaps a good sign that the views of this section appear to be daily more extreme; and there are indications that the policy must before long be submitted to a critical test in the mining and industrial spheres. It is a fatal weakness of the policy that, if a concession is made at one point, others must rapidly follow. For this reason the Indians would, I think, be wise to await the changes which the immediate future may bring before raising an agitation for the municipal vote.

16. There remains the question of the Railway Regulations. My Confidential despatch of 7th August last* contained a full report on this particular Indian grievance, and I wish here only to add one or two observations to what I said then. There are certain passages in Sir S. P. Sinha's memorandum which would, I feel sure, be regarded here as not fairly representing the effect of the Regulations; and there are others which leave it open to grave doubt what would be required to satisfy Indian opinion.

17. The memorandum suggests that the Regulations "extend to other Provinces of the Union (i.e., than the Transvaal) a racial discrimination not hitherto known there." As I pointed out in my despatch of 7th August, it has been the practice for many years in all Provinces to set aside separate accommodation as far as possible for different races. The Regulation, which follows exactly the wording of a Union statute, does not give the Railway authorities any power to discriminate against Indians which they did not previously exercise in the Cape or Natal. The only effect of the Act and the Regulation is to place it on record that the policy of the Union Parliament is to provide separate accommodation of all kinds for persons of different races. There is no departure from "the principle of equality under the law." As far as the Regulation can be said to discriminate against any race or class of persons, it discriminates against Europeans with as much force as against any other race.

18. It is far from clear what provision it is suggested should be made for Indian travellers. The memorandum states that "segregation in travelling would only be tolerable if designed by statute, where exactly equal opportunities and facilities were provided for the different races affected. This is impossible for financial reasons." The segregation at present practised is, however, "designed by statute," and, while it is impossible, not only for financial reasons, to carry it out completely at once, there is no reason why the policy should not gradually be put into full operation; and, indeed, the Railway Administration have every intention, and have repeatedly and publicly expressed that intention, of providing equal facilities as rapidly as possible. By "equal facilities" I mean such an arrangement of train services and of rolling stock that each Indian or coloured or native passenger may find no more difficulty in obtaining accommodation amongst people of his own race, whether he has bought a first-, a second-, or a third-class ticket, than a European would find. I would add that this seems to me the only fair or possible policy in the conditions of this country, and that the Indians would be wise frankly to recognize this.

19. It may be said that the only conclusion from my remarks on these questions is that little or nothing is likely to be done for some time by legislation to redress outstanding grievances of the Indian community in the Union. The conclusion would be justified. I have tried to indicate that a settlement of these questions is dependent on a change in the public opinion of Europeans in the Union. In the letter which he wrote to General Smuts after the 1914 settlement, Mr. Gandhi explained why he had declined to meet the wishes of many of his countrymen that he should include licensing and land ownership questions amongst those for a settlement of which the passive resistance movement was to be carried on. He said: "I have told my countrymen that they will have to exercise patience, and by all honourable means at their disposal educate public opinion so as to enable the Government of the day to go further than the present correspondence does." These questions are essentially amongst those on which no Government, whatever its own views, could hope to legislate unless there were a strong body of public opinion behind it. It does not appear to me that that force of opinion yet exists; but it would, I think, be wrong to conclude from individual licensing scandals, or from the speeches made at public meetings, such as those at Krugersdorp and Boksburg, to which I have referred above, that the country is sinking deeper into the mire of colour and racial prejudice. Indeed, in spite of such outward manifestations to the contrary, there are, I am glad to think, indications that those prejudices are weakening. On the negative side, it must be remembered that the Press in this country, speaking generally, is far from reflecting the sober opinions of the average man; it is much too fond of working up artificial sensations. The real enemies of Indian applicants for licences, particularly in the Transvaal, are not, as one might gather from the newspapers, all British subjects pur sang, inspired by a disinterested determination to make this "a white man's country." Most of them are aliens from the ends of the earth—Jews from Russia, Poland, and Galicia, Portuguese and Neapolitans, Greeks and Dalmatians. Their presence here is regretted by the ordinary English or Dutch citizen at least as keenly as that of the Indians. Their influence in public affairs is no doubt greater than it ought to be, but it is much less than the Press would have us believe.

20. But, apart from such negative indications, there is valuable positive evidence of a more benevolent attitude towards Indians. The loyalty of the Indian Empire and the brilliant part taken by its people in the War, have undoubtedly made a deep impression. The ignorance of the ordinary South African in regard to India and the Indians has been abysmal; he has known nothing of their affairs and has felt no interest in them. That attitude is changed. It is not only that India has been prominent in the Press during the last four years; many thousands of South Africans have fought side by side with Indian troops in East Africa, and have lived on terms of mutual respect, and even of comradeship, with them. No complete and immediate revulsion of feeling can be expected here. Old prejudices die hard, and it must not be forgotten that there is a genuine and serious conflict of interests at many points between Indians and Europeans in South Africa. But the experiences of the War have introduced a leaven of understanding and sympathy into the public opinion of this country which is bound to modify that opinion in an ever-increasing degree. I need only give two illustrations of the change which has already come about. For years the Indian community fought for the right to travel on the municipal tramcars in Johannesburg. About three years ago they were allowed to occupy the half-dozen back seats on the outside of each car. Even this concession was resented by the public, and there was more than one unfortunate incident in which an unoffending Indian was flung off a car. To-day it is common to see Indians taking their seats without question anywhere on the outside of the cars. My other illustration is, perhaps, more important, if less significant of the altered views of the man in the street. During the last session of Parliament a Unionist Member gave notice of a motion calling for legislation so to amend the Company Law of the Transvaal as to prevent persons prohibited by law from holding land from evading that prohibition by turning themselves into limited liability companies. The Indians were not mentioned in the motion, although it was directed against them alone. (I have referred above to this popular method of evading Law 3 of 1885.) The Unionist Member was an ambitious and energetic young man, anxious to shine with his constituents. A lively agitation was worked up on the Rand through the Ratepayers' Associations and the branches of the Unionist Party. The subject was boomed by the Johannesburg Press. The Member travelled all the way to the Rand to address a "crowded and enthusiastic" meeting of his supporters. Before the day arrived for which the motion had been put down it was postponed. It was postponed for a second time, and, after an inglorious career of a month on the Order Paper, disappeared altogether. The explanation was that the Member had been told both by his own Party and the Government, who between them represented three-fourths of the House, that he must withdraw his motion.

21. I would only say, in conclusion, that the future of the Indians in South Africa seems to depend largely on themselves. If they will refrain from all extreme and provocative agitation, while allowing no opportunity to pass of impressing their reasonable aspirations on the European population, I cannot doubt that they will in time come to be regarded as a useful and influential section of the community. At the present time they feel, I think, the want of a leader. In Mr. Gandhi they lost one of the most remarkable men of their race, to whose courage, high character, and, to a European, almost incomprehensible purity of motive, they owe most of what they have gained during the last twelve years. The recent death of Mr. Cachalia has removed the only one of the Enigenoi who seemed able to speak with authority for the great mass of his countrymen in the Union. Moving in a different plane from Mr. Gandhi, Mr. Cachalia had yet by honesty of purpose and upright dealing gained the esteem of all the Europeans with whom he was brought into contact.

Enclosure 1 in No. 37.

MEMORANDUM ON TRADING LICENCES AS AFFECTING INDIANS IN THE UNION.

THE laws governing the issue of trading licences differ in the different Provinces of the Union. In this memorandum it is proposed to state briefly the present law in each of the three Provinces of the Transvaal, the Cape, and Natal, and to refer to certain decisions of the Courts in cases in which Indians were interested. It is not necessary to deal with the law of the Orange Free State, because there are very few Indians resident in that Province.

Transvaal.

Every general dealer (i.e., any person who carries on trade or business in a shop, store, or other fixed place where goods are sold or exposed for sale) is required to obtain an annual licence. These licences are issued by the officers of the Inland Revenue Department. (This is a department of the Union Government which collects revenue for the Union, and, by arrangement, for the Provincial Administration; it has its own officers in the larger towns, and works through the Magistrates and their staffs in other districts.) There is no special qualification required by an applicant for a general dealer's licence, and it does not appear that Indians have any difficulty in obtaining such licences.

Under the Provincial Local Government Ordinance of 1912 a local authority (i.e., a Town Council, or Village Council, or Health Committee) is empowered to issue licences in respect of premises where articles of food or drink are manufactured or prepared for sale or use, or stored or sold. As a general dealer's licence without the power to sell articles of food is of little value to anyone, it is, in practice, necessary for almost all Indian shopkeepers to obtain a licence from the local authority in addition to a general dealer's licence. All the disputes which have arisen are over the issue of licences by local authorities.

The Ordinance empowers a local authority to refuse a licence to sell articles of food or drink (1) on the usual grounds of public health, and (2) to any applicant who, "in the opinion of the Council, is not a desirable person to hold such a licence." Any applicant for a licence whose application has been refused may appeal against the Council's decision to the Magistrate, and if the Council fails to satisfy the Magistrate on the appeal that the licence was refused on good and sufficient grounds, the Magistrate may order the Council to grant the licence.

It has been suggested by Mr. Polak that there is only a nominal appeal to the Magistrate, and that the Magistrate's functions are confined to satisfying himself that the forms of the law have been complied with. "He may not," in Mr. Polak's opinion, "go into the validity of the reasons for refusal, which the municipality is not required to give." This view is hardly consistent with the wording of the Ordinance, nor is it borne out by recent magisterial decisions. Press reports* of the judgments in two recent appeals against the Krugersdorp Town Council are attached. In each instance the Council was ordered to grant the licence, and in one case the Magistrate, in discussing his own powers, observed that, "if the Councillors performed certain mechanical acts, it was not for the Court to follow blindly in their footsteps." There is no evidence that an Indian applicant who has been refused a licence without good reason by a local authority is at the present time unable to obtain justice if he appeals to the Magistrate.

Cape Province.

The issue of trading licences in the Cape Province is governed by the Provincial Ordinance No. 14 of 1913, the Licences (Consolidation) Ordinance. Under that Ordinance, before a licence can be issued for carrying on the trade of a baker, butcher, general dealer, greengrocer, or hawker, a certificate must be obtained from a Municipal Council, a Divisional Council, or a Village Management Board.

* Rand Daily Mail, 7th September, 1918.

The Council is instructed to refuse to grant the certificate if either the Health Officer or the Senior Officer for the Police for the area reports unfavourably upon the applicant. If there is no such objection, the Ordinance provides that a Council shall grant an application for a certificate unless the majority of the whole number of its members is opposed to the issue of the certificate, in which case the Council shall refuse the application.

Nothing is said about any appeal to the Courts, but the Administrator of the Province is empowered by the Ordinance to issue the necessary certificate himself if he is satisfied that the application has been refused by a local authority solely on the ground that there are already a sufficient number of persons carrying on that particular trade in the particular area.

There have been two recent judgments of the Supreme Court in cases in which local authorities had refused to issue certificates to Indians. One of these was the case of Mr. Pillay, of Port Elizabeth, about which a good deal has been written in papers such as Indian Opinion. Mr. Pillay applied to the Port Elizabeth Town Council for a certificate that he was a fit and proper person to obtain a licence. At the meeting at which his application was considered the Mayor remarked "that he wished to say straight out that the City Councils and Municipalities throughout South Africa had for many years agitated in order to restrict Asiatic trading." The application was refused by the Council, and Mr. Pillay then applied to the Supreme Court for the proceedings to be set aside on the ground that his application had been refused solely because he was an Asiatic. He obtained from the Supreme Court an order calling on the Council to consider the application on its merits. The Council again considered the application, and, after discussion, again refused it, only two Councillors voting for granting the certificate. Mr. Pillay returned to the Supreme Court, and asked that the proceedings should be again set aside on the ground that the Council had again failed to consider the application on its merits. They had discussed it in Committee, and had failed to give the grounds of refusal. The Supreme Court dismissed this second application of Mr. Pillay's and held—

- (a) that, as the subject had been fully and fairly discussed, and there had been a division of opinion in the Council, the application must be held to have been considered on its merits;
- (b) that the Council was entitled to consider the application in Committee; and
- (c) that the Council was not obliged to state its reasons for refusing the application.

In a similar case another Judge of the Supreme Court has ruled that there is no ground for interference by the Courts provided the Council can show that its members brought their minds to bear upon the application, and that there was nothing improper in the procedure before the Council.

Natal.

In Natal the relevant statutes are the Dealers' Act, No. 18 of 1897, with the amending Act No. 22 of 1909. The Dealers' Act covers licences for wholesale and retail dealers, hawkers, native eating-houses, Indian eating-houses, stationers and booksellers, and maltsters.

Licensing Officers are given a discretion to issue or refuse a licence. An appeal lies to the Town Council or to the Licensing Board of the Magisterial Division, if the licence is sought for premises outside the municipal area. The Act expressly provides that "a decision come to by a Licensing Officer . . . shall not be liable to review, reversal, or alteration by any Court of Law." The municipalities appoint their own Licensing Officers, and for the rest of Natal there is one Licensing Officer appointed by the Provincial Administration. A Provincial Ordinance of 1916 gave power for the appointment of a Special Board of Appeal for the whole Province (excluding the municipal areas) in place of the Liquor Licensing Boards of the several Magisterial Divisions. The Special Appeal Board has not yet, however, been appointed.

Act 22 of 1909 allows an appeal to the Supreme Court against the decision of the Town Council or Licensing Board in the matter of the renewal of licences.

Although the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court on appeal is ousted by the Act of 1897, licensing cases have been frequently before that Court, and several important decisions have been given.

1. It has been more than once ruled that an application cannot be refused merely on the ground that the applicant is an Asiatic. In the words of the Judge President: "No doubt there is the discretion of the Licensing Officer, but I cannot think that it was intended that he should exercise it by refusing to consider the applications of persons merely because they belong to a section of the community which he thinks should be debarred from trading at all in competition with other sections. The Act makes no distinction between Europeans and the Asiatic community, and to say that no Asiatic need apply for a licence which will take the place of a licence formerly held by a European means, in my opinion, a refusal to exercise the jurisdiction committed to the licensing authority as regards Asiatics."

2. That an application for the transfer of a licence must be regarded as an application for a new licence and not for a renewal.

3. That, although the Act of 1897 expressly gives to a Town Council or Licensing Board an absolute discretion as to the grant or refusal of applications for new licences or for transfers—a discretion which cannot be appealed against—there is still a field for the intervention of the Supreme Court. It can entertain such questions as whether the discretion was exercised in good faith after fair inquiry, not arbitrarily or capriciously, but bearing in mind the interests both of the public and of the applicant, and within the limits of the statute.

4. That where the matter concerns the renewal of a licence, the Supreme Court is entitled to consider the application on its merits, and not merely to examine whether the Licensing Officer has proceeded arbitrarily or capriciously in the exercise of his discretion.

It will thus be seen that the Natal Courts have strongly asserted their right to intervene, and have used that right to safeguard the interests of Asiatic applicants for licences.

NUMEROUS protests have been received by me from Indians and coloured people against a certain section of the new Union Railway Regulations. Point at issue is the interpretation of that clause of the Railway Control and Management Bill referred to in the third paragraph of my Parliamentary despatch of 18th March, 1916.† and the questions now raised are similar to those considered in the Transvaal in 1910. See Hadfield's despatch No. 104, of 27th May, 1910.‡ I am of opinion offending section present Railway Regulations should be amended, and I have made private representations to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Railways. I hope these may succeed, but I cannot, of course, say at present whether they will. Enclosure 1 in No. 44.

EXTRACT FROM THE "CAPE TIMES," WEDNESDAY, 9TH JANUARY, 1918.

SEGREGATION ON THE RAILWAYS.—NEW REGULATIONS.—CONTENTIOUS PROVISIONS WITHDRAWN.

In a supplement to the Union Gazette, issued on 14th December last, revised South African Railway Regulations were published, and they came into force on the first day of the present year. There are two hundred and forty-nine of these revised regulations, and a number of them are divided into several subsections. Printed in the two languages, the supplement consists of forty-two pages of small type. The variety of the matters dealt with may be judged by the headings of sections, which are as follows: Passengers, Season Tickets, Luggage, Baggage, Cloak-rooms, Parcels, Insurance, Live Stock, Vehicles, Corpses, Empties, Goods, Lost Property, Ledger Accounts, Coal Stands and Forwarding Sites, Private Sidings, Refreshment Catering, and Miscellaneous. Of these new regulations the most contentious, if not intrinsically the most important, was framed in connexion with the provisions of subsection 5 of section 4 of Act No. 22 of 1916 (the Railways and Harbours Control and Management Act), which gave statutory authority for the "reservation of railway coaches or portions thereof for the exclusive use of persons of particular races, or different classes of persons or natives, and the restriction of any such persons to the use of any such coaches or portions thereof so reserved." In the Senate in March last Senator Munnik called attention to the fact, with special reference to the Sea Point Railway, that effect had not been given to these provisions of the law. In replying on that occasion, Mr. Burton, the Minister of Railways, made the following remarks:—

"The regulations have been completed in draft form, and are under revision by the Railway solicitors. They will be promulgated at the earliest possible date, and on their promulgation arrangements will be made to give effect to the segregation provisions of the Act, which already are being observed generally on all long-distance trains, and in local traffic in the inland Provinces. I may mention, however, that the matter to which the Honourable Senator directs attention is a problem that is not easily solved. Many practical difficulties frequently overlooked by the public have to be faced in giving effect to these provisions of the Act. They are not difficulties that can be overcome merely by the enforcement of the regulations, which will at the outset have to be judiciously and gradually applied so as to accustom passengers to the new conditions. As an illustration of one of the Administration's many difficulties, I would quote, for the Honourable Senator's information, the following incident of recent date: After a dispute between two lady passengers as to whether a carriage window should be open or closed, one of these ladies asked to be moved to another compartment, as she did not wish to travel with the other lady, whom she alleged was coloured. On the complainant being moved into another compartment, the lady who already occupied that compartment complained indignantly of a coloured woman being placed in her compartment—that is to say, the complainant in the one case formed the subject of the complaint in the other on the same grounds. So far as the examiner could judge, neither lady was coloured. I may add also that many of those who are most insistent upon segregation in theory are those with whom the Administration has the greatest difficulty on the trains, by reason of their insisting upon their coloured servants travelling with them in the same compartment."

This was the origin of Regulation 19, published with the others in the Gazette of 14th December, so as to come into operation on 1st January last. * * * * *

It is, of course, impossible in the limited space at our disposal, to notice even the chief points of importance in these new and revised regulations, but those relating to the vexed question of the conditions under which native and coloured passengers may travel in future upon the South African Railway may be quoted in full. These conditions are laid down in Regulation 19, which has many subdivisions, and which reads as follows:—

"19. (a) The Administration may, where practicable, set apart any portion of a train for passengers of particular races or different classes of persons or natives. No passenger for whom a portion of a train is so reserved may travel or remain in any other portion; and the Administration may refuse to carry him in any other portion of the train. A portion of a train so set apart shall be legibly marked 'Reserved.'"

* Not printed.

"(b) Any stationmaster, ticket examiner, or guard may remove, or order the removal of, a passenger from one compartment to another without assigning reasons.

"(c) The Administration may refuse to issue a first or second class ticket to any passenger who may, in the opinion of an official, not be dressed in a decent or cleanly condition.

"(d) The Administration may set apart any railway premises or any portion thereof, or any convenience at a railway station or at a stopping place, or on a train for the exclusive use of males or females or persons of particular races or different classes of persons or natives. All such places shall be clearly marked as being so set apart, and their use shall be restricted to the persons for whom their use is so reserved, and when so reserved such persons may not use any other portion of the railway premises or conveniences as aforesaid.

"(e) Non-Europeans (coloured persons or natives) may not travel by the Imperial or Royal Mail trains, or by fast passenger trains, or any other trains specially excepted from time to time either in the official tariff book or by public poster.

"(f) Non-Europeans (coloured persons or natives) will only be allowed to travel in the compartments or coaches specially set apart for their use, and they may not frequent or remain standing in the corridors in any portion of a coach which is set aside for European passengers.

"(g) The stationmaster at any station is authorized to make an exception to this rule if, in his opinion, the circumstances are such as to justify the adoption of such a course, and to issue a first or second class ticket to a native, subject to the regulations, but the matter shall be one entirely in the discretion of the stationmaster, which shall only be exercised under the following circumstances:—

"(1) Application must be made to the stationmaster personally by the native or natives who desire to travel in a compartment of an ordinary passenger coach at least half an hour before the departure of the train.

"(2) Each applicant must be suitably dressed in clean European clothes.

"(h) Natives travelling by ordinary passenger or mixed trains in third class coaches with separate compartments will be charged the ordinary third class fares.

"(i) Coloured servants accompanying white passengers may take seats with their employers on payment of the fare for the class in which they travel, provided other passengers in the same compartment do not object.

"(j) All coloured persons or natives must, before commencing a journey, and whilst on a journey, see that all legal formalities, whether in regard to pass laws or otherwise, are duly complied with. The Administration will not make any refund of fares to passengers who are prevented from completing their journey by the police for breach of the pass or other laws."

Numerous protests have been entered against these provisions since their promulgation alike from the Indian, the coloured, and the native community. Some of these protests were sent direct to the Governor-General, others to the Minister, and others to the public Press. It is understood that the Minister considered the tenor of these various representations as soon as he arrived in Cape Town, and has recognized that subsections (e), (f), and (g), which specifically differentiate against non-Europeans as such are in conflict with the views he himself expressed in moving an amendment to the Railway Bill in 1916. Accordingly, these subsections have been withdrawn. It is only right to say that, in a circular issued to the administrative staff simultaneously with the promulgation of the regulations, the General Manager clearly showed that the intention was to fulfil the law in such a way as to create as little inconvenience as possible. "I desire it to be distinctly understood," so runs the concluding paragraph, "that no alteration is to be adopted in the existing methods of dealing with non-Europeans (coloured persons or natives) except upon direct instructions issued from this Office, or through the various divisional officers. Whilst the policy of segregation has been definitely laid down, it will be appreciated that effective steps cannot be taken to carry it out as a whole until the accommodation, conveniences, or facilities, as the case may be, have been suitably marked as having been reserved for the exclusive use of the persons, races, or classes concerned, and even when the initial steps have been completed it will only be by exercising the greatest tact and restraint on the part of all grades that the Administration will be able to carry out its functions in a satisfactory manner and without inflicting any hardship or undue pressure upon any section of the community."

DEAR MR. LAMBERT,

WITH reference to your letter of the 14th ultimo* regarding the new South African Railway Regulations, I now beg to enclose herewith cuttings from Indian Opinion of the 4th and 11th ultimo,† showing that, in response to widespread protests, the Minister of Railways has withdrawn subsections (d) to (g) in section 19 of the Regulations. Whilst this act of justice is much appreciated, the partial withdrawal of the offending section does not remove all cause for complaint.

* 2115: not printed.

† Not reprinted.

As you will observe, feeling has been running very high, and the action of the Union Government is regarded as a breach of the letter and the spirit of the 1914 settlement, when the Government engaged to continue to administer existing legislation "in a just manner and with due regard to vested rights." This, it is submitted, is exactly what the new Regulation, even as amended, fails to do. On the contrary, it carries still further the principle of racial segregation, against which the Indian community has always fought, and which it will never tolerate in this stereotyped form. New powers of interference with individual Indians in the exercise of an elementary and vested right are granted to the officials, in response to the clamour of a few race-fanatics, and the good name of the Administration is being brought once more into disrepute.

Indirectly, officers of the Railway Administration, unfamiliar with the laws and regulations on the subject and the susceptibilities of the Indian community, are being vested with powers under the Immigration Laws and the Transvaal Registration Act. Apart from the principle involved, such promiscuous delegation of powers is bound to result in the utmost confusion and very serious friction between the authorities and the Indian community.

In these circumstances, I would respectfully request that the Imperial Government may ask the Union Government to give the matter further reconsideration, with a view to the immediate withdrawal of the objectionable subsections, whose retention will achieve results in no way commensurable with the immense irritation and dissatisfaction that they have aroused, and which calls into question the good faith and the public pledges of the Union Government.

Yours sincerely,
H. S. L. POLAK.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 16th January, 1918.
With reference to my telegrams of the 4th January and 10th January,* I have the honour to transmit to you copies of a telegram which I addressed to the Minister of Railways and Harbours regarding those provisions of the new Railway Regulations which affect coloured persons travelling by rail, together with a copy of Mr. Burton's reply.

2. Under cover of my despatch No. 17, of this date,† I am forwarding copies of various protests which I have received, and which have been duly acknowledged and referred to Ministers. With that despatch is forwarded also an extract from the Cape Times containing the text of section 19 of the Regulations, a brief account of the origin and objects of its provisions, and an announcement that subsections (e) to (g) have been withdrawn. The Regulations were published on the 14th December in a supplement to the Union Government Gazette, of which copies will be in your possession.

LORD BUXTON, JOHANNESBURG, to BURTON, MINISTER OF RAILWAYS, CAPE TOWN.
TELEGRAM.

31ST DECEMBER, 1917. Personal. I am receiving numerous strong protests from Indian and coloured communities against section 19 of new Railway Regulations. I am referring these to Ministers, but should like to put one or two points to you at once unofficially.

* Nos. 40 and 41.

† No. 44.

Subsections (a) to (d) of section 19 do not appear open to objection. They follow closely both the agreements made in May, 1910, between Ghandi and Governments of Transvaal and Orange River Colony and the principles accepted by House of Assembly in debate on Railway Control and Management Bill in March, 1916.

Subsections (e) to (g), on the other hand, not only contain provisions identical with those deleted in 1910 at Ghandi's request, but their phraseology appears to be repugnant to the amendment which you moved and carried in 1916 for the omission of the words "white or coloured." Moreover, it seems doubtful whether these subsections are necessary or add anything to the provisions of subsections (a) to (d).

I would ask for your serious consideration of the matter. You will, I am sure, agree that an agitation at the present time would have most unfortunate results here and elsewhere.

Please see Sir Thomas Price's letter of 11th April, 1910, to Ghandi, and connected correspondence.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 1st March, 1918.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Confidential despatch of the 16th January* on the subject of the new South African Railway Regulations.

2. I gather that you were under the impression, and I had myself assumed, that the provisions regarding coloured passengers, to which Mr. Gandhi objected in 1910 had been deleted at the time from the Regulations. I find, however, on reference to the official Tariff Book of the South African Railways, No. 4, of 1st May, 1914, that the Regulations 60-63 there printed practically repeated the whole of the Regulations in force in 1910, as set out in the fourth enclosure to Major-General Hadfield's despatch of the 6th May, 1910.† I should be glad to learn the reason for this, and I should be obliged if at the same time I could be furnished with your views on sections 19 (d) and 234 (b) of the new Regulations, the latter of which certainly appears to introduce fresh restrictions in regard to coloured persons.

MR. H. S. L. POLAK to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Copy to India Office, 8th April, 1918. L.F.]

SIR, Danes Inn House, 265, Strand, W.C.2, 18th March, 1918.
I beg to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of your letter of the 2nd instant§ regarding the new South African Railway Regulations, the contents of which I have noted.

With reference to the second paragraph of your letter, I have to remind you of the fact that the agreement arrived at between Mr. Gandhi and the Transvaal Government in 1910, applied, as it was intended to do, only to the Transvaal. It is now proposed to extend the operation of the Regulations then agreed upon, within the limited area, to the entire Union, even to the Cape, where absolute equality of travelling facilities has been enjoyed, both in theory and in practice, from the very commencement of railway travelling in the Colony.

One of the greatest difficulties in inducing Indians in any part of South Africa to consent to administrative limitations being imposed upon any particular right or privilege is the continued tendency on the part of the various authorities to extend the limitation to other sections of the Indian population and to other territories or places for whom or for which it was not originally intended. In other words, the Indian community has constantly the spectacle before its eyes of a process of levelling down its rights and privileges to the position in the most reactionary Province of the Union, in respect of any such matter, rather than the levelling up to the position in the most progressive Province. Such an experience is not favourable to the promotion of a friendly attitude towards innovations of the character of those that have recently been attempted by the Railways Administration in South Africa, but is, on the contrary, rather calculated to bring about a repudiation of any local agreement that may have been formerly made in quite other circumstances than those presently obtaining.

Apart, however, from these considerations, it is not unreasonable to remind the Union authorities that what might have been locally tolerable in 1910, when Indians were in the midst of a life-and-death struggle in the Transvaal, of which the details are, no doubt, well within your recollection, is not likely to be appreciated, or even tolerated, to-day, when Indians, equally with British subjects from other parts of the Empire, are together fighting for broad principles of mutual toleration and the recognition of the rights of minorities and of small communities. If the spirit of the present great struggle is not to be productive of improved conditions for the Indian community of South Africa I need hardly remind you that the impression that will be created upon the public mind in India is bound to be very unfortunate. For these reasons, therefore, I beg to request once more that the suggestions offered by me in previous correspondence in this matter may be taken into consideration.

I enclose, herewith, further extracts from Indian Opinion, of the issues of 18th and 25th January,* respectively, for your information.

My LORD, Downing Street, 5th April, 1918.
WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 1st of March,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency the accompanying copy of correspondence‡ with Mr. H. S. L. Polak regarding the new South African Railway Regulations.
2. Mr. Polak's contention that the arrangement made with Mr. Gandhi in 1910 applied to the Transvaal only is not absolutely correct, as it applied also to the Orange River Colony; but the arrangement, being made before the Union (which was then imminent), did not apply to the Cape Province, and on this point Mr. Polak seems to be correct. It is observed that the Regulations contained in the official Tariff Book of the South African Railways of the 1st of May, 1914, to which I alluded in my despatch under reference, are expressly stated to be not applicable in the Cape Province.

3. I should be glad in the circumstances to receive your observations on this aspect of the matter, though I notice that the point is not one to which attention has been specially directed in the representations made by the local Indian community.

I have, &c.,

open to any objection. You will observe that section 234 (b) has been withdrawn and 19 (d) slightly altered to admit of the setting apart of refreshment cars for coloured persons or natives. The new Regulations follow strictly the wording of section 4 (b) of the Railway Control and Management Act of 1916, and, therefore, have the sanction of Parliament. There is a reference to this section of the Act in my Confidential despatch of the 18th March, 1916.*

HIS Excellency the Governor-General has, by virtue of section 4 of Act No. 22 of 1916, been pleased to approve of the repeal of Regulation No. 19 and paragraph (b) of Regulation No. 234, promulgated by Government Notice No. 1728 in the supplement to the Government Gazette of the 14th December, 1917, and to approve of the following revised Regulation No. 19, to have effect from the 20th day of April, 1918, viz. :—

19. (a) The Administration may, where practicable, set apart any portion of a train for males or females, persons of particular races, or different classes of persons, or natives. No passenger for whom a portion of a train is so reserved may travel or remain in any other portion, and the Administration may refuse to carry him in any other portion of the train.

(b) Any stationmaster, ticket examiner, or guard, may remove or order the removal of a passenger from one compartment to another without assigning reasons.

(c) The Administration may refuse to issue a first- or second-class ticket to any passenger who may, in the opinion of an official, not be dressed in a decent or cleanly condition.

(d) The Administration may set apart any railway premises or any portion thereof, or any refreshment car, or any convenience at a railway station, or at a stopping place, or on a train, as the circumstances may warrant, for the exclusive use of males or females, persons of particular races or different classes of persons, or natives. All such places or conveniences shall be restricted to the persons for whom their use is so reserved, and when so reserved such persons may not use any other portion of the railway premises or conveniences as aforesaid.

(e) Coloured servants accompanying white passengers may take seats with their employers on payment of the fare for the class in which they travel, provided other passengers in the same compartment do not object.

(f) All persons must, before commencing a journey, and whilst on a journey, see that all formalities, whether in regard to any Immigration Law, Martial Law, Pass Law, or any other law are duly complied with. The Administration will not make any refund of fares to passengers who are prevented from completing their journey for breach of any such law or laws.

TELEGRAM.

27TH APRIL, 1918. Resolution—That, in view of the Indian community emphatic protest in January last against Section 19 of the General Railway Regulations as a deliberate calculated insult to the whole of Asia, in view of the Minister of Railways having adopted the subterfuge of publishing the same Regulations with the same intentions, but with a few minor alterations in the wording which cannot deceive the community, this meeting of the British Indian League hereby solemnly adheres to its previous resolutions in the full knowledge of the justice of its cause, in the full knowledge of the Minister's ambition to humiliate Asiatics by aggressive display of colour pride and colour prejudice. The British Indian community of this Province, in the name of His Most Gracious Majesty the King Emperor of India, solemnly determines to the challenge thrown in the face of Asia for the second time within four months, and further solemnly resolve to passively resist unto the last the reactionary Regulations aforementioned, in the full knowledge of the consequences entailed thereby. Further, it is hoped that the Minister will withdraw the offending Regulations within a fortnight to allay the strong feelings it has raised.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

Governor-General's Office,

Pretoria, 7th August, 1918.

SIR, WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 15th May,* I have the honour to transmit, for your information, copy of a semi-official letter which I have received from Sir Thomas Watt, the Acting Minister of Railways. With this letter are enclosed notes of the proceedings when Sir Thomas Watt received a deputation from certain Indian associations on the 11th June to discuss the new Railway Regulation, No. 19, which was forwarded to you with my despatch No. 360, of the 7th May.†

2. In your Confidential despatch of the 5th April‡ you point out that the Regulations agreed to by Mr. Gandhi in 1910 were not applicable in the Cape Province. In that connexion you will no doubt consider the remarks of Sir Thomas Watt addressed to the deputation as to the practice in the Cape Province and Natal in the separation of the races in trains prior to the introduction of the present Regulations, and as to the attitude of the Union Parliament and the white population.

3. Although it may be said that the new Regulation does theoretically alter the position of the Indian community in the Cape Province, the point is, as you observe, not one which has been taken by Indians here. The deputation received by Sir Thomas Watt claimed to represent the whole of the Indian community in South Africa, but they do not appear to have made any use of Mr. Polak's argument. In these circumstances, and as it is obviously desirable that there should, if possible, be a uniform policy in matters of this kind throughout the Union, I doubt if any good purpose would be served by representations to Ministers on behalf of the Indian community of the Cape Province.

4. In my opinion, the deciding factor in the consideration of this whole question must be the fact that the Union Parliament in the Railway Control and Management Act of 1916 definitely accepted the principle that, as far as possible, separate provision should be made on the railways for Europeans and non-Europeans. This principle was laid down in the Act in a form which gives members of all races complete equality before the law, and, as I pointed out in my despatch of the 15th May, the wording of the Act is strictly followed in the new Regulation 19. The principle of separate accommodation for different races seems to me to be the only fair principle in the conditions of this country, and it is supported, not as the Indians sometimes suggest, by a small and prejudiced section of the European population, but by the whole body of responsible European opinion. On their own showing, the great majority of the Indians themselves accept the principle, and they have no more desire to travel with Europeans than Europeans have to travel with them.

* No. 52.

† No. 53.

‡ No. 51.

5. It is in the practical application of the principle at the present time that difficulties may arise. I need not remind you that the rolling stock of the South African Railways has seriously depreciated during the War, owing to difficulties in providing repairs and renewals. This has led to great restriction in the accommodation available for European, as well as coloured, travellers, and, whatever his race, a traveller on the railways to-day has to put up with a great deal of overcrowding and discomfort. There is no prospect of an early improvement in these conditions, and the only solution lies in the exercise of tact and commonsense by all parties. I have no reason to believe that the railway officials, as a class, have any desire to be harsh or oppressive towards Indian travellers, and, in practice, I doubt whether the Indians have much to complain of.

6. That this is not always the case is shown by the attached report of a recent judgment given in the Transvaal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court in an appeal by the Railway Administration against an award to an Indian for forcible ejection from a railway compartment which had been specially reserved for him and his friends. I also attach an opinion on the judgment given by the solicitors to the Administration. The judgment refers to the old Railway Regulations in force under the Transvaal Act, No. 13 of 1908, which is now repealed by the Union Act, No. 22 of 1916. Sections 221, 222, and 223, mentioned in the judgment, appear as sub-clauses (b), (c), and (d), respectively, of clause 60 in the Official Tariff Book of the South African Railways (1916 edition).

I understand that the British Indian League inquired last month of the Minister of Railways and Harbours whether, in view of this judgment, it is the intention of the Union Government to amend the present Regulations, and announced that, if the answer was in the negative, the League would test the validity of the new Regulation 19 in the Courts. The League was informed, in reply, that the Government had no intention of further amending the Regulations. So far no steps appear to have been taken to bring a case in the Courts.

Enclosure 1 in No. 55.

(R.B. 1005/1.)

Office of the Minister of Railways and Harbours,

Pretoria, 19th June, 1918.

DEAR LORD BUXTON,

WITH further reference to your letter of the 7th ultimo regarding the Railway Regulations, I enclose, for your information, a copy of the notes taken when the deputations from certain Indian associations met me on the 11th instant. It is not anticipated that there will be any further difficulty. In the revised Regulation no distinction is specifically drawn as between Asiatics and any other section of the community.

I would also state, for your information, that the following special instructions were issued to the staff by the General Manager in connexion with these Regulations:—

"I desire it to be distinctly understood that no alteration is to be adopted in the existing methods of dealing with non-Europeans (coloured persons or natives) except upon direct instructions issued from this office, or through the various divisional offices.

"Whilst the policy of segregation has been definitely laid down, it will be appreciated that effective steps cannot be taken to carry it out as a whole until the accommodation, conveniences, or facilities, as the case may be, have been suitably marked as having been reserved for the exclusive use of the persons, races, or classes concerned, and even when the initial steps have been completed it will only be by exercising the greatest tact and restraint on the part of all grades that the Administration will be able to carry out its functions in a satisfactory manner and without inflicting any hardship or undue pressure upon any section of the community."

I have also given instructions to have the offending Regulation deleted from the Official Tariff Book, and for the revised Regulation to be substituted.

Yours, &c.,

T. WATT.

His Excellency the Right Honourable Viscount Buxton, P.C., G.C.M.G.,
Pretoria.

DEPUTATION OF INDIANS TO MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AT UNION BUILDINGS, PRETORIA, 11TH JUNE, 1918.

Present:

Sir Thomas Watt (Acting Minister of Railways).
Sir Thomas Hyslop, Railway Commissioner.
Mr. Johann Rissik, Railway Commissioner.
Sir William Hoy, General Manager.
Mr. C. M. Hoffe, Acting Private Secretary to the Minister.
Mr. D. Heller, Acting Secretary to Railway Board.
Mr. F. B. Rees, General Manager's Office.

Deputation:

Dr. William Godfrey (Chairman, British Indian League).
Mr. H. D. Maal (Chairman, Hamidian Islamic Society).
Mr. C. M. Pillay (Joint Honorary Secretary, British Indian League).
Mr. M. V. Desai.
Mr. B. K. Masooria (Chairman of Transvaal Masooria Hetwardhak Mandal).
Mr. V. G. Patel (Secretary, Transvaal Kori Hetwardhak Mandal) (Benefit Society).
Mr. J. P. Vyas.
Mr. N. M. Shelat.
Mr. E. S. Coovadia.
Mr. I. M. Coovadia.
Mr. H. Lala.
Mr. N. C. Desai.
Mr. R. M. Sodha.
Mr. S. I. Suji.
Mr. D. M. Desai.
Mr. P. Bradanjee.
Mr. V. Jaga.

The deputation was introduced by Mr. J. de V. de Beer, Attorney.

The Minister inquired if he could take it that the deputation represented the whole of the Indian community in South Africa, and Dr. Godfrey stated that this was so; they had received telegrams from all parts of the Union, and would be prepared to forward them for perusal if this was desired.

Dr. Godfrey: "In submitting the points I wish to bring forward, on behalf of the British Indian League and those I represent here to-day, I would at the outset like to say that I was born and bred in this country, and have been practising in Johannesburg for fifteen years, and can claim that I am well known amongst all classes of people in Johannesburg. In 1915 I had an interview with Sir William Hoy, when I put forward our grievances, and if the understanding which was then arrived at had been carried out there would have been no necessity for our presence here to-day. We find, however, that all our hopes have been dashed to the ground, and we have nothing else to do but to fight, to allow ourselves to live here as men. Up to the present, I feel compelled to say, we have been treated not as men but as animals—worse than dogs."

Instances were given as to lack of accommodation, and Dr. Godfrey mentioned a recent case where, on his return from Durban to Johannesburg, he was accommodated in a coupé, and whilst he was talking to his next door neighbour—a European doctor whom he knew—the guard came along and immediately placed a "Reserved" label on his compartment and on the lavatory next to him. There was no necessity for such a reservation to have been made.

Again, on the local trains there was a great lack of accommodation for coloured persons.

The General Manager pointed out that the word "reserved" was adopted as the result of Mr. Gandhi having objected to the use of another term which was previously in use. It was absolutely necessary for accommodation to be specifically reserved, on account of the fact that there were some objectionable and quarrelsome persons amongst all classes of travellers, who had to be prevented from travelling in compartments which were set aside for others, and unless there was some indication that such accommodation was reserved there might be difficulty in refusing admittance.

Dr. Godfrey intimated that they had no desire that the reserved compartments should be done away with. As a matter of fact, he was quite sure that most of the Indians would go to the reserved compartments; but others might refuse to go; and he considered that if the promises made by the Railway Administration in the past had been carried out there would have been no necessity for the meeting that day. Sir William Hoy had promised that the ticket examiners would use more discretion, and that if well-dressed and respectable Indians travelled in a first- or second-class compartment which was not "reserved" the railway officials would use tact and not pull them out.

The General Manager stated that every promise which had been made had been carried out, and the policy indicated by Dr. Godfrey has been given effect to, and, generally speaking, has been uniformly successful.

Dr. Godfrey then represented the objections which existed to section 19 of the Regulations recently promulgated. So far as (a) was concerned, the Indian community objected to the whole principle laid down therein, as it gave the Administration too much power. If a train were, say, five hundred yards long and only one compartment were set aside and twenty Indians joined the train, what would be the result? For years the difficulties had been got over without a law, and he did not think there was any necessity for a law now.

The Minister pointed out that the Regulation in question was to all intents identical with that accepted in 1910 by Mr. Gandhi, and it was difficult to see what new grievance had arisen since the new Regulation (which embodied the same principle as adopted in 1910) was promulgated.

Dr. Godfrey stated that the old Regulation did not meet the views of the Indian population, and Mr. Gandhi did not represent the whole of the Indian community.

The Minister pointed out, in reply, that if Mr. Gandhi and Mr. Cachalia, who met the Railway Administration in 1910 as representing the Indian community, did not really represent the Indians generally, it was rather strange that no protest had been made until the present time. Continuing, Sir Thomas Watt pointed out that sub-section (b) of the new Regulation was similar to that (Regulation 222) agreed to in 1910.

Dr. Godfrey drew attention to sub-section (d). Whilst he was aware of the prejudice which existed, he personally would not think of going into a dining car; but at the same time he did not consider they should be prevented from going into a dining car by law.

The Minister stated that the Regulation in question became necessary on account of the prejudice which unfortunately existed in the case of the majority of persons who frequented the dining cars. The great majority were Europeans, and, whilst it might be unreasonable on their part to object to sit down at the same dining table with non-Europeans, there was no doubt the objection was there, and the Administration was exercising the only course open to it to prevent abuses and breaches of the law by legislating in such a manner as would keep the various sections of the travelling public separate. In the absence of such a provision it might well be that some unreasonable men might endeavour to assert their rights, with the result that the majority of their fellow passengers would take the law into their own hands and the Administration's officials would be powerless to restrain them.

The General Manager agreed that this was the real position, and instanced cases where, although he, personally, and the Administration's officers had endeavoured to prevent trouble, several unfortunate occurrences had taken place in consequence of Indians insisting on travelling in accommodation which they maintained they were entitled to.

Dr. Godfrey then urged his objections to sub-section (f), being under the impression it was the intention that Indians would be required to produce passes before railway tickets could be issued to them.

The Minister, however, pointed out that the intention of the Regulation was only to serve as a warning that all passengers were required to comply with any law of the country which might be in existence so far as passes or permits were concerned. It was a matter which really did not affect the Railway Administration primarily; but it was only right that the Administration should give such a warning, otherwise a railway ticket might inadvertently be issued to a passenger who, by reason of the fact that he had not complied with the law of the country, might be stopped at some point of his journey, and great inconvenience might be caused thereby.

Mr. H. D. Maal, as representing the Hamidian Islamic Society, urged his objections to the new Regulations. He did not consider there was any necessity for such Regulations being published, and, whilst he was quite sure that ninety-five per cent. of the Indians did not desire to mix with Europeans, they had to consider the rights of the five per cent. He thought that the feeling of the European population was due more to the publication of such laws than by anything else, and that if there were no such laws the ill-feeling would disappear. He also thought a lot of trouble arose through the conductors or ticket examiners. There was not the same trouble on the trams, as the conductors recognized the right of Indians to travel on trams.

The Minister referred Mr. Maal to the earlier proceedings, and reminded him that there was no difference in the principle or effect between the old Regulations and the new ones recently introduced.

Mr. V. M. Shelat objected to the new Regulations on the ground that they formed a statutory colour bar. It was not that Mr. Gandhi's agreement was not agreeable to them; but he felt, like others, that they were now being persecuted. They were all much younger when the old Regulations were introduced, but now they were of more mature age and felt it more. The Indians had held two mass meetings, and were unanimous in asking that the law be repealed. At the present time the whole of one part of a train was given to one section of the population, and the rest of the sections have one part reserved, and they all have to use the same lavatories and everything. He also complained about bedding, stating that Indians always got inferior blankets, and concluded by saying that at the present time there was much friction between Indian passengers and the ticket examiners, and he hoped the General Manager would do his utmost to see that Indians were treated with the consideration they deserved.

Mr. E. S. Coovadia (interpreted by Mr. Shelat); Mr. M. V. Desai; Mr. S. I. Suji.—These speakers emphasized what had already been brought forward, and, in addition to expressing their objection to the Regulation as a whole, complained about the inadequacy of the accommodation provided, the absence of suitable accommodation on local trains, want of attention on the part of station officials in connexion with the issue of tickets, etc.

The Minister, replying fully on the points which had been raised, intimated that he was glad to have had the opportunity of hearing what they had to say. He explained the position which obtained prior to Union, and, after reminding the deputation what had transpired as the result of the meeting held between Mr. Gandhi and Mr. Cachalia and the late Sir Thomas Price in 1910, he detailed the steps which had been taken as the result of Union.

Sir Thomas Watt, continuing, said: "Occasionally there had been trouble, not only between Europeans and Indians, but between Europeans and natives, who are, as you are aware, in this country very much larger in numbers than the Indians are, but on the whole the Regulations have worked fairly smoothly, and I think I am safe in saying that we overcame various difficulties very well indeed, and it is to the credit of the Railway Administration and all the officials that there was so very little friction. I have no direct grounds to believe, through the absence of instances, that there was any general dissatisfaction either on the part of the natives or the coloured people or Indians with regard to these Regulations. When Union came about the Government was continually pressed by Members of Parliament, and by other sections of the community, to make the Regulations, which had worked so well in the Transvaal, apply to the rest of the country. As a matter of fact, although there was no Regulation on the subject, both in the Cape and Natal, there was an endeavour made to separate particular races, and separate males from females, and otherwise carry out the object which these Regulations have. The result was that, when the Railway Control Act was passed in 1916, Parliament specially empowered the Railway Administration to make regulations regarding this matter, and the clause in the Act referred to reads as follows:—

"Subject to the approval of the Governor-General the Administration may make regulations with respect to the reservation of railway premises (including conveniences) or of any railway coach or of any portion thereof, for the exclusive use of males or females, persons of particular races, or different classes of persons or natives, and the restriction of any such person to the use of the premises, coach or portion thereof so reserved."

"The terms of this provision in the Act are practically the same as the Regulation which you object to. Now, the Railway Administration had to carry out the law of the land, and I do not think we can be said to be going any further in the Regulations than the law directed us to go. Someone has said that he was quite sure the Europeans in this country did not object to mixing with natives in the trains, and that it is merely a question of the Administration laying down a Regulation in order to separate the races when there is no need. Well, I do not think the gentleman who has said that knows what the feelings and susceptibilities or objections of the Europeans on this subject are. I can assure the deputation that the Europeans in this country insist on the Government doing this, and there is very little likelihood, as far as I can see, of this law being amended or withdrawn.

"Now the Regulations, as I have said in the course of the discussion, that you now object to are not new as far as the Transvaal is concerned. These Regulations have been in existence since 1910, and the complaint that you make now seems to me to be more or less a sentimental complaint. At any rate I have not heard of any instance recently where any considerable body of natives or Indians has been put to any inconvenience in consequence of the new Regulations; I may be wrong, but nothing has been said to-day to show to me that the Railway Administration has been less sympathetic or tactful recently than they were previously. I know the Indian community do not like to be placed in a different category from the European community, and while there may to some extent be discomforts and inconveniences, and, in the eyes of some Indian gentlemen, degradation in going into a compartment marked "reserved," after all, the Railway Administration has to protect him from prejudices which do exist; it has to protect the public generally and carry out the wishes of the public generally, and it seems to me that is the only way of doing it; I know of no other way by which we can bring about the desired result, except by Regulations such as these. The Railway Administration have, by their circulars and other instructions to railway officials, counselled them to be sympathetic and tactful in carrying out the Regulations; if they are not, if there is any rudeness or incivility, the Railway Administration will immediately deal with the man against whom a complaint is proved, and I think, myself, that, instead of looking upon these Regulations as an insult on the Indian community, they ought to be regarded as an honest attempt on the part of the Administration to deal justly by all sections of the population, because, if anybody has a right in this country to complain, the natives have, and, as far as I have heard, they have submitted in the various parts of the Union where these Regulations have been in existence because they know it is for their benefit, as well as for the benefit of the white population. What I would say to you is this: Do not be in too great a hurry to find fault with the Administration; there is a war going on, we cannot get as many railway carriages and other conveniences for the travelling public as we would like. In the future we will be able to set aside more carriages for the various sections of the travelling public, but at the present time we are very hard put to accommodate everybody. Although I cannot promise that we are going to withdraw the Regulation, because the Regulation is in accordance with the law, I would ask you to help the Administration by counselling your own people to work in with and help us to administer the law and to give satisfaction to all classes of the community. If you do not do that Sir William Hoy has suggested he cannot prevent the public on the trains taking the law into their own hands. It is to be regretted that people sometimes lose their tempers, and if you have a number of men losing their temper in a matter of this sort, the railway official cannot avoid an injustice or prevent an injury being done to a man. These are my views. I say: Help us, and we will try and help you. Recognize what the law is and recognize the feeling of the white people of this country in regard to the coloured people."

Sir Thomas Hyslop: "I think the Chairman has put the case very clearly, and I hope you will take the advice he has given you. There has been no trouble in the working of these Regulations in the past, and you admit there is no trouble up to now, and, if so, why anticipate trouble? The General Manager will endeavour to carry out the Regulations with as much tact as possible, and that being so, I do not think you should worry."

Mr. Rissik: "I have in the past had many occasions to meet members of the Indian community as Administrator of the Transvaal, and I have always found them reasonable. The Railway Administration has gone out of its way to meet the susceptibilities among the different races. These Regulations are necessary; in any community we have unreasonable people; now we know these people insist upon making matters worse, and you only make it more difficult for the Railway Administration to meet it. Sir William Hoy and his staff have every desire to assist you in what you aspire to, but you know there is a difficulty; we have other classes in this country; we have black races and coloured races, and, unfortunately, in this country, these feelings exist. I, personally, have not the least objection to sitting next to you, but other people of our colour do object, and are sometimes inclined to take the matter into their own hands. Take my advice, and do not make matters worse for the Administration and for yourselves.

The General Manager stated that, as in the past, he would continue to do everything in his power to prevent any harsh or unsympathetic treatment of Indian travellers. He read to the deputation extracts from a special circular which he had issued in December last to the staff, strongly impressing upon them the necessity for exercising all possible tact and restraint in carrying out their duties, and that, on the introduction of the new Regulations, no departure was to be made from the practice hitherto obtaining, unless definite instructions were issued from his own office. He at all times gave complaints his personal attention, in order to secure fair and equitable treatment for Indians and non-Europeans.

Sir William added that he was glad to have heard what they had to say, and hoped that the frank discussion would lead to a better understanding of the position, and that the deputation, as leading members of the Indian community, would assist the Railway Administration in its efforts to carry out its functions to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The members of the deputation then withdrew, after expressing their thanks to the Minister for the sympathetic manner in which he had received their representations.

Enclosure 2 in No. 55.

28th May, 1918.

South African Railways versus M. D. Bharooche.

DE VILLIERS, Judge President: The respondent, who is an Indian, sued the appellant (defendant in the Court below) for £100 damages. The cause of action was that the plaintiff, having paid for, and had reserved, for himself and two others, seats in the train from Johannesburg to Durban, he was ignominiously ejected from his seat by the officials of the Railway Administration. The appellant relies principally upon clause 222 of the Railway Regulations, with which I shall deal presently. The facts are that the plaintiff, who is an educated man and a wholesale merchant, was travelling to Durban on the date in question. He had bought first-class tickets for himself and two friends who were going with him. They took their seats in a compartment which was marked as being reserved for plaintiff himself and party, in all, three persons. Shortly before the train started a ticket examiner came upon the scene and ordered the plaintiff and his companions out of the compartment. They refused, pointing to the fact that the compartment had been reserved for them, whereupon the ticket examiner fetched a police constable, and, undoubtedly, by a certain amount of force, the plaintiff and his two companions were made to leave the compartment and were placed in a coupé in a coach which it is said was reserved for natives. The magistrate, on these facts, gave judgment for £100 damages and costs.

I wish first to deal with the case as it presents itself to my mind. In my opinion there is a very simple point involved, and I propose to base my judgment upon that point. Under Regulation 221 the General Manager has power to set apart particular compartments on trains for passengers of different races, and it is therein provided that such passengers should only be entitled to travel in such compartments and in no others. Prima facie the compartment in which the plaintiff and his two companions were had been set apart, by competent authority in the booking office, for Indians. In the absence, therefore, of any clear evidence from an equally competent authority that this had been done by error, the Court must come to the conclusion that the plaintiff and his companions were in the right compartment. If that is so, they were wrongly ejected. The ticket examiner had no right to remove them from their seats in the compartment which had been specially reserved for them and place them in a different compartment. But then it is argued that under Regulation 222 a ticket examiner has that power. The clause is certainly very wide; it reads as follows:—

"It shall be competent for the guard, or conductor, or any other railway official, to remove passengers from one compartment to another without giving any reason therefor"

It is argued, on behalf of the appellant, that, even if this Regulation is ultra vires, section 4 (2) (b) of Act 13 of 1908—the section which deals with the reservation of coaches or portions of coaches—at all events it may be justified under section 4 (1) (e), which confers a general power on the Administration to deal with and regulate the accommodation, etc., of passengers. I have carefully considered this argument. But, in my opinion, a Regulation so comprehensive in its terms, giving the railway officials such autocratic powers, cannot for a moment be considered to be intra vires. Under section 4 (2) (b) the most they could do would be that, if persons were to travel in coaches in which they have no right (be they coloured or Europeans), the officials could rectify them by placing them in their proper compartment. Under section 4 (1) (e) I agree that railway officials, and the ticket examiner on the train, ought to have large powers of regulating and dealing with traffic. But I cannot for a moment concede that they have autocratic powers of this nature whereby, as the Regulation apparently reads, they can remove a first-class passenger into a third-class compartment, or take a first-class passenger who is a white man and put him in with natives. That is not justified by the wording of section 4 (1) (e). In my opinion, however, Regulation 222 ought to be read in conjunction with the preceding Regulation, and then it is possible that some reasonable construction may be placed upon it. I must confess I have not been able to make up my mind at present what words of limitation ought to be read into it, for it is so widely framed that it may turn out to be a hopeless task to fit it into Regulation 221. I need not decide this point at the present moment. But I desire to point out that Regulation 223 also is quite general in its terms, and is not specially confined to coloured persons.

The only question which remains is as to the damages. With regard to that, I would first like to say that it is desirable that attorneys should follow the rules which have been specifically laid down in the recent Magistrates' Courts Act. If that had been done in the present case, no doubt the Court would have had more assistance from the magistrate. But that has not been done, and the consequence is that the magistrate's reasons for his findings of fact do not assist the Court at all. I cannot attach any importance to a mere general statement on the part of the magistrate, without an attempt at giving his reasons, that he believed the witnesses on the one side in preference to those on the other. To show how wrong this is, one has only to look at the evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff in this very case. Whereas, I would not be disposed to question the evidence of the plaintiff himself, I have the gravest difficulty about the evidence of the last witness who gave evidence for the plaintiff, who says they were not treated like human beings. That is a portion of the evidence which the magistrate accepts without any discrimination. But, although I am not prepared to go so far as to accept the statement of that witness, I am prepared to accept the statement of the plaintiff, in preference to that of the ticket examiner and the constable, that the word "coolie" was used. In my view it comes to this: that the ticket examiner, being under the impression that he had the power under Regulation 222 to do what he did, erred; he asked the Indians to leave the compartment and referred to them as "coolies." I am prepared, therefore, to accept the finding of the magistrate that there was a certain amount of ignominy, or contumelia, in the case. But it is quite a wrong view that the word "coolie" was used as a mortal insult. That is not the meaning that the word bears in South Africa. I think persons in the position of a ticket examiner, who have to deal with members of the public, would be well advised if they studiously avoid using terms which might be taken up in the wrong light. But I cannot look upon the word "coolie" as having been intended to be used in a very insulting way. However, it was used, and because of that, and also because of the somewhat rough manner (due no doubt to a great extent to the expedition with which the exchange had to be effected, seeing that the train had to leave in a few moments), that certainly entitles the plaintiff to substantial damages. But I think the magistrate erred, and erred very seriously, when he gave £100. That he approached the subject in an unjudicial spirit is shown by the fact that he says, if £200 had been claimed he would have given £200. I quite agree with the argument addressed to us by Mr. Greenberg that this Court will not lightly interfere with the finding of the magistrate on the question of damages, and particularly is it difficult for a Court of Law to fix on a definite amount as compensation for a contumelia, an insult, something intangible, but which is none the less a very real source of annoyance. But, est modus in rebus, there ought to be a limit, and it appears to me that the magistrate has far overstepped the limit in this case. If he had given £5, £10, or £20, or even £25, I would not have quarrelled with it. But it appears to me when he goes beyond that it is so excessive that it cannot be upheld. For these reasons I have come to the conclusion that, under all circumstances of the case, the magistrate ought not to have given the plaintiff more than £25. The appeal is, therefore, allowed with costs, and the judgment of the magistrate set aside, and judgment entered in the Court below for £25 and costs in the Court below.

Justice Wessels: I concur, and have nothing to add.

Justice Curlewis: I concur. I do not wish to express any opinion as regards whether Regulation 222 is ultra vires or not, because, as pointed out by the Judge President, this case can be decided on the fact that the compartment was reserved for the plaintiff and his two friends. As the magistrate points out, there is no evidence before the Court to show that that was a mistake, and therefore the conductor had no right to remove them from the compartment. With regard to the Regulation, looked at in the abstract, it is capable of being put to very arbitrary use. On the other hand, if one regards it in the setting in which we find it, it seems necessary that the officials of the Railway Administration should have the power to remove persons from compartments when once it is recognized that compartments can be reserved for particular individuals and for passengers of different races. It would be idle to reserve a compartment for passengers of any particular race if the official had not the right, when he found someone in the compartment who ought not to be there, to remove him. Similarly, a railway official ought to have a right during the course of the journey to remove a passenger from a compartment if he finds it necessary for the convenience of other passengers to do so. For instance, if a lady joins the train in the course of its journey, it might be necessary to remove male passengers out of a compartment in order to make room for her; I am speaking of long distance journeys, when it is necessary for passengers to pass the night, or a portion of it, in the train.

Justice Wessels: Perhaps under the circumstances it would be as well if I express my opinion on the subject more definitely. I think that Regulation 222 is ultra vires. I do not see how, under any circumstances, it can be brought under Regulation 221. It gives an autocratic power to the railway officials to remove any passenger, without any qualification, from one compartment to another without giving any reason. That, in my opinion, is ultra vires. It seems to me necessary to decide the point, because otherwise the official was entitled to remove the plaintiff.

Enclosure 3 in No. 55.

26 to 32, and 39, City House, Harrison Street,
Johannesburg, 12th June, 1918.

The General Manager,
South African Railways,
Johannesburg.

Bharooche versus S.A.R. & H.

DEAR SIR,

1. We have carefully considered the judgment given in this matter in the Supreme Court, Transvaal Provincial Division, and we cannot recommend an appeal. The Judge President has not given a decided opinion as to whether Regulation 222 is ultra vires. He inclined to the opinion that it should be read in conjunction with the preceding Regulation, and in that case a reasonable construction could be placed upon it. Mr. Justice Curlewis seemed to think that the Regulation was not ultra vires, but Mr. Justice Wessels held that it decidedly was ultra vires.

2. We do not think that the question of the Regulation being ultra vires was seriously argued. A good deal of authority from the English cases could have been produced, and, as far as we can see, the English cases deal with the question of conditions relating to the conveyance of passengers as a matter of contract, and it is therefore not essential that the Regulation should be reasonable. We find in the case of Scott versus G. & S. R., decided in 1895, that the Regulation reads: "The guards will regulate the passengers in taking their seats," but apparently since 1905 all the railway companies in England have issued fresh sets of by-laws, and instead of giving the guard a general authority to remove passengers, the Regulation dealing with this subject specifies the particular causes for which a passenger may be forcibly removed from the train or from the company's premises.

3. At any rate, we do not see anything to be gained by an appeal, and, if further action is brought, the defence raised would be more comprehensive, and would embrace other points that were omitted in the present case.

4. Regulation 222 was originally drafted and approved eight years ago, when the conditions in regard to the transport of coloured persons were somewhat different to what they are now. The same Regulation was taken over as Regulation 19 (b) in the Regulations which came into force at the commencement of this year.

5. There is considerable difference, however, between Regulation 222 of the old Regulations and Regulation 19 (b), because Regulation 222, as it stood, might apply to all passengers of any description (although it was intended to apply only to coloured persons), whereas Regulation 19 (b) must be read in conjunction with Regulation 19 (a), which provides:—

"The Administration may, where practicable, set apart any portion of a train for males or females, persons of particular races, or different classes of persons, or natives. No passenger for whom a portion of a train is so reserved may travel or remain in any other portion, and the Administration may refuse to carry him in any other portion of the train."

And this, we think, affords a reasonable construction, and would probably be so held by the Judge President, and would almost certainly be so held by Mr. Justice Curlewis. So that for the present we do not think there is any necessity to make any alteration in the Regulation.

6. We advise that no further action should be taken.

Yours faithfully,

BELL & ANDERS

Mr. Rees,

Assistant Superintendent (General).

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 3rd October, 1918.)

India Office,

SIR,

Whitehall, London, S.W.1., 2nd October, 1918.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to forward, for the consideration of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, a copy of a letter dated the 7th September from Mr. H. S. L. Polak, with a copy of its enclosure, regarding an incident in connexion with the enforcement of the South African Railway Regulations. It appears to Mr. Montagu, on the facts stated, that in the particular case the provisions of the regulations were successfully appealed to by Indians for whom at first no "reserved" accommodation was provided, and who were refused permission to travel elsewhere on the train. But the fact remains that it was necessary for them to make a protest in order to secure observance of the regulations.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 56.

DEAR MR. MONTAGU, 47-48, Danes Inn House, 265, Strand, London, W.C.2.

WITH reference to the question of the South African Railway's Regulations, I enclose herewith an extract from "Indian Opinion" of 26th July, which indicates something of the present situation.

Mr. A. S. Sorabji, who had been in this country for some time, had recently returned to South Africa, but, within three weeks of his arrival in Johannesburg, he had succumbed to pneumonia. He was one of the most faithful of Mr. Gandhi's fellow-workers in the Passive Resistance movement, and it was very natural that Mr. A. M. Cachalia, the Chairman of the Transvaal British Indian Association, and his friends, who were visiting Durban, should have desired to hasten back to Johannesburg in order to make the necessary preparations for the public funeral that was to be accorded to this fine public worker. Mr. Cachalia, whilst one of the mildest men living, has a remarkable sense of the respect that is due to his country and the community that he represents, and, as an old passive resister, would have undoubtedly resorted to extreme measures to call attention to the racial differentiation intended by the Railway Administration at Durban. Had it not been for the courageous stand that he felt called upon to make, a wretched precedent against the interests and the welfare of the Indian community would undoubtedly have been established.

May I suggest that the incident be brought to the personal notice of Mr. Burton, within whose jurisdiction lies the administration of railway affairs?

Thanking you in anticipation of your giving the matter your attention, and with kind regards.

Yours sincerely,
H. S. L. POLAK.

Right Honourable E. S. Montagu, M.P.,
India Office, S.W.1.

EXTRACT FROM "INDIAN OPINION," 26TH JULY, 1918.

A Significant Incident.

THE refusal to allot seats on the Johannesburg mail to Mr. Cachalia and party brings to light once again the seriousness of the position held by the Indian community in regard to their rights as self-respecting residents of the Union. In spite of having no powers the authorities at Durban Central Station took upon themselves the responsibility of refusing seats to coloured passengers during the holiday rush. We quite understood that there was a rush, and we sympathize with officials who are often overworked and worried in the provision of sufficient accommodation at such times. But, after all, it is a comparatively simple matter, as the Administration advertise that intending passengers must give due notice of their intention to travel, and, when the train is full, no more passengers are booked. Taking advantage of the helplessness of many coloured passengers to protest effectively against a refusal to be allowed to travel by the mail train, the order went forth to put no "reserved" coaches on. But they did not calculate upon having such a man as Mr. Cachalia to deal with. Dignified, and without creating the slightest fuss, Mr. Cachalia stated his position. As a recognized leader, he could not countenance racial discrimination of that description, and he informed the Divisional Superintendent of his determination, and that of those friends who wished to travel with him, to stand firm in demanding accommodation for coloured passengers on all trains. His position was clear. If there was a "reserved" coach on the train and all the seats therein were already booked, then, of course, they would wait their turn. But if, as seemed to be the case, no accommodation whatever was provided for any but Europeans, then he must emphatically protest against it. That, we think, is an unassailable position, and one which the Railway Administration evidently found it impossible to refute, for we find that the Divisional Superintendent wisely decided to grant the usual accommodation. An apt illustration of the utter impossibility of allowing racial discrimination in railway travelling was afforded when Mr. Rustomjee, on Tuesday evening, received an urgent message which necessitated his catching the earliest and fastest train to reach the bedside of his dying relative, the late Mr. Sorabji. Unfortunately, he would not reach there in time, but, by catching that train, he would be able to be in Johannesburg the following evening—twelve hours earlier than by the slow train—in time to arrange for and attend the funeral. What further illustration or argument does one need to convince every Indian of the necessity of carefully watching and guarding against all encroachments upon their liberty?

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch 8th January,* regarding Indian questions. An unexpected development has arisen gravely affecting the position of Indians in Transvaal. Krugersdorp Town Council, baulked, as was explained in the memorandum accompanying my despatch, in their policy of refusing to grant licences to Indians, have now discovered a new method of persecution. Recently they obtained, under sections 130 and 131 of Transvaal Precious and Base Metals Act, 1908, an injunction from the Provincial Division of Supreme Court restraining a European firm from leasing to an Indian tailor shop situated on proclaimed land within Krugersdorp municipal area. The Indian was not made party to action which was undefended. Since a large portion of Witwatersrand is proclaimed land, in view of this judgment many Indians would appear to be in danger of eviction, and only those businesses which are conducted in premises occupied by present owner before 1908 can be regarded as safe. It is understood that several actions for eviction are pending already.

A Cape Town Member moved, on 21st March, for Select Committee of House of Assembly to inquire into this new disability, with a view to remedial legislation during this session. It was admitted by Minister of Interior (1) that it was never contemplated that any person or body of persons except the Government would enforce Act of 1908, and (2) that, in view of the understanding which General Smuts and Gandhi arrived at in 1914 Government had not enforced Act against any Indian who had acquired rights prior to 1914.

He moved an amendment, however, to extend scope of Committee's inquiry to cover alleged evasion of Law No. 3 of 1885, by formation of limited liability company (see paragraph 10 of my despatch of 8th January). Motion was agreed to as amended. This means that whole question of position of Indian trader in Transvaal will be dragged into prominence in such circumstances that definite action can hardly be postponed.

Select Committee's personnel is not reassuring. South African Party have four members (two from the Transvaal, one from Natal, and one from a country district), Cape Unionists three (two from Transvaal, one of whom is committed deeply against Indians), Nationalists two (who presumably will be anti-Indian as a matter of faith), Labour one (a Natal member).

I had preliminary discussion recently with the Acting Prime Minister, and I drew Cabinet's attention to your despatch Dominions 476, 28th August,* which remains unanswered.

I shall not lose any opportunity of impressing on my Ministers importance of question from Imperial standpoint, but outlook is far from promising in present circumstances. It is most regrettable that the question should have arisen while Prime Minister and General Smuts are absent, both of whom recognize its gravity and are fully conversant with its details.—BUXTON.

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 16th April, 1919.)

SIR,

India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W., 15th April, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to acknowledge the receipt of Sir H. Lambert's letter of 8th April,‡ transmitting copy of a telegram from the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa regarding the action taken by the Krugersdorp Town Council under the Transvaal Precious and Base Metals Act of 1908.

Mr. Secretary Montagu views with grave concern the possibility that Indians residing on proclaimed land may become liable to eviction at the instance of local authorities. He notes the admission of the Minister of the Interior that it was never contemplated that action could be taken, except by the Government, under the Act in question. The inclusion of the question of the ownership of land in the Transvaal by limited liability companies composed of Indians, in the terms of reference to the Select Committee which has been appointed, also gives rise to serious apprehensions.

With regard to the wording of section 131 (1) of the Transvaal Act, under which the action of the Krugersdorp Town Council has been taken, I am to invite a reference to the telegram of 28th December, 1908,§ sent by the then Secretary of State to the Government of the Transvaal, copy of which was communicated to this Department, with Colonial Office memorandum of 6th January, 1909,¶ and am to suggest, for Viscount Milner's consideration, whether the words "other places" and the powers vested in the Mining Commissioner under the section, may not afford a means for protecting the vested rights of Indians acquired since the passing of the Act, which appear now to be endangered. Perhaps, if Viscount Milner sees no objection, a telegraphic inquiry might be addressed to the Governor-General on the point.

That the law should be administered with a due regard to such rights would only be in accordance with the specific pledge given by General Smuts to Mr. Gandhi in 1914, as expressed in the penultimate paragraph of the letter from Mr. E. H. L. Gorges, of the 30th June, 1914,|| copy of which formed an enclosure to Sir J. Anderson's letter to this Department, dated 15th August, 1914.¶

17TH APRIL. Reference my telegram of 12th April,* regarding Indians. I am confidentially informed that, on 14th April, Select Committee adopted two resolutions, viz. :—

(1) By six votes to three, that legislation should be introduced which should provide that the provisions of sections 130 and 131 of Transvaal Act No. 35, of 1908, and any similar provisions within the freehold title or deed of grants issued, or to be issued, under Act No. 34 of 1908, in any township, shall not apply to British Indians or their successors in title who were carrying on business on 1st May, 1919, under a licence issued by a duly appointed authority, or to the bona fide employees of such British Indians or their successors in title for so long as such business is carried on in the same township, as on 1st May, 1919.

(2) By eight votes to one, that Transvaal Law No. 3 of 1885, should be so amended that the provision against owning of fixed property contained therein be also extended to any company or other body, corporate or incorporate, if the persons having the controlling interest therein belong to any of the native Asiatic races.

I understand that effect of (1) is to give statutory protection to existing trading rights in Government townships and on proclaimed land, both to present holders of licences and to their business successors so long as business remains in same township, but to leave intact as against acquisition of fresh trading facilities the restrictive provisions of Precious and Base Metals Act of 1908, and of titles and deeds of grants issued under the Townships Act, in respect of Government township.

The effect of (2) is to refrain from interference with rights of land ownership lawfully acquired by Indian companies up to date, but for the future to apply to companies as well as to individuals the restrictions of Law No. 3 of 1885.

The resolutions taken together are, on the whole, better than I expected, and I am confident that no recommendations more generous in respect of the future would have had any prospect of acceptance by Parliament even if made by Committee. I am informed privately by Alexander, who moved for Committee in the interest of the Indians, that he is satisfied, on the whole, with decision, and that it goes considerably beyond what he anticipated. He will do his best to deprecate any agitation on the part of Indians.

On 23rd April Committee meets again to consider draft report which the Chairman is preparing.—BUXTON.

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 28th May, 1919.)

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1., 27th May, 1919.
I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to refer to the correspondence ending with Sir Henry Lambert's Confidential letter, dated the 29th April, 1919,* regarding the recommendations made by the Select Committee of the House of Assembly of South Africa, recently appointed to inquire into certain questions affecting the status of British Indians in the Transvaal.

It is observed from the summary of the report of the Committee contained in the telegram from the Governor-General, of the 17th April,† that it made two recommendations:—

- (1) That steps should be taken to safeguard the existing rights of Indians from interference, under the provisions of the Transvaal Act. No. 35 of 1908, or as a result of the provisions of Act No. 34 of the same year.
- (2) That an amendment of Transvaal Law III of 1885 should be made with a view to extending the provision against the ownership of fixed property by Indians to such ownership by companies or other bodies the controlling interest in which is in Indian hands.

It is further intimated that the effect of the latter recommendation, if carried into effect, would be not to interfere with rights acquired by Indian companies up to date, but to apply the restrictions of the law in future to companies as well as to individuals.

Mr. Secretary Montagu notes that in the opinion of the Governor-General no recommendations more generous with respect to the future would have had any prospect of acceptance by Parliament, but he cannot regard the second recommendation of the Committee as satisfactory from the point of view of Indian interests. Such legislation as is recommended would have the effect of depriving Indians of the future exercise of a right which they now enjoy under the interpretation which has been given by the Supreme Court to the law as it stands. A step of this character would appear to be a departure from the spirit of the understanding between the Government and the Indian community which was reached in 1914, as expressed in Mr. Gorges's letter to Mr. Gandhi of the 30th June, 1914.‡ It would further be difficult to reconcile it with the attitude taken up by Mr. Burton at the Imperial War Conference of 1918, when he said, in speaking on Resolution No. 21, that the memorandum laid before the Conference (which suggested the repeal of Law III. of 1885) would receive the most sympathetic consideration that the South African Government could give to it.

Mr. Montagu recognizes that, as pointed out by Lord Buxton in his Confidential despatch of the 8th January, 1919,§ this is not the time to press for a repeal of Law III. of 1885, but he cannot help believing that the Indian community would feel a justifiable sense of grievance if this law were amended in order to enforce a restriction from which they at present escape. He accordingly ventures to express a hope that Viscount Milner will use his good offices, in consultation with the Governor-General, to avoid, if possible, any alteration of that Law in the sense recommended by the Committee.

TELEGRAM FROM BRITISH INDIA ASSOCIATION to THE RIGHT HONOURABLE E. S. MONTAGU, BRITISH PEACE DELEGATION, PARIS, DATED JOHANNESBURG, 16TH MAY, 1919.

FOLLOWING agitation European trade competitors for provincial town. Parliamentary Committee inquired into Gold Law in its application to Indian traders, also operation of Law 3 of 1885 in regard to holding fixed property by Asiatic Limited Companies. Association tendered evidence great length. Committee recommend that vested rights of Indian carrying on business in proclaimed mining areas in June, 1914, and who since that date obtained trading licence and carried on business in such areas should be respected. Indians should have right to transfer, make over their existing business to other Indians legally residing in Transvaal, steps be immediately taken render it impossible Asiatics in future to obtain trading licences for new business. Suggests after 1st May, 1919, no new trading licences shall be granted to Asiatics. Legislation be immediately introduced amending Law 3 of 1885 prohibiting ownership of fixed property by company or corporate body wherein Asiatics hold controlling interests. Bill accordingly introduced into Parliament. Association greatly alarmed at prospect of imposition of further disability upon Indians this stage their history. Had hoped time was ripe for removal of old disability instead of imposition of new ones. Appeal for full support and co-operation.—ASWAT, Chairman.

South African Party members for constituencies not on Rand, to exclude from protection rights acquired since Smuts-Gandhi Agreement of 1914, was defeated by substantial majorities after Malan had promised Commission to inquire into Indian question generally. New clause, however, moved by South African Party member for Ermelo, was adopted by forty-five to thirty-one, empowering any authority issuing trade licences in whole of Transvaal or any part thereof to refuse without reason assigned any application for new licence by an Asiatic as defined in Transvaal Act 36 of 1908 who was not on 1st May, 1919, carrying on business within the area of the authority concerned. Minority comprised members of Cabinet, Natal members, excepting Myburgh, Cape Unionists, five Rand Unionists, three private South African Party members from Cape and Transvaal, including Rooth, and two Labour. Majority consisted of Nationalists and South African Party, with three Unionists and three Labour. Other amendments made on the motion of Rooth as sop to Opposition provide: (1) That prohibition of Transvaal Law 3 of 1885 against ownership of fixed property, shall apply as from (?) 1st May, 1919, not only to companies in which one or more Asiatics have controlling interest, but also to registration of a mortgage over fixed property to, or in favour of, any Asiatic otherwise than as security for bona fide loan or investment in ordinary course of business. (2) That in respect of fixed property acquired by such company as above mentioned before 1st May, 1919, provision of Law 3 of 1885 shall be construed as if present Bill had not passed. (3) That any such company which has acquired ownership of fixed property since 1st May shall dispose thereof within two years from commencement of Act, or within such further period as competent court on application may allow, and that on failure to do so property shall on petition of any member of public be sold by order of competent court. These latter amendments, unwelcome though they may (be), appear only to prevent further evasions of existing law by Asiatics. I regard new clause, however, as most objectionable, since it imposes fresh disability on Asiatics by name. It is the more unwarrantable as it introduces matter which was not before Select Committee, and on which Indians, therefore, were not heard. It clearly should not have been legislated upon before promised Commission has reported. Even if Government instruct revenue officers not to refuse general dealers' licences, municipalities would have free hand as to new grocers' licences. I represented all this very forcibly to Malan in an interview yesterday on my return from Basutoland. He has promised to consult his colleagues and to have report stage postponed until after South African Party caucus meeting on 30th May. Have since seen Smartt and De Wet. Remedial action on report stage not quite impossible, though I am not sanguine, but there is possibility of Senate deleting new clause. Will do my best. Disallowance, or even reservation, would be very inexpedient, as it would only be playing into hands of Nationalists. On publication of Select Committee's report Indians held meeting of protest and sent telegrams of protest on usual lines. Deputation, however, received by Malan on having matter explained to them said they had misunderstood recommendations and expressed themselves as satisfied. Amendments made to Bill have already revived protests. Anti-Asiatic feeling among Europeans very strong in Transvaal generally, and especially on Rand, as shown in House, in Provincial Council, and in representations received by Ministers and members. Please show this telegram to Botha and Smuts.—BUXTON.

JUNE 6TH. Am requested by British Indian League of Transvaal to forward following message for submission to His Majesty the King:—

Begins.—Transvaal Parliament passing Bill depriving Indian British subjects rights to hold landed property and obtain trading licence. Bill is based on trade jealousy and racial differentiation. First time in history of British Empire such drastic legislation imposed on British subjects. It creates dangerous precedent, practically disregards fundamental principles on which Empire is based, disregards British flag, takes stand on equal privileges of justice and protection of all British subjects whatsoever race or creed. Bill is destined to all intents and purposes to prevent by law our national and industrial development, in fact strikes at our very existence. We therefore humbly beseech your Majesty to exercise your prerogative by withholding sanction to an unjust, undeserving, unheard-of piece of legislation against your Majesty's own loyal subjects. 47-48, Danes Inn House,

DEAR COLONEL AMERY,

265, Strand, London, W.C.2, 12th June, 1919.

I ought earlier to have sent you the enclosed papers, but upon my return to my office after seeing you the other day, I found a telegram stating that the Anti-Indian Bill had emerged from the Committee stage on the 23rd ultimo in a still more outrageous form, and it did not seem to me that very much could be done in the way of amending the Bill. I now find that it has passed the third reading.

* No. 72.

and that still further hostile amendments have been incorporated, for which there is no justification whatever. This took place on the 4th instant. There is still the possibility that something may be done in the Senate, as some of the amendments have been carried, in spite of the appeal of the Union Government. You will see that a most improper use has been made of the letter from Mr. Gandhi to Mr. Gorges, the Secretary for the Interior, dated 7th July, 1914. That letter was a private one giving Mr. Gandhi's personal view on the points raised in it, and it did not in any way commit, or propose to commit, the Indian community to acceptance of the views therein set forth, nor in point of fact, as you will see from the letter addressed to the Transvaal Municipal Association by the Chairman of the Transvaal British Indian Association, did the Indian Committee at any time accept those views.

I enclose also an extract from a letter to me from Mr. Gandhi himself when I was in India, after perusal of this correspondence. It speaks for itself. The Union Government seem to have confused the question of the issue of trading licences under the general Revenue Licences Ordinance with that of residence or occupation in mining areas under the Gold Law. I see also from the report of the Select Committee of the Union Assembly that an improper use has been made of some remarks of mine a few days after Mr. Gandhi's letter was written, in order to found a charge against the Indian community that it has departed from the terms of the 1914 settlement. A more wanton and cruel distortion of the facts could be hardly conceived, and I propose at an early date to send you a memorandum upon the evidence produced before the Select Committee. The matter is of such importance, and the spirit of the times has been so startlingly ignored by the Union Assembly, that these must serve as my excuse for burdening you with these further details.

Yours &c.,
H. S. L. POLAK

Enclosure 1 in No. 75.

NOTE ON THE PRESENT ANTI-ASIATIC BILL FOR TRANSVAAL.

BY H. S. L. POLAK.

THE Bill at present before the Union Parliament is based upon recommendations of a Select Committee of the Union Assembly. Its operation is to be confined to the Transvaal Province, and it will affect and limit the rights of Indians therein lawfully resident, (a) as regards the ownership of land, and (b) as regards trading. It should be noted that the Transvaal Indian population is roughly 12,000, and bears the relation to the European population of one to sixteen. It is stationary and cannot be added to from outside by reason of the restrictions of the immigration law, which effectively prevents an enlargement of the population save by natural increase. It should also be noted that the measure will apply to Indians who are already in the Transvaal lawfully and who have been permitted to enter and reside there.

Ownership of "Fixed" Property.

Law 3 of 1885, passed by the Volksraad of the South African Republic, prohibited, among other things, the ownership of "fixed" or landed property by Asiatics. South African natives, "coloured" people (or half-castes), and Europeans are entitled to own "fixed" property. At the Cape and in Natal (in which latter Province the vast bulk of Indians reside and even outnumber the Europeans), Indians freely own "fixed" property.

Not very long after the enactment of Law 3 of 1885 the Republican Government realized that the scope of the measure was too wide, and itself suggested a means of evasion. It recommended that certain landed property that had been purchased by an Indian firm at public auction, and to which legal title could not be granted because of Law 3 of 1885, should be registered in the official land registers in the name of some European nominee, and transfer was eventually effected in the name of the Government Mining Commissioner of the district.

This procedure was followed in several other cases, and in course of time non-official Europeans took transfer of such properties, of which they were the nominal legal owners, but of which the Indian was the virtual and beneficial owner. The usual procedure, in order to protect the Indian owner, was to register against the title-deeds a mortgage-bond in favour of the Indian by the European nominal owner. I myself am the legal "owner" in this way of several properties belonging to former clients, to whom, in each case, I have passed a mortgage-bond. Such an instance is statutorily recorded in section 19 of Act 36 of 1905. The ownership of a mortgage bond effectively protects the Indian mortgagee, and property in it is quite legal, as it is not, in Roman Dutch law, treated as "fixed" property. These transactions were frequent up to 1914, and were recognized both by the Government and by the Courts. The former, on more than one occasion, took legal advice, and the Courts decided that the Indian "virtual" owner had a legal claim against the estate of the European registered owner, concurrent where no mortgage-bond had been passed, preferent where it had been.

In 1913 it was discovered that the Transvaal Company Act of 1909 could be used to give Indians a nearer indirect ownership of "fixed" property. It enables any two persons, irrespective of race, colour, or sex, to become members of, and register a private company, with limited liability, for any lawful purpose. As, in Roman Dutch law, the persona of a company or corporation is different to, and separate from that of the individual members of it, the ownership of "fixed" property was a lawful purpose. Since 1913 Indians have acquired a number of properties by this means. I have myself registered several such companies for the express purpose, among many others, of acquiring "fixed" property. Such indirect ownership has been held by the Courts to be legal.

It should, therefore, be noted that—

- (i) the first "evasions" of the purpose and intention of Law 3 of 1885 were not merely connived at but actually recommended and aided by the Republican Government;
- (ii) no less than two methods of "evasion" or indirect ownership were practised by Indians and recognized by the Courts and the Government of the Province;
- (iii) the right of indirect ownership has been exercised almost ever since the passing of Law 3 of 1885 until the present time;
- (iv) the number and value of properties thus owned by Indians is extraordinarily small as compared with that owned by Europeans.

Assuming that it is not possible to secure the withdrawal of the present Bill, but not otherwise, and merely for the purpose of rendering it as little harmful as possible to Indians, the following amendments or proposals are suggested:—

- (a) It should be ascertained whether both of these methods of indirect ownership are dealt with in the Bill or not.
- (b) If they are, an amendment should be inserted reserving to Indians the right of ownership of mortgage-bonds upon "fixed" property.
- (c) If only the second method is dealt with it should be made certain that no amendment is inserted depriving Indians of the right to avail themselves of the earlier practice.
- (d) It is understood that an amendment of Law 3 of 1885 is contemplated, making it impossible for Indians to acquire ownership of "fixed" property through companies or corporations in which Indians have a controlling interest. This method of direct anti-Indian legislation is highly objectionable. It has always been the aim of the Indian community to prevent the enactment of legislation of a clearly racial and differential character. The same purpose as it is now sought to achieve may be secured in other ways. I propose that, instead of an amendment of Law 3 of 1885, an offensive piece of anti-Asiatic legislation, there should be an amendment of the Company Law, giving power to the Registrar of Companies, in his discretion, to refuse to grant the registration of any company. He can then receive private official instructions to refuse to register any company or corporation in which Asiatics have a controlling interest whose memorandum of association contains a provision for the acquisition of "fixed" property. By this means racial discrimination by statute is avoided, the law being, in terms of general application, the same principle being, in fact, adopted as under the Union Immigration Law.

Trading.

In the Transvaal trade is carried on under general dealers', or under hawkers' and pedlars' licences. The former are invariably issued by the Government, whether within or outside of municipal areas. But under the Local Government Ordinance of 1912 municipalities are also empowered to require any person engaged in the sale or storage of foodstuffs for human consumption to take out a "grocery" licence from the municipal authority. Hawkers' and pedlars' licences are issued by municipalities within municipal limits, and by Government outside these limits. The Indian community is almost entirely dependent upon its trade, either as general dealers or as hawkers and pedlars. It is now proposed to restrict the trading enterprise of Indians carrying on business in areas proclaimed under the Gold Law (1909). The new measure will thus affect the means of livelihood of the majority of Indians in the Transvaal who are resident in such areas, which include the most populous towns in the Province. Rights acquired prior to and since 1914, and licences taken out up to 1st May, 1919, are to be recognized and validated, if necessary. But no new licences are to be issued to Indians for proclaimed mining areas. It is not believed that the new restriction is to extend beyond those areas, though this should be definitely ascertained.

The following proposals are now made, on the same assumption as above mentioned, to render the measure as little harmful as possible:—

- (i) For the same reasons as above, instead of amending the Gold Law, which contains already specific anti-Asiatic provisions, the Revenue Licences Ordinance and the Local Government Ordinance should be amended, in general terms, empowering the Government or a municipality to refuse to any person, in its discretion, a new general dealer's or a grocer's (or similar) licence.
- (ii) This power should be restricted to such areas and not extended beyond them.
- (iii) The issue of hawkers' and pedlars' licences, as heretofore, should not be affected. Indian hawkers are a great convenience to the European population, whether within or outside municipalities, conveying commodities to the house-doors and on to farms. Moreover, the Indian wholesale firms depend very largely upon the sales of the hawkers and pedlars they employ in considerable numbers.
- (iv) New licences should, except for specified reasons affecting the character or cleanliness of person or premises of the licensees, be issued (a) by municipalities to Indians already carrying on business within their limits for branch businesses of the same kind in the same municipal areas, and (b) by Government, for branch businesses in the same district.
- (v) New licences should be granted, upon the usual conditions to South African-born Indians. The rights of these (who cannot ordinarily leave South Africa, or even the Transvaal, and who have no knowledge whatever of conditions of life in India or elsewhere) should be especially safeguarded. Unless they are the children of traders, their capital will be very small and insufficient to purchase existing Indian licences, whose limited numbers will give them an artificial value.
- (vi) New licences should be issued as heretofore for the sale of South African produce or to keepers of restaurants, refreshment rooms, or eating houses.
- (vii) No interference should be permitted in the present rights of Indians to transfer their businesses to other Indians, to take other Indians into partnership freely, and to transmit their trading rights and businesses to their legal heirs or to transfer them to companies and corporations in which Indians have a controlling interest. The licences for such businesses should not be regarded in law as new licences.

Only such points as it is necessary to raise, having regard to the language of the present Bill, should be raised. It is undesirable to put forward suggestions where no provision is made for the extreme forms of limitation assumed in the foregoing recommendations.

Enclosure 2 in No. 75.

Sir,

23rd May, 1916.

My Association has observed recently what appears to be a concerted action on the part of Transvaal municipalities to refuse to issue municipal licences to Indian applicants, and my Association has reason to believe that this procedure has been adopted by agreement amongst municipalities, possibly by resolution of your Association. My Association has also deduced from its observations the probability that such decision must have been reached by reason of some misunderstanding as to the nature of the settlement reached between the Government and the Indian community of the Transvaal in 1914, and this surmise has been confirmed by the newspaper report of the proceedings of the Krugersdorp Town Council in refusing the issue to an Indian applicant of a municipal licence, not only on one of the grounds mentioned under section 99 of the Local Government Ordinance, 1912, but also in terms of the agreement entered into between the Government and Mr. Gandhi on behalf of the Indian community. On behalf of my Association I thereupon communicated with that municipality, asking them to furnish my Association with the grounds upon which they based their statement, and I received a reply referring my Association to the Department of the Interior, with whom I accordingly communicated. My Association has now received a reply stating that in all probability the basis of the statement made at the meeting of the Krugersdorp Town Council was a paragraph appearing in a letter addressed personally by Mr. Gandhi to Mr. Gorges, then Secretary for the Interior, on the 7th July, 1914, and, upon reference thereto, it appears to my Association to be clear that a complete misunderstanding has arisen as to exactly what was Mr. Gandhi's attitude at that time.

In order to place the matter upon a proper basis I have sought the permission of the Department of the Interior to communicate to you, which I do herewith, for transmission as a private document not for publication, to the various municipalities that are members of your Association, of Mr. Gandhi's letter of the 7th July, 1914. From an attentive perusal of this document you will observe, in the first place, that Mr. Gandhi throughout is discussing the position of Indians under the Gold Law and Townships Act, for at that time, and in the absence of certain judicial decisions that have since been given, the position of Indians in certain areas was considerably jeopardized by the actual or threatened operation of the Gold Law at the hands of the Government, and Mr. Gandhi's definition of "vested interests" applies only in regard to its relationship to the Gold Law and Townships Act. It has no direct or indirect reference whatever to the issue or non-issue of trading licences, and certainly none as to licences issuable by municipalities, which was not in his contemplation or that of my Association at that time.

You will also observe that in any event Mr. Gandhi's statement was one of his own personal views, and that he expressly safeguarded himself from saying anything that would bind the Indian community, especially having regard to his approaching departure from South Africa.

It must be quite obvious to your Association that the Indian community cannot possibly be a party to such restriction of licences as has evidently been contemplated by the municipalities, if only for the fact that provision must be made for those Indians who are born or have been brought up in this country, though, of course, this is but one of many reasons why the Indian community will decline to be a party to such an arrangement as has evidently been agreed upon in the absence of any reference to themselves.

I have, therefore, to request that your Association will be so good as to do what is necessary to place the facts hereinbefore referred to in a suitable manner to the notice of the various municipalities that constitute your Association.

Thanking you in anticipation

I have, &c.,

A. M. CACHALIA,
Chairman.

The Secretary,
Transvaal Municipal Association,
Johannesburg.

DEAR MR. GORGES,

7th July, 1914

I HAVE NOW got a moment to submit my note upon the Gold Law. As you know, after maturer consideration, I refrained from pressing for the insertion of a special clause defining "vested rights" in connexion with the Gold Law and Townships Amendment Act, because I felt that any definition in the correspondence might result in restricting the future action of my countrymen. However, so far as my interpretation of "vested rights" is concerned, I think I shall reduce it to writing. General Smuts was good enough to say that he would endeavour to protect vested rights as defined by me. The following is the definition I submitted to Sir Benjamin Robertson, who, I understood, submitted it to General Smuts. My letter containing, among other matters, the definition, is dated the 4th March, 1914: "By vested rights I understand the right of an Indian and his successors to live and trade in the township in which he was living and trading, no matter how often he shifts his residence or business from place to place in the same township." I am fortified in my interpretation by the answer given by Mr. Harcourt in connexion with the matter, in the House of Commons, on the 27th June, 1911: "Complaints against that legislation (the Gold Law and Townships Amendment Act) have been made, and are now being investigated by the Government of the Union of South Africa, who have lately stated that there is no intention of interfering with any business or right to carry on business acquired and exercised by Indians prior to the date of the legislation." I have also now traced the note by Mr. De Villiers which I alluded to in our conversation. It is contained in a White Paper published in London in March, 1912, and has the following: "No right or privileges which a coloured person has at the present time is taken away by the new Act (Act 35 of 1908)." And, again, "Section 131, which, before the Bill was introduced into Parliament, formed the subject of questions in the English House of Commons and of despatches from the Secretary of State to the Governor, has been amended in Committee so as to safeguard any rights which a coloured person may at the present time have of occupying land in mining areas." Certainly, prior to the passing of the Gold Law, no restrictions were, to my knowledge, placed upon the movement or the trade of British Indians in the gold areas. There can, therefore, be no justification for any restriction now, especially in regard to those who are already settled in their respective townships.

AUGUST, 1917.

WITH reference to the correspondence dated 23rd May, 1916, regarding the interpretation of the term "vested rights." In my letter of the 7th July, 1917, addressed to Mr. Gorges, I entirely concur in the opinions therein expressed. I think that my letter is not capable of bearing a double interpretation, and, as stated therein, it cannot in any case be acted upon without its being accepted by the community.

47-48, Danes Inn House,

DEAR COLONEL AMERY,

265, Strand, London, W.C.2, 13th June, 1919.

As promised, I now send you the details of the proposal to exclude Natal Indians from the municipal franchise. A conference of the municipal authorities of the Province has been held to consider a draft ordinance to consolidate and amend the law relating to the municipal franchise, and among other things the qualification of the election of town councillors. This ordinance, unless drastic changes are made in it, will presently come before the Provincial Council, and it will provide:—

- (a) That every person of European descent, male or female, being a British subject and possessing certain specific qualifications, shall be entitled to be enrolled as a burgess and to vote at the election of Councillors, and
- (b) That every person of European descent, male or female, of full age, being a British subject, who is enrolled as a burgess and possessing certain specific qualifications, shall be eligible to be elected a Councillor, and qualified to hold office as such.

This is the third time, at least, that an attempt has been made to create a racial bar and to confine the municipal franchise and election of councillors to white persons, thus excluding all Indians, even Natal born, not already on a voters' roll. I venture respectfully to suggest that before this matter is allowed to proceed any further, and having regard to the rapidity with which various stages of the Transvaal anti-Indian Bill have been taken, the Colonial Office will make such representations as it may be advised to prevent this further injustice to the resident Indian population.

Yours, &c.,
H. S. L. POLAK.

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W., 18th June, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to refer to my letter dated 27th May, 1919,† on the subject of the report of a Select Committee on certain questions affecting the status of Indians in the Transvaal.

It is understood that a Bill has now been introduced in the House of Assembly, and has passed its third reading, which, so far as it deals with the ownership of land by Indian limited liability companies in the Transvaal, deprives such companies of their existing right to acquire such ownership from 1st May, 1919.

It is also understood that a new clause was inserted in the Bill, against the wishes of its promoters, dealing with the question (which did not come before the Select Committee) of the grant of trading licences to Indians, and that the effect of this would be to empower a licensing authority to refuse an application on the sole ground of the applicant being an Asiatic. This would deprive Indians of the protection of the Courts, which at present uphold appeals against the refusal of licences when no reason can be alleged for such refusal otherwise than on purely racial grounds. Such a change in the law would obviously be a most serious attack on the economic basis of the life of the Indian community, and Mr. Secretary Montagu cannot believe that it will under any conditions be permitted by the South African Government.

As regards the question of ownership of real property, Mr. Montagu is aware of the sympathetic consideration which is habitually accorded by the Governor-General and the Government of the Union to the interests of the Indian community, and recognizes that it may have been difficult in the present instance to withstand the demands of European public opinion in and outside the Union Parliament in favour of giving effect to the original intentions of the Transvaal legislature. But he cannot but regard it as regrettable that such legislation should have been thought necessary at the present time. Apart from the fact that the position in the Transvaal has completely altered since 1885, he fears that this measure is liable to be resented as a breach of the spirit, if not of the letter, of the understanding reached between General Smuts and Mr. Gandhi in 1914, since, though existing owners may be respected, an existing right to acquire ownership is to be abrogated for the future.

† No. 69.

I am to forward, with reference to these questions, copy of a telegram which has been received from the Viceroy on this subject. The telegram from the Governor-General of South Africa, of 17th April,* which stated the recommendations of the Committee, has been communicated to the Government of India by mail of 7th May. With regard to the Viceroy's reference to Law 3 of 1885, Mr. Montagu wishes again to draw attention to the contrast between the action now proposed and the attitude of South Africa's representatives towards the memorandum on this subject at the Imperial War Conference of 1918.

Any protest from the Indian community in South Africa which appears to be based on justifiable grounds finds an immediate response in India, and for this reason alone Mr. Montagu cannot disinterest himself in such matters.

He accordingly trusts that any fresh legislation of restrictive character will at any rate be limited to the narrowest possible bounds, and would suggest, for Viscount Milner's consideration, that the Government of the Union should be consulted by telegraph before further progress is made with the Bill, with this object in view.

21ST JUNE. With reference to your telegram 17th June,† Indian Bill. I received yesterday representatives of Transvaal British Indian Association, who came to urge that assent should be withheld. I discussed matter at considerable length, giving them as my private opinion that if Bill were disallowed it would be greatly to disadvantage of present traders and their successors, and, therefore, to community as a whole. They appeared to be impressed, but will, I think, feel bound to make protest of some gravity. I have no doubt, however, in my mind that, in spite of its drawbacks, Bill is best Indians can get in present circumstances, and that if disallowed existing licences and property owners will be, as they themselves admit, probably ruined before any further legislation could be passed, and such further legislation would almost certainly be even less liberal. I have now signified assent.—Buxton.

DEAR MR. POLAK, Downing Street, 25th June, 1919.
COLONEL AMERY wishes me to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 12th and 13th June† on the subject of Indian disabilities in South Africa.

You will probably be aware now that the new clause regarding trading licences, which was adopted during the Committee stage of the Asiatics (Land and Trading) Amendment Act, was subsequently deleted in the Senate, and the deletion was accepted by the House of Assembly.

Colonel Amery has noted what you say about the proposal to exclude Natal Indians from the Municipal Franchise and the question will be carefully borne in mind.

No. 85.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 2nd July, 1919.)

[Answered by No. 87.]

(Confidential.)

MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 13th June, 1919.

On 8th January,‡ I wrote you at some length in regard to the question of the British Indians in the Union. I did not then anticipate that "the Indian Question" would be raised in the Session of Parliament that was just about to be held.

2. But, in consequence of the action of the Krugersdorp Municipality (see my telegram of the 31st March§), the question has been raised, and by the Indian traders themselves. The result is that a Bill dealing with certain trading and ownership questions affecting the British Indian community in the Transvaal has been discussed, and has now passed both Houses.

3. I have endeavoured by a series of telegrams to keep Your Lordship informed of the most important developments in regard to the Parliamentary Inquiry and the resulting legislation upon questions affecting the trading facilities of British Indians in the Transvaal.

4. It may be convenient, however, now that the Asiatics (Land and Trading) Amendment Bill has practically passed, to describe more fully the progress of events since the appointment, towards the end of March, of a Select Committee on Indian Disabilities.

* No. 81.

† Nos. 75 and 77.

‡ No. 37.

§ No. 59.

5. Your Lordship will recollect that the appointment of the Committee arose directly out of the presentation of a Petition to the House of Assembly by certain members of the Committee of the Transvaal British Indian Association and the Krugersdorp branch thereof. I append a copy of the text of the Petition. It will be observed that the Petitioners describe themselves as representing British Indian traders who have established businesses at Krugersdorp as well as the British Indian Association, and that, while complaining generally of the restrictive provisions of the existing law, they express an apprehension that a general campaign may be in progress with the object of ousting Indian trade from the Transvaal. They proceed to say that they "are gravely concerned with the retention and safeguard of those rights to trade which they have hitherto been allowed to enjoy, and which since the settlement arrived at with the Government in 1914, when General Smuts was Minister of the Interior, they were given to understand would in no way be affected." It would seem, therefore, that the primary purpose of the petitioners was to obtain security for trading rights actually in existence.

6. A copy of the Report of the Select Committee is in Your Lordship's possession. It would not be possible within the limits of time and space at my disposal to attempt a précis either of the Report itself, or of the very interesting Minutes of Evidence which are attached thereto.

7. I feared at first that a Committee, constituted as this was, might have yielded to the temptation of allowing the claim of Indians for protection of existing rights to be outweighed by the counter-claim of European traders for protection against Indian competition. I did what I could to impress both upon the Minister of Justice, who was a Member of the Committee, and upon the Acting Prime Minister, a due appreciation of the important Imperial interests at stake. It would, of course, have been neither correct nor judicious for me to intervene officially, and the representations I made were entirely informal. As a general rule, they were made verbally, but on one occasion at least I thought it desirable to give Mr. de Wet a written statement of my views.

8. I enclose herewith a copy of the private letter which I addressed to him on the 12th April, covering a brief memorandum on certain points which I was anxious to press upon his attention.

9. I was primarily concerned to dispel, so far as I could, the impression that Mr. Gandhi, in his agreement with General Smuts in 1914, had defined the high-water mark of Indian aspirations in regard to trading facilities by his stipulation for the protection of vested rights, and that any Indians who since 1914 had obtained, or attempted to obtain, new trading licences on proclaimed ground had been guilty of a breach of the agreement. As I understand the position, Mr. Gandhi in 1914 was defining conditions which, while they constituted the maximum then obtainable, amounted only to the minimum of the concessions requisite for an amicable settlement. It seems to me that so far from committing the Indian community to a pledge that nothing further should ever be asked for in future, he was distinctly looking forward to the advent of better days, when the gradual disappearance of prejudice would enable the Indians to enter into the enjoyment of more extensive rights. The prevalence of a misconception of the real effect of the Smuts-Gandhi agreement has been one of the most troublesome factors in the situation, and has been used freely by Sir Abe Bailey and other critics of the Bill as an argument for restricting its protective provisions to such rights only as were in existence in 1914.

10. I thought it prudent also to lodge a caveat against the assumption that the Petition which had been referred to the Committee was a statement of the case of the whole Indian community. I regard it rather as a plea by those Indians who have actually acquired rights for security in their enjoyment than as a declaration of the aspirations of the community as a whole.

11. I also endeavoured to show that where Indians, either before or since 1914, had been suffered to acquire trading rights, whether in the result of administrative inaction or through loopholes in the law, it would be unjust to deprive them of such rights by retrospective legislation, even if it were necessary so to alter the law as to prevent future evasions or circumventions of its intention.

12. I was much relieved when I learnt that the Committee had decided, after a division in which one of the Nationalist members, Mr. Joubert, voted in the majority, that protection should be given to existing rights, whether acquired before or since 1914, and that such protection was to be extended to lawful successors in title, so long as the businesses in question remained in one and the same township.

13. The Committee drafted a Bill giving effect to their recommendations, and this was introduced by the Chairman, Mr. Rooth. Prior discussion of the Committee's Report was dispensed with, probably with a view to saving time, and its place was taken by the debate on the Second Reading. The operative portion of the Bill was contained in two clauses, the first of which applied to the residence on, or occupation of, proclaimed land in the Transvaal by Indians, while the second dealt with the ownership of fixed property in the whole of the Transvaal by Indian companies.

14. By the former clause protection was given to any British Indian who on the 1st May, 1919, was carrying on a business on proclaimed land or in any Government township, under a trading licence lawfully issued, in respect of such business, or to any persons bona fide in his employment or to his successor in title, so long as the business was carried on in one and the same township.

15. By the latter clause the restrictions of the old Transvaal Republican Law No. 3 of 1885 against the ownership of fixed property in the Transvaal by individual Asiatics were extended to companies in which one or more Asiatics had a controlling interest, but rights of ownership acquired by such companies before the 1st May, 1919, were not interfered with. Such rights, I may mention, are not legalized by the Bill. If they were lawfully acquired they are protected, but if, in the result of litigation which is still pending, the Courts should rule that their acquisition was unlawful, the Bill would not interfere with the results of such a decision.

16. The Bill, on its Second Reading, encountered much hostile criticism as conceding too much to the Indians. The opposition proceeded mainly from members for constituencies on the Witwatersrand, headed by Sir Abe Bailey. He sits for Krugersdorp, the municipality in which the trouble directly responsible for the Indian Petition had come to a head. Throughout the proceedings in the House of Assembly Sir Abe has figured as the protagonist of the anti-Indian movement, although he was aided and abetted by several Unionist members from the Witwatersrand, and their action was not unnaturally followed by many of the South African Party members.

17. The tone of his speeches was even more unfortunate than their substance, and it cannot but be a matter for regret that a man who has always claimed to be a sound Imperialist should, even under the stress of electoral exigencies, have turned so blind an eye to the Imperial aspect of the question.

18. The Second Reading was allowed to pass without a division, after it had become obvious that the real fight was being reserved for the Committee stage, when a determined attempt would be made at the very least to exclude from protection any rights acquired by Indians since the Smuts-Gandhi agreement of 1914. The first division took place upon an amendment moved by Mr. Papenfus, the South African Party member for one of the Johannesburg divisions, supported by Sir Abe Bailey, to substitute the 17th July, 1914, for the 1st May as the final date qualifying Indian licence holders for protection for themselves, their employees, and their successors, in respect of the occupation of premises on proclaimed land.

19. At one time there seemed to be a serious risk of this amendment being carried, and it was only after a strong appeal by the Acting Prime Minister, in which he promised to appoint during the Recess a Commission to consider the whole Indian question, that the Committee decided to reject it by forty-nine votes to thirty-seven.

20. Colonel-Commandant Collins, the South African Party member for Ermelo, then moved the introduction of a new Clause 2, empowering any licensing authority within the whole of the Transvaal to refuse, without reason assigned, an application for a new licence by any Asiatic who was not on the 1st May, 1919, carrying on business within the area subject to the authority concerned.

21. The Minister of Justice, Mr. de Wet, uttered words of protest and warning, which were the more courageous and praiseworthy in view of the strong feeling prevalent in his own constituency (Potchefstroom) and of his personal opinions on the subject of Indian trading. Mr. Malan deprecated action before the matter had been properly inquired into, as it would be by his proposed Commission.

22. The Committee, however, was not in a conciliatory temper, and Mr. Collins's new Clause was adopted by forty-five votes to thirty-one. The Nationalists, two Rand Unionists (Messrs. Nathan and Rennie), three Labour members (Messrs. Cresswell, Madeley and Sampson), and the bulk of the South African Party voted in the majority. The minority included the members of the Cabinet, the Natal members, with the exception of General Myburgh, two Labour members (Messrs. Boydell and Stewart, representing Durban and East London respectively), the bulk of the Unionists (including Mr. Blackwell, who otherwise has adopted a consistently anti-Indian attitude), and three members of the South African Party, other than Ministers and other than those from Natal—viz.: Mr. Rooth, Chief Government Whip, who was Chairman of the Select Committee, Mr. Neser, Chairman of Committees, and Dr. de Jager, a Cape member.

23. On the next Clause (dealing with the ownership of land by Indian companies) an attempt to set back the protecting date from 1919 to 1914 was defeated by sixty votes to twenty-two, and in a further division by fifty-two to twenty-nine.

24. Mr. Rooth, the member in charge of the Bill, moved certain amendments with the object of applying the restrictions of the Transvaal Law of 1885, not only to Indian companies, but also to the registration of mortgages in favour of Asiatics—thus blocking up a loophole which was freely used by Indians before the practice of forming companies for the ownership of land had come into vogue. This amendment was accepted without a division, as also was a further amendment moved by Mr. Rooth, providing for the sale, within a period of two years, or within such further period as a competent Court might allow, of land acquired by Indian companies since the 1st May, 1919.

25. The Bill, as it emerged from Committee, was therefore, even apart from the new Clause, somewhat more restrictive in effect than the Bill as originally introduced. It would probably have been wrecked had not Mr. Rooth made the concessions to Sir Abe Bailey and his friends to which I have referred above. These alterations, although they cannot be welcome to the Indians, are at any rate defensible on the ground that, while they do not interfere with vested rights acquired before the 1st May, 1919, they are designed to prevent further evasions or circumventions of the intention of the existing law.

26. The new Clause (which became Clause 2), however, was on an altogether different footing, and before the Bill came up for Report in the House of Assembly, I made strong verbal representations to the Acting Prime Minister. I pointed out to him that this Clause was practically outside the scope of the original Bill, which did not touch the licensing law at all, but was only concerned with the occupation of land or premises on proclaimed ground for residential or trading purposes, and the question of the ownership of fixed property in the whole of the Transvaal by Indian companies. I urged that an amendment of the Licensing Law had not been considered by the Select Committee, and that, as he had promised a Commission to investigate the whole Indian question, it would be a monstrous thing that the matter should be prejudged in this way by a side wind in the House without any opportunity having been given to the Indian community to state their case. I represented to him that a decision on such a point as this ought only to be reached after careful consideration, and after all sides had been properly heard; and I impressed upon him my view that the present moment was almost the worst which could have been selected for raising this very large question which would seriously affect the whole Indian community, and that on Imperial grounds it seemed highly advisable to postpone its consideration until the unsettlement in India and elsewhere had subsided. I asked him whether there was any possibility of securing the deletion of the Clause at the Report stage, and I expressed the hope that he would do his best with his Party Caucus to that end.

27. Mr. Malan, who fully appreciated the position and agreed with my argument, promised to consult his colleagues, and to do what he could in Caucus, but he was not sanguine that it would be possible to make sure of a majority for the deletion of the new clause when it came up on Report, and he pointed out that, if the matter were pressed to a division with an adverse result, it would become very difficult to attempt rectification in the Senate. I also discussed the matter with Mr. de Wet and had several conversations with Sir Thomas Smartt, who was most anxious to give a helping hand. He likewise was rather dubious as to the wisdom of forcing a division on Report, but had no apprehensions as to the attitude of his supporters in the Senate, and thought that it would be possible to secure the excision of the Clause there.

28. When the Bill as amended in Committee came up for Report in the House of Assembly, Mr. Alexander asked for the Speaker's ruling whether the new Clause was not in conflict with the provisions of Clause 1. The Speaker, however, declined to give a ruling on a point of legal interpretation.

29. Mr. Malan then made a strong appeal that the new Clause should not be insisted on. He referred to the diversity in the law of the various Provinces in regard to the conditions under which Asiatics could obtain trading licences, and said that the Government felt that there should be a uniform policy on this point throughout the Union. This, however, would necessitate previous inquiry, and it would be inadvisable to alter the law in one particular Province without such inquiry. He hinted that the Government would not be likely to issue general instructions to its Revenue Officers in the Transvaal for the refusal of licences to Asiatics, even if the Clause were allowed to stand. He then laid stress on the objection that the Clause imposed a new disability on Asiatics by name, and that it did so without their having been given an opportunity of stating their case. He concluded by renewing his promise that a strong Commission would be appointed to go into the whole question of Asiatics in the Union and not merely in the Transvaal.

30. Sir Abe Bailey delivered another of his truculent speeches, and Colonel Collins intimated his inability to withdraw the Clause. Mr. Joubert, who was one of the two Nationalist members of the Select Committee, supported Colonel Collins. It had become evident that the issue of a division would be doubtful, and it was thought prudent therefore to allow the Clause to stand.

31. The Bill passed through the Report stage after a few drafting amendments had been made at the instance of Mr. Rooth, and was then read a third time, and sent up to the Senate.

32. The Second Reading debate in the Senate was satisfactory in tone and temper, and left little doubt that in Committee Colonel Collins's new Clause would be excised. This was done, after a brief debate, by eighteen votes to seven. The minority included Senator Ware, a Labour man, but was otherwise composed of Dutch Senators who were either Nationalists or associated with the backveld. Senator Whiteside, the other Labour member in the Senate, voted in the majority. No other amendments were made in the Bill, which passed the Report and the Third Reading stages, and was returned to the House of Assembly.

33. The Bill as amended by the Senate came up in the House yesterday. After a debate, the action of the Senate in omitting the Collins Clause was accepted by a vote of fifty-five to twenty-two. The majority comprised the Unionists and a large number of South African Party members, many of whom had been conspicuous by their absence when the Clause was inserted in Committee of the House of Assembly. Colonel Collins himself supported Mr. Rooth's proposal for agreement with the Senate. The minority was entirely composed of Nationalists, with the exception of one Labour member (Mr. Sampson) and three of the South African Party, Colonel Pretorius, Mr. J. L. Grobler, and Mr. Oosthuisen, the latter of whom has recently betrayed distinct leanings towards Nationalism. Sir Abe Bailey had the good grace to stay away, and other absentees from the division list were Mr. Oresswell and Mr. Madeley, of the Labour Party. Messrs. Boydell and Stewart again voted in the majority against the Collins Clause. The division was a highly satisfactory one, but it must not be held to indicate the view which the House would have taken purely on the merits of the Clause. The Nationalists, as might have been expected, suggested that the interests of South Africa were once more being sacrificed for the interests of the Empire.

34. The Bill as it stands may, I think, fairly be regarded as satisfactory in respect of the protection which it gives to existing rights, and it is probably as favourable generally to the Indians as any measure which could have been obtained from the present Parliament. So far as the acquisition of new rights is concerned, it leaves the Indians in a less desirable position than that which they have hitherto occupied, inasmuch as it contemplates for the future a rigid enforcement of the restrictive provisions of the existing law and prevents any further circumvention thereof by such devices as have up to the present been discovered. Whether the ingenuity of the Indians and their advisers will be equal to the discovery of fresh devices remains to be seen.

35. It is unfortunate that the Indians should have selected this particular time to raise any question. They would, I think, have served their own interests very much better if they had let sleeping dogs lie, at any rate until after the General Election, for it is clear that Members of Parliament, who will very soon have to meet their constituents, are likely to be peculiarly susceptible to local prejudices.

36. The attitude which has been adopted by a large majority of the Transvaal members, and particularly by those from the Witwatersrand, is an index of the intensity of local feeling against the Indians, and as such it is not a hopeful omen for the future. Unless a Commission of Inquiry into the whole question had been promised, the Bill in all probability would either have failed to pass or would have been passed in a much more stringent form. The promised appointment of a Commission has postponed the evil day, but it has not, I fear, removed the prospect of further legislation which is likely to be restrictive rather than remedial in effect. Much, no doubt, will depend upon the personnel of the Commission, and it may perhaps not be too much to hope that, even if its outcome should be unfavourable to any extension of Indian trading rights, some of the vexatious anomalies of the existing law might be removed. It might be of some advantage to the Indian community as a whole if the licensing law generally were to be co-ordinated and a right of appeal were universally given against arbitrary and unreasonable decisions of local authorities.

37. At the moment, however, we are only concerned with the Bill immediately under consideration, and, after the amendment made by the Senate and accepted by the House of Assembly, I shall not feel justified in withholding my assent or in reserving it for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure. I have received numerous telegrams from Associations in the Transvaal, asking me to grant an interview to a deputation whose object would be to represent reasons why the Bill should not receive assent. I deferred my reply until the final form of the Bill was known. It is possible that the deletion of Colonel Collins's Clause and the prospect of a Commission to inquire into the whole question may lead the Indian Associations to abandon the proposed deputation, but on that point I have not yet received definite information. The Bill in its present form at any rate does not differ very materially from the legislation recommended by the Select Committee, which a representative deputation of Transvaal Indians, who waited on the Prime Minister some little time ago, pronounced to be acceptable as a compromise.

Enclosure 1 in No. 85.

Petition No. 229, '19.

TO THE HONOURABLE THE SPEAKER AND MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY OF THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED,

THE PETITION OF THE UNDERSIGNED—

Hajee Habib,

Mooljee G. Patel,

being members of the Committee of the Transvaal British Indian Association, and being Chairman of the Krugersdorp Branch of the Transvaal British Indian Association,

Ismail Amod Patel,

Respectfully Sheweth:

Petitioners are British Indians residing and carrying on business in the Transvaal.

Certain of the Petitioners have suffered and are still suffering under the disabilities hereunder set out.

The Petitioners represent the British Indian Traders having established businesses at Krugersdorp, and further they represent by formal and unanimous resolution the Transvaal British Indian Association, a corporate body charged with safeguarding the interests of the British Indian community in the Transvaal.

Petitioners point out that British Indians in the Transvaal suffer under severe disabilities imposed on them merely by reason of their race and colour. The Indian community has patiently borne the burdens of the oppressive laws and regulations. From time to time they have represented their grievances to the Government and to Government Departments concerned in hopes that eventually the justice of their claims might be recognized and relief afforded them. So far from this being the case, efforts are now being made, and in several instances have been successfully employed, having for their object the total and final ruination of the Indian Traders in the Transvaal and especially on the Witwatersrand Gold Fields.

The sequence of legislation and events leading up to the present critical position with which the Indian community in general and the Indian Traders more particularly is faced is briefly as follows:—

(a) Under Law No. 3 of 1885 (Transvaal) Indians were prohibited from acquiring the ownership in land in the late South African Republic, and this Law is still on the Statute Book. This Law provides inter alia as follows:—

Section 2 (b): "They may not be the owners of fixed property in the Republic. This provision is not retrospective."

Section 2 (c): "Those who settle in the Republic for trade or otherwise shall be registered in a Register to be kept exclusively for that purpose by the Magistrate of the respective districts, according to a form to be prescribed by the Government."

Section 2 (d): "The Government will have the right to indicate to them for purposes of residence certain defined streets, wards and locations."

Section 2 (e) furthermore provides that the registration fee contemplated by this section would be £25 (by Volksraad Besluit of 12th August, 1886, Articles 1418 and 1419, this fee was reduced to £3 0s. 0d.).

Petitioners desire to point out that under the provisions of Act No. 3 of 1885 their right to trade, subject to registration and payment of the prescribed fees, was unrestricted, and until the passing of Act 35 of 1908 (Gold Law) your Petitioners continued to enjoy this practically unrestricted right to trade. By this Act, however, serious disabilities were imposed upon Petitioners whereby in an indirect manner the rights they until then enjoyed were either curtailed or taken away, as will appear more fully from the following sections:—

Section 130: "No right may be acquired under this Act by a coloured person, and the holder of a right acquired under Law No. 15 of 1898 (i.e., the previous Gold Law) or a prior Law or under this Act shall not transfer or sublet any portion of such right to a coloured person, nor permit any coloured person other than his bona fide servant to reside on or occupy ground held under such right."

A penalty of £5 per day follows contravention of this section.

Section 131.—"No coloured person shall be permitted to reside on proclaimed land in Class A (which class includes the whole of the Witwatersrand Gold Fields) except in bazaars, locations, mining compounds and such other places as the Mining Commissioner may appoint."

A penalty of one month's imprisonment follows contravention of this section.

Petitioners point out that, although the provisions of Sections 130 and 131 of the present Gold Law have not, to their knowledge, been enforced by the Government against any persons affected thereby, it would appear that municipalities and individuals are able to avail themselves of these sections whenever they desire to benefit themselves, as, for instance, by ruining Indian competition in trade.

In this connection Petitioners beg to point out a specific instance of which details are attached to this Petition.

A British Indian who had held a trading licence for an appreciable number of years at Krugersdorp, and who held in connection with his business a stock of approximately £5,000, was compelled to forthwith close his business by order of Court obtained in January of this year at the instance of the Krugersdorp Municipality under the provisions of Sections 130 and 131 of Act No. 35 of 1908.

Petitioners are credibly informed that this is merely the commencement of a general campaign, having for its object the ruination of the Indian Traders in the Transvaal, and in connection herewith your Petitioners beg to direct attention to the following further aspects:—

The local Government Ordinance No. 9 of 1912 (Transvaal) empowers Municipalities to control and issue certain classes of trade licences and in particular grocers' licences.

The Ordinance provides that the Council may refuse to grant or to renew any licence which it is empowered to issue on certain grounds, including inter alia: "That the applicant is not a desirable person to hold such licence."

Petitioners find that Transvaal Municipalities have recently systematically refused to issue or renew grocers' licences to Indians, and their refusal is based on Section 90 of Ordinance 9 of 1912, and Petitioners submit that the provisions of this Section are used as a pretext enabling Municipalities to refuse the issue or renewal of licences to Indians.

Petitioners have ascertained that in no instance whatever in the Transvaal has a licence been refused to a European applicant under the provisions of Section 90 (e).

Petitioners beg leave to lay before this Honourable House specific instances in which trading licences have been refused to Indians, and in which such licences have been ordered by the Magistrate to be granted on appeal under Section 90 of the local Government Ordinance (Transvaal).

Petitioners have good reason for apprehending that a general campaign in this respect is also in progress, having for its object the ousting of Indian trade in the Transvaal. The fact that the decisions of Transvaal Municipalities in cases where the grant or renewal of trading licences to Indians are concerned have of late been frequently reversed on appeal appears to have led the Municipalities for their purposes to avail themselves of a Law under which there is no appeal, and in so far as certain proclaimed areas are concerned Municipalities are having enforced the provisions of Sections 130 and 131 of the Transvaal Gold Law.

Petitioners point out that if the provisions of Sections 130 and 131 of the Gold Law be enforced against Indian Traders a matter of between 300 and 350 British Indian Traders in the Transvaal will be directly affected and probably ruined, and that a capital of close on two million pounds sterling invested by them will be in jeopardy.

Petitioners beg to direct attention to the provisions of the Townships Amendment Act No. 34 of 1908 (Transvaal), in terms of which restrictions similar to those contained in Sections 130 and 131 of the Transvaal Gold Law are introduced in the Title Deeds of land acquired under the Gold Law so soon as such land is converted into freehold title; and that similar provisions are also inserted in the titles of all townships laid out under the provisions of the Townships Amendment Act.

Petitioners are gravely concerned with the retention and safeguard of those rights to trade which they have hitherto been allowed to enjoy, and which since the settlement arrived at with the Government in 1914, when General Smuts was Minister of the Interior, they were given to understand would in no way be affected.

Wherefore your Petitioners pray that your Honourable House will be pleased to take their case into favourable consideration and allow them to be heard through the medium of their Counsel, Doctor F. E. T. Krause, K.C., and Mr. W. P. Schreiner at the Bar of the House or grant them such relief as it may deem fit.

And your Petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

HAJEE HARIB.
MOOLJEE G. PATEL.
ISMAIL AMOD PATEL.

Enclosure 2 in No. 85.

12th April, 1919.

MY DEAR MR DE WET,

I VENTURE to send you, quite unofficially, a note on one or two points that I raised to you, in order to make my meaning rather clearer. I have not attempted to discuss the questions raised from the legal point of view, but from the point of view of equity, and especially (with what I am mainly concerned) the Imperial point of view. You, I know, fully appreciate how important it is at this juncture that the Indians should not be able to claim that they have a fresh and genuine grievance.

Mr. Alexander was dining here last night, and I took the opportunity of speaking to him. He seemed to hope that he might possibly get a unanimous Report, but I am afraid he is rather sanguine, and I am not quite sure that he appreciated what to my mind is the very important point looked at from the "grievance" aspect, viz., the opportunity, under proper conditions, control and limitation, of Indians to obtain future trading facilities.

Yours very sincerely,

The Hon. N. J. de Wet, M.L.A.

BUXTON.

1.—Existing Licences, Vested Interests and the Gandhi Agreement.

It seems perfectly clear from Mr. Gandhi's letter of the 30th June, 1914, read with his letter of the 7th July, 1914, that, while in the latter he dealt with and defined "vested interests" he never intended to assume any attitude which would in the future reduce the facilities of Indians in reference to licences and the like, or which would place the Indian community generally in a worse position for the future.

On the contrary, I think it is clear from his letter of the 30th June that (while coming to an agreement with the Government in regard to the particular questions then at issue), he pointed out to his Indian friends, and through them to the Union Government, that the matters, of which this licensing question is one, "would require further and sympathetic consideration by the Government"; and that the Indians should exercise patience "so as to enable the Government of the day to go further" than that correspondence. This surely meant that, looking to the future, he contemplated that their position should be better and not worse.

Again, in his letter of 7th July, Mr. Gandhi starts by saying that he had not pressed for the insertion of a special clause defining vested rights, as he felt that that might "result in restricting the future action of my countrymen." He, however, gave his own definition of "vested rights;" and ended his letter by saying that "there can be no justification for any restriction now, especially in regard to those who are already settled in their respective townships." This shows that he was not only dealing with the present, but with the future as well.

You will recollect that the Minister had previously given the following pledge (June 30th, 1914):—

"With regard to the administration of existing laws, the Minister desires me to say that it always has been and will continue to be the desire of the Government to see that they are administered in a just manner and with due regard to vested rights."

It would seem therefore essential that, while existing rights should be secured, some means should be given to the Indian community of obtaining legally, under proper conditions, of course, reasonable facilities for further trading.

2.—Petition of the Traders.

It is not quite clear from this Petition whether the Petitioners are "gravely concerned" with the safeguards of existing licences, or whether they are concerned also with the right to obtain new licences. The wording would seem rather to imply the former, and that they are concerned only in securing their own vested interests. It is well known that Indian traders themselves are the greatest rivals to Indians. These persons, therefore, as licensees may not be speaking for the Indian community as a whole; and even though they themselves were satisfied, it would not necessarily follow that an injustice was not being done to the Indian community generally.

3.—Licences Granted between 1914 and now.

I understand that a suggestion has been made to the Committee that licences issued before "the Gandhi agreement" of 1914 should be statutorily secured, and that the rights acquired since then in contravention of the Gold Law should be annulled. But so far as these licences have been granted, though possibly it is now ascertained that in respect of the premises occupied by some of the licensees they were illegally granted, they were granted in good faith by the lawfully constituted Authority.

Under the law as administered application for licences were made, and the applications were considered by the Municipalities, and the licences were either granted or refused. If refused an appeal lay to the Magistrate, who in some cases has overridden the Municipality and allowed the licences. The Indians who have received licences either from the Municipality itself or under appeal to the Magistrate, in the belief that the action of the Authorities was lawful, should, as a matter of equity, be placed in the same category as the licensees up to 1914. It would be unjust to deprive them of their licences now.

4.—Question of Ownership of Land and Premises.

Whatever the merits, and if it be thought advisable to prohibit the future ownership by Indians registered as limited liability companies, it must not be forgotten that these Indians who as companies are now owners of land, premises or stands, have acquired the property, and invested their money in a manner which a decision of the Supreme Court has declared to be lawful. In every case such property was lawfully acquired, and the owners are entitled to security therein.

No legislation which might be passed to incapacitate Indians registered as a limited liability company from owning fixed property should therefore be retrospective; and I can see no justification for an attempt to discriminate, by an inquiry or otherwise, between the several companies who have lawfully acquired fixed property.

EXTRACT OF LETTER DATED 30TH JUNE, 1914, FROM MR. M. K. GANDHI TO MR. GORGES.

As the Minister is aware, some of my countrymen have wished me to go further. They are dissatisfied that the Trade Licences laws of the different Provinces, the Transvaal Gold Law, the Transvaal Townships Act, the Transvaal Law 3 of 1885, have not been altered so as to give them full rights of residence, trade, and ownership of land. Some of them are dissatisfied that full inter-Provincial migration is not permitted, and some are dissatisfied that on the marriage question the Relief Bill goes no further than it does.

They have asked me that all the above matters might be included in the passive resistance struggle. I have been unable to comply with their wishes; whilst, therefore, they have not been included in the programme of passive resistance, it will not be denied that some day or other these matters will require further and sympathetic consideration by the Government. Complete satisfaction cannot be expected until full civic rights have been conceded to the resident Indian population. I have told my countrymen that they will have to exercise patience and by all honourable means at their disposal educate public opinion so as to enable the Government of the day to go further than the present correspondence does. I shall hope that when the Europeans of South Africa fully appreciate the fact that now, as the importation of indentured labour from India is prohibited and as the Immigrants Regulation Act of last year has in practice all but stopped further free Indian immigration, and that my countrymen do not aspire to any political ambition, they (the Europeans) will see the justice and indeed the necessity of my countrymen being granted the rights I have just referred to.

Meanwhile, if the generous spirit that the Government have applied to the treatment of the problem during the past few months continues to be applied as promised in your letter in the administration of the existing law, I am quite certain that the Indian community throughout the Union will be able to enjoy some measure of peace and never be a source of trouble to the Government.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM MR. GORGES, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, CAPE TOWN, DATED 30TH JUNE, 1914, TO MR. M. K. GANDHI, CAPE TOWN.

MY DEAR MILNER,

Government House, Pretoria, 17th October, 1919.

I RECEIVED a letter from you dated 30th June.†

I spoke to Sir Thomas Watt, under whose Department the question comes on the matter, and quoted to him the substance of Polak's letter.‡

He said that he had not heard of any new proposals, but he would make inquiry privately and let me know.

I have now received from him a letter containing a report from Mr. Plowman, the Administrator of Natal. I enclose copies of the letter and of the memorandum.

Enclosure in No. 88.

Union of South Africa,

Office of the Minister of the Interior,

Pretoria, 25th September, 1919.

DEAR LORD BUXTON,

ON the 16th instant you asked me to make inquiry of Mr. Plowman, Administrator of Natal, regarding a communication you had received from the Secretary of State as to the intention of the Provincial Administration to deprive Indians of the municipal franchise. I now enclose copy of letter from Mr. Plowman which sets forth the position. You will see that Mr. Plowman states that the question of the Indian municipal franchise in Natal is not likely to be raised for some time to come. I feel sure from my knowledge of him that he will do all he can to prevent any legislation which is likely to give rise to any complaint on the part of the Indian community.

I am, &c.,

THOMAS WATT.

His Excellency

The Right Honourable Viscount Buxton, G.C.M.G.,

&c., &c., &c.,
Pretoria.

(Confidential.)

Administrator's Office, Natal,

23rd September, 1919.

DEAR SIR THOMAS WATT,

I HAVE received your letter of the 16th instant with reference to the question of the municipal franchise in Natal as affecting the existing rights of the Indian community.

* No. 85.

† 36153: not printed, enclosing copy of No. 77.

‡ No. 77.

It is the case that the Natal Municipal Association prepared a consolidating Ordinance in 1917 which restricted the municipal franchise to persons of European descent (male or female) being British subjects of the age of 21 years and upwards, subject to certain property qualifications, and excluded

"Persons disqualified for the Parliamentary franchise by virtue of Natal Act No. 8 of 1896 or any amendment thereof."

This draft measure was prepared by the Assistant Town Clerk of Durban, and was of a very comprehensive character. It was referred to a special committee nominated by the Provincial Administration, but little progress was made, and more recently it has been broken up into separate sections and has been revised by our Legal Draughtsman.

The first section, which deals only with matters of municipal franchise and the qualification, apportionment, and election of the Town Councillors, was duly presented to this Administration, and in March last the Association were advised that the Provincial Executive had decided that before any further action could be taken the Association should be asked to obtain the views of all local authorities concerned, more especially on the clauses dealing with the franchise. It was pointed out in a subsequent letter that this should be a preliminary to the discussion of the amended draft Ordinance by the Association: that the latter body must accept responsibility for the form in which the Ordinance is submitted, and that it would then be for the Provincial Administration to decide as to the introduction of the measure, with or without amendment.

The Association were also advised that if the franchise clauses as at present drafted were retained and passed by the Provincial Council the Ordinance would most probably be reserved for the Royal Assent, and in this connexion their attention was drawn to the objection taken by the Imperial Government to the consolidating Municipal Bill which was passed by the Natal Parliament in 1905, and to the considerable correspondence which passed between the Secretary, Prime Minister (Natal), and the Municipal Association on the points at issue.

The draft measure, which was introduced into the Natal Provincial Council during the session of 1918, and which was ultimately passed as Ordinance No. 11 of that year, did not in any way deal with the municipal franchise, but was limited to extended powers. The first draft of this Ordinance contained certain provisions of differential legislation, such as the use of tram-cars by Europeans, natives, and Asiatics, the separate use of lavatories, etc., but these were withdrawn on it being pointed out to the Association that they might jeopardize the passing of the measure.

My latest information is to the effect that the Association are inclined to leave the final drafting of the consolidating measure to our Legal Draughtsman (Mr. J. W. F. Bird, ex Attorney-General of Natal), and the actual form of the draft is as yet wholly unsettled.

I quite agree with you that it would be most undesirable to introduce legislation debarring Asiatics from the municipal franchise, having regard to the present state of political feeling in India, and in view of the Government Commission which is about to be appointed to inquire into the question of Asiatic trading. There will be no sitting of the Natal Provincial Council until March of next year, and that will be of very short duration, and will be limited to the necessary financial measures to close up the year and carry on until the new Council is constituted after the next General Election. Lord Buxton may, therefore, rest assured that the question of Indian municipal franchise in Natal is not likely to be raised for some time to come.

The existing borough laws of Natal make no distinctions of race in regard to the qualification of burgesses (Law 19, 1872, section 14). The Local Township Law of 1881, however, makes the township franchise dependent on possession of the parliamentary franchise (11, 1881, sections 4, 7), which by Act 8, 1896, excludes natives of countries which have not hitherto possessed parliamentary franchise.

Yours, &c.,

G. T. PLOWMAN.

No. 89.

INDIA OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 28th July, 1919.)

[Answered by No. 91.]

(Confidential.)

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 26th July, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to acknowledge the receipt of Sir H. Lambert's letter, Confidential, dated 18th July,* enclosing copy of a confidential despatch from the Governor-General of South Africa, dated 13th June, 1919, describing the progress of events which led to the passing of the Asiatics (Land and Trading) Amendment Act by the Union Parliament.

2. It is observed that the Acting Prime Minister has promised to appoint during the recess a Commission to consider the whole Indian question in the Union; renewing this promise in the course of his appeal for the excision of the new clause which proposed to empower licensing authorities throughout the Transvaal to refuse fresh licences to Asiatics without reason assigned. Lord Buxton, in summarizing the present situation, expresses his fear that the promised appointment of a Commission, while postponing "the evil day . . . has not . . . removed the prospect of further legislation which is likely to be restrictive rather than remedial in effect."

3. Mr. Secretary Montagu wishes to take this opportunity of expressing his grateful appreciation of Lord Buxton's personal interest in the Indian question, which he feels has largely conduced to a less unsatisfactory result of the recent legislation than might otherwise have been inevitable. After carefully studying His Excellency's very clear exposé of the existing position, Mr. Montagu cannot but share his misgivings that the present state of European feeling in South Africa makes an unfavourable atmosphere from the point of view of the Indian community, for the further consideration of the questions in which they are vitally concerned, and he confesses to some anxiety lest the importance which belongs to these questions in their Imperial aspect may be in danger of being overlooked, or not adequately regarded, in the course of the Commission's investigations.

4. Mr. Montagu is aware that much will depend on the personnel of the Commission (which he makes no doubt will be either of a judicially impartial composition or representative of both the conflicting interests), but much will also depend on the ability of the leaders of the Indian community to make a proper presentation of their case, and to show a wise discrimination in concentrating on the redress of essential grievances, and refraining from extravagant demands. It unfortunately seems doubtful whether the Indian community could put forward any representatives now in South Africa possessing the requisite qualities.

5. But leaving this consideration aside, Mr. Montagu wishes again to urge that the questions which the Commission will investigate constitute an Imperial and not merely a South African problem. Any agitation among Indians in South Africa is bound to react sympathetically in India itself, where accounts of Indian disabilities are constantly canvassed, and reports of any deterioration in their status are liable to be immediately taken up even in exaggerated and distorted forms. In this connexion, I am to enclose copy of a recent telegraphic correspondence with the Viceroy regarding the effect in India of the recent South African legislation. I am to add that, in Mr. Montagu's opinion, it is an inevitable consequence of the growing recognition of India's place as an equal member of the British Commonwealth that this preoccupation of Indian public opinion with the welfare of Indians, who have emigrated to the Dominions, should have to be reckoned with as a growing rather than a diminishing factor in Imperial politics.

6. These reasons lead Mr. Montagu to suggest that, before any action is taken on Mr. Malan's promise of a Commission, the steps proposed for giving effect to it should be communicated as long as possible in advance to this office in order that an opportunity may be afforded of making any suggestions (if necessary after telegraphic consultation with the Government of India) which may appear to be desirable. In particular, he would be glad of early information as to the terms of reference and the composition of the Commission, whether it is to be mainly of a non-partisan type or to consist of representatives in equal proportions of the interests concerned, and whether a chairman with judicial experience is proposed. It is hoped that the Indian community will be allowed to be represented by counsel. I am to suggest that if Viscount Milner sees no objection, a request should be addressed to the Union Government in the sense of this paragraph by telegraph. I am to enclose copy of a telegram which has been received from the Viceroy on the subject.

7. Mr. Montagu is also tentatively considering a suggestion that a representative of the Government of India might (if it were agreeable to the Union Government) be deputed to South Africa in a similar capacity to that filled by Sir B. Robertson in 1914.* He does not, of course, contemplate suggesting that a member should be appointed to the Commission from outside the Union, but that in the event of the Government of India wishing to depute a representative to give official evidence as to the bearing of the issues before the Commission on India (a matter which can hardly be excluded as irrelevant to their consideration), he should have free access to the Commission and be available for consultation in regard to the Indian aspect of the questions referred to them. Such an official witness might also be of assistance in advising the Indian community.

Mr. Montagu would, therefore, be glad of an expression of Viscount Milner's views on the above suggestion, in regard to which the Government of India are being consulted by telegram.

23RD JULY, 1919. Your telegram, 17th July. Indians in Transvaal. Terms of reference to Committee included alleged evasion of Law III., of 1885, by means of limited liability companies or otherwise. Act as passed construes that Law as applying to companies except in respect of property acquired by them before 1st May, 1919, and also to the registration of other than bona fide mortgages in favour of Asiatics.

Agitation in India is to be deprecated in view of Malan's announcement of forthcoming Commission on Indian questions. It might react unfavourably on Indian interests by embittering hostile European element.

Please consider desirability of publishing communiqué to counteract misleading and exaggerated accounts of effect of Act. Please see papers forwarded with my Public Secretary's letters of 7th May and 26th June. Full papers sent with my Public despatch No. 93, dated 10th July. Principal object of Act is to secure Indians on the Rand from threatened wholesale evictions to which they were legally liable under Act 35 of 1908. Communiqué might refer to deletion at the instance of South African Government of particularly detrimental clause introduced into Bill by House of Assembly, which gave licensing authorities power to refuse trading licences to Asiatics.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 7th August, 1919.

WITH reference to your Excellency's Confidential despatch of the 13th June,* I have the honour to transmit to you, for your personal information, a copy of correspondence† with the India Office relative to the proposed Commission to consider the whole position of Indians in South Africa.

2. In this connexion, I enclose a copy of a question asked in the House of Commons on the subject, together with a copy of the answer returned by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Enclosure in No. 92.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, 28TH JULY, 1919.—ASIATICS TRADING AND LAND BILL, SOUTH AFRICA.

MR. BENNETT asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he has received information of protests by the Indian community in South Africa against the passing of the Asiatics Trading and Land Bill, and of preparations for a congress of the community, the invitations to which state that they stand on the brink of ruin; whether resistance to the new law has been threatened; whether the Union Government have promised a new commission of inquiry; and whether, in case such an inquiry is held, it will be open to the Government of India to assist the Indians in South Africa in having their interests represented?

Lieutenant-Colonel Amery, in reply, said: I have received the information referred to in the first part of the Honourable Member's question. The Union Government have promised inquiry, and I have no doubt that full opportunity will be given to the Indians to present their case, though I have no information at present as to the details of the arrangements proposed.

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 11th August, 1919.

WITH reference to my letter of 26th July, Confidential,* regarding the Commission which it is proposed to appoint to inquire into the Indian question in South Africa, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Montagu to transmit for the very confidential information of Viscount Milner the enclosed copy of a further telegram which has been received from the Viceroy on this subject, and of the reply which he has sent thereto.

2. As regards the second paragraph of the Viceroy's telegram, Mr. Montagu appreciates the reasons which, he presumes, led Lord Milner to refrain from making representations to the Union Government during the progress of the recent Bill, seeing that full reports were received from the Governor-General at each stage that advantage could be taken of General Botha's presence in Europe for consultation with him, and that it was evident that Lord Buxton was already, of his own initiative, exerting his personal influence with better effect than might have been secured by official intervention on behalf of His Majesty's Government.

3. He wishes, however, to urge that the time has now arrived when strong representations ought to be made to the Government of South Africa, pointing out the seriousness with which the present position is regarded by the Government of India, and the dangers which it threatens to Imperial interests. He thinks that Lord Milner will agree that a situation in which the possibility of retaliatory measures between two members of the British Commonwealth has even to be contemplated indicates a regrettable lack of co-ordination in Imperial policy, and that it can only tend to loosen rather than strengthen the principle of cohesion which it is desirable to foster. If no remedy can be found for such a situation, the Government of India may be faced with a demand that will be difficult to ignore for a prohibition of all forms of intercourse. Such a step (though it might have no immediate effect on South Africa) would be a deplorable departure from the principles which should govern the intercourse of the several members of the Empire, and might react on the relations between India and the Mother Country itself.

4. Mr. Montagu would accordingly suggest that the Governor-General should be instructed to impress on the Union Government that the proposed inquiry cannot be regarded as a question of merely South African interest, and that the terms of reference to the Commission, as well as its composition, should be the subject of careful scrutiny. He would be glad to be informed whether it is proposed to include within the scope of the inquiry the suggestions of Lord Sinha's memorandum† discussed at the last Imperial War Conference, regarding which Mr. Burton stated that they now receive the most sympathetic consideration of the South African Government. No inquiry in Mr. Montagu's opinion will be satisfactory which does not include the consideration of existing Indian disabilities and proposals for remedying them. The continuance of Law III. of 1885 appears to him, in particular, to be a matter which places a heavy onus of justification on those who may seek to support it.

5. It will be observed that the Government of India will desire to send a deputation to represent their interests in the inquiry, consisting probably of one official and one non-official.

6. With a view to meeting the necessary arrangements, assuming that the Government of the Union will raise no objection to the proposed deputation, I am to ask that Mr. Montagu may receive information of the date when the Commission is to commence its inquiries, as well as the other information requested above, at the earliest possible moment.

I have, &c.,

25TH JULY, 1919. 5639. Correspondence ending with our telegram of 22nd instant. Indians in Transvaal. In view of action taken by Union Government we shall have no other course left to us but to consider serious action against South Africans in India. We contemplate as provisional measure instructing local Governments not to issue prospecting licences or mining leases to persons or concerns with South African connections. Such a step would be of considerable political value in India. Please telegraph your approval. We believe two such persons are at present endeavouring to obtain mining concessions in Burma.

2. It appears from answer given by Amery in House of Commons that no representations were made to Union Government regarding Bill. As stated in our telegram of 31st May, we regard re-enactment of Law III. of 1885 in more rigid form as a breach of Burton's undertaking at last Imperial Conference, and wholly endorse Sinha's view that this law is an anachronism and ought to be repealed. We urge strong representation(s) should now be made to Union Government to reconsider the matter, indicating that otherwise no other course except retaliation is left to us. If there is to be a Commission in South Africa to consider whole question we should wish to send a deputation probably of one non-official* and one non-official* from India to represent our interests.

SECRET. With reference to your telegram 7th August,† and in continuation of my telegram 1st August,‡ would you please inform your Ministers that it is now learnt that Government of India wish, in connexion with proposed inquiry, to send to South Africa deputation probably consisting of one official and one non-official to represent their interests. It is hoped that your Government will agree to this, and that information of the date when the Commission will commence its inquiries will be forthcoming at the earliest possible moment in order that the necessary arrangements may be made.

Indian Government regard present situation as so serious that they may be faced with a demand for prohibiting intercourse with South Africa if no remedy is found. Secretary of State for India represents that this would be a deplorable departure from principles which should govern the intercourse of several members of the Empire, and might react on relations between India and this country. Secretary of State for India urges that proposed inquiry cannot in these circumstances be regarded as question of merely South African interest, and that composition of, and terms of, reference to Commission should accordingly be given most careful consideration.

He inquires with regard to the terms of reference whether the scope of Commission will include suggestions in Lord Sinha's memorandum,§ which was discussed at the last Imperial War Conference, and in connexion with which Burton states that Union Government would give it the most sympathetic consideration that it could.

As this question is one of the most serious embarrassments of the Indian Government, I know that you will do what you can to induce the Union Government to meet the wishes of the Secretary of State for India.—MILNER.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to acknowledge the receipt of Sir H. Lambert's letter of 27th October,§ transmitting copy of a telegram dated 23rd October from the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa regarding the Commission which is to inquire into the Indian question.

Mr. Secretary Montagu notes that the scope of the inquiry is to be limited to the question of trading and trading licences generally as affecting Asiatics with a view to securing uniform treatment in the four Provinces, and considering the issue of such licences. He cannot agree, however, that this limitation materially alters the position as to adding an Indian representative to the deputation which is to represent the Government of India. In his view and in that of the Government of India it is a matter of the highest importance to do all that is possible to maintain the rights (at any rate in their existing measure) of Indians in South Africa to hold trading licences subject to the requirements of public health and the eligibility of applicants apart from racial considerations. Any deterioration of their status in this respect would be a serious blow to the economic basis of the life of the Indian community. The interests at stake in the matter of trading licences are clearly apprehended by the general public in India, and though the assimilation of the varied enactments of the different Provinces may be outwardly regarded as a purely South African problem, Mr. Montagu feels it essential, in view of the deeper issues involved, that the public in India should have no cause for feeling that the opportunity of defending the interests of Indians in South Africa has been in any way restricted. In the circumstances a deputation which did not include a non-official Indian would not command this necessary confidence. Such a representative would be appointed by the Government of India, and would act in harmony with his official colleague. Mr. Montagu cannot conceive that the South African Government, having already accepted the principle of a deputation, would be in any way embarrassed by the inclusion of an Indian representative, while such inclusion should tend to reconcile South African Indians to the conclusions of the Commission. He would therefore strongly urge for Viscount Milner's consideration that the point of view of the Government of India, with the reasons for it indicated above, should again be represented to the Government of the Union. In this connexion extract from a recent telegraphic correspondence with the Viceroy is enclosed.

Subject to the inclusion of an Indian representative, Mr. Montagu is prepared to accept the suggestion at the end of the first paragraph of Lord Buxton's telegram that the deputation from India should assist the Commission in an advisory capacity. He observes that the Commission is expected to commence its sittings under the chairmanship of a Judge of the Supreme Court soon after the New Year. He would be glad to have previous notice of the proposed detailed terms of reference and to be informed whether it is contemplated that the Indian community should be represented by Counsel.

15TH OCTOBER. I suggest that you should make announcement on following lines (R) Union Government have decided to postpone appointment of Commission for the present. It has been mistakenly inferred from a passage in the Secretary of State's recent speech that a request has been made that representatives of India should sit as members of the Commission. No such request has been made to the Union Government, but that Government has been asked to agree to the presence of two representatives (probably one official and one non-official) to be deputed by Government of India to assist the Commission in the inquiry to give information and represent the feelings and views of the Government of India and Indian public and to press for a sympathetic consideration of the Indian case.

Question of status to be proposed for such representatives and of the composition of the Commission may depend to some extent on the scope of the inquiry as to which information has not yet been received. It is hoped that the Union Government will in any event agree to the inclusion of an Indian non-official in the deputation from India, as Government of India and Secretary of State are agreed as to the great importance of associating an Indian with Sir B. Robertson. End of (R).

With reference to your telegram of the 23rd of October* regarding the Indian Commission.

The Secretary of State for India would be glad to know whether it is contemplated that the Indian community should be represented by counsel, and would like to have previous notice of the proposed detailed terms of reference. He notes the limitation of the scope of the inquiry, but even so cannot agree that the position as regards adding an Indian to the deputation by which the Government of India is to be represented is materially altered thereby. He shares the view of the Government of India that it is a matter of the highest importance to do everything possible to maintain the rights, at any rate, as at present existing, of Indians resident in South Africa to hold trading licences subject to the eligibility of applicants apart from racial considerations and to the requirements of public health.

He urges that the general public in India clearly apprehend the interests at stake in the matter of trading licences, and that any deterioration of South African Indians' status in this respect would be a severe blow to the economic basis of the life of their community, and he feels it essential, although the assimilation of the various Provincial enactments may be regarded superficially as a purely South African problem, that in view of the deeper issues involved the public in India should have no cause for feeling that any restriction has been placed on an opportunity of defending the interests of Indians in South Africa. In these circumstances a deputation which did not include an unofficial Indian member would not command the necessary confidence. Such a representative would act in harmony with his official colleague, and would be appointed by the Indian Government. He does not see how the Union Government, which has already accepted the principle of this deputation, could be in any way embarrassed by an Indian representative being included in it. On the other hand, such inclusion would tend to reconcile South African Indians to the conclusions of the Commission.

I hope that your Ministers on further consideration will see their way to meeting the Indian Government's wishes in this matter.

The Secretary of State for India agrees to the deputation from India assisting the Commission in an advisory capacity if an Indian representative is included in it.—MILNER.

21ST NOVEMBER. Your telegram of 15th November,* Indian Commission. Upon the very strong opinion expressed by the Secretary of State for India in favour of inclusion of a non-official Indian on Sir Benjamin Robertson's delegation, Ministers are prepared to waive their objection to that course. They would prefer that the Indian if possible should be a member of Sir Robertson's staff, rather than a co-representative of India, but if that course is not possible from point of view of Indian Government Ministers would acquiesce so long as Sir B. Robertson is chairman or senior representative of delegation. Both by whites and Indians Ministers have been pressed very strongly to widen the scope of the Commission beyond trading question. They have decided, therefore, that the Commission shall inquire and report on the further question holding of land by Asiatics in the several Provinces of the Union of South Africa. Ministers are prepared to meet the views of Indian Government as regards the composition of the delegation, but they cannot impress too strongly both on British and Indian Governments how deep feeling is among whites in regard to menace of Asiatics trading in South Africa. The attitude of Ministers is dictated solely by desire to find a reasonable solution of a situation which is undoubtedly grave, and which may easily get completely out of hand. [Answered by No. 111.]

SIR, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 22nd November, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to invite a reference to the report which appeared in the "Cape Times," of 17th September last, of a question addressed by Mr. P. W. Le R. Van Niekerk to the Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa regarding the discussion of the Asiatic question in the Union at the Imperial Conference of 1918. It is observed that General Smuts is reported to have returned a negative reply to the question whether the representatives of the Union gave any undertaking on behalf of the Union Government.

It will be remembered that the Conference adopted a resolution† which, besides dealing with immigration reciprocity, recommended to the various Governments concerned the other questions, covered by memoranda presented in that and the preceding year, with a view to their early consideration. Paragraph 4 of the memorandum presented by Lord Sinha in 1918,‡ dealt in considerable detail with some of the principal grievances of Indians in South Africa. In speaking on the resolution Mr. Burton used the following language:—"As far as we are concerned in South Africa, we are in agreement with this resolution, and also with the proposal referring the memorandum to the consideration of our Government, and we will give it the most sympathetic consideration that we can, certainly."

In his despatch of 28th August, 1918,§ Mr. Long forwarded the resolution and memorandum to the South African Government and suggested that His Majesty's Government should receive any observations that South African Ministers might wish to offer on the outstanding points.

In his Confidential despatch of 8th January, 1919,|| Lord Buxton, while furnishing a valuable statement of his own views on the various questions involved, remarked that he had not yet received the views of the Union Government, and would take an early opportunity of mentioning the matter.

Mr. Secretary Montagu trusts that it is not to be inferred from General Smuts's reported reply, that Mr. Burton's promise in regard to the memorandum has been overlooked, or that the need for consideration of these questions by the Union Government is regarded as having lapsed in view of the forthcoming appointment of a Commission to investigate the question of trading licences.

EXTRACT FROM "CAPE TIMES," 17TH SEPTEMBER, 1919.

The Asiatic Question.

MR. P. W. LE R. VAN NIEKERK asked the Prime Minister whether the Imperial Conference of 1918 discussed the Asiatic question in the Union; did the representatives of the Union, on behalf of the Union Government, then give any undertaking in that respect; if so, what was the undertaking; is the Government prepared to lay the correspondence between the Union Government and the British Government with regard to that matter upon the Table of the House; and will the Commission to inquire into this question be a Union or an Imperial Commission?

GENERAL SMUTS replied: Yes, by means of a memorandum drafted by Lord Sinha. No, but a resolution was unanimously adopted by the Imperial Conference which is merely a restatement of the policy embodied in the Immigrants' Regulation (Restriction) Act, 1913, and the Indians Relief Act No. 22, of 1914. There has not been any correspondence on the matter which can be laid on the Table of the House. The Government has no intention to appoint a Commission to inquire into the whole Asiatic question. Presumably the honourable member is referring to the Commission to be appointed to inquire into the question of the issue of trading licences to Indians, and, if so, the honourable member is referred to the answer to question 16.

SIR,

Downing Street, 12th December, 1919.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd November,* relative to the report which appeared in the Cape Times of the 17th September last, of the reply returned by the Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa to a question addressed to him by Mr. P. W. le R. Van Niekerk regarding the discussion of the Asiatic question in the Union at the Imperial Conference of 1918.

2. It does not seem probable that General Smuts's reply was intended to convey the impression indicated in the last paragraph of your letter under acknowledgment. The Secretary of State for India is now aware that the scope of the Commission of Inquiry has been enlarged so as to include not only the question of trading licences but also that of the holding of land. Pending the deliberations of the Commission it is not thought that there would be any advantage in approaching the Union Government in regard to the other matters discussed in Lord Sinha's memorandum,† but it will, of course, be open to Sir B. Robertson to confer with the Union Government during his stay in South Africa.

Immigration.—Admission of Indian wife.—Divorced wife's children in Union.—Act 22 of 1913, section 5 (g).—Act 22 of 1914, section 3 (2) (b).

Applicant having been married to, and subsequently divorced from, B in India according to an Indian religion, similarly married C. He subsequently returned to the Union with C, at which time there were in the Union children of the marriage of applicant and B, who was still alive in India. Held, that regard being had to the provisions of section 5 (g) of Act 22 of 1913, and section 3 (2) (b) of Act 22 of 1914, C was a prohibited immigrant.

ARGUMENT on a point of law reserved by the Immigration Appeal Board.

The question of law reserved was as follows:

1. Assuming that A, an exempted person, was married to B in India under the tenets of an Indian religion.
2. That B was divorced from A under the tenets of an Indian religion.
3. That a marriage was thereafter contracted between A and C in India under the tenets of an Indian religion.
4. That A with C, his present wife under the tenets of an Indian religion, thereafter returned to the Union.
5. That there was at the time of the return of A with his wife C to the Union offspring of the marriage of A and B then residing in the Union, B being still alive in India.
6. Assuming that at no time, either before or during her marriage with A, or after their divorce, has B resided within the Union.

Should C, having regard to section 5, subsection (g), of Act 22 of 1913, and to paragraph (b) of subsection 2 of section 3 of Act 22 of 1914, be taken to be a prohibited immigrant?

M. Alexander, for the appellant: The words "Any other woman who is still living" mean in section 3 (2) (b) of Act 22 of 1914, any other woman who is still living and is still his wife; In re Kulsam Bibi (1913, N.L.R. 437).

B. Upington, K.C., for respondent: The object of the Act is to restrict Indian immigration. As to the meaning of "wife" under the Act of 1906: see Esop v. Union Government (Minister of the Interior) (1913, C.P.D. 133). The Act of 1914 recognizes for the first time, with certain safeguards, a polygamous wife. If an Indian has children in the Union by a wife who is still living, he cannot bring in another woman as his wife, even though he has divorced the first wife.

Alexander, in reply.

Cur. adv. vult.

Postea, on 10th July.

JUTA, J.P.: Our opinion on the point submitted by the Immigration Board depends upon the construction of subsection 2 (b) of section 3 of the Indians' Relief Act, No. 22 of 1914. The plain grammatical meaning of this subsection is clear, but it is contended that it means one of two constructions other than its plain grammatical meaning.

By section 5, subsection (g), of the Immigrants' Regulation Act, No. 22, of 1913, the wife or child under 16 years of an exempted person "including the wife or child of a lawful and monogamous marriage duly celebrated according to the rights of any religious faith outside the Union," was not a prohibited immigrant. It is said that owing to a legal decision that a marriage between Indians according to the tenets of their religion was not such a monogamous one, and for other reasons Act 22 of 1914, which purports to be for the redress of certain grievances and the removal of certain disabilities of His Majesty's Indian subjects, was passed. By the third section the words contained in the said paragraph 5, subsection (g), beginning "including the wife" as above mentioned are deleted, and it is provided that in the interpretation of that paragraph 5, subsection (g), the words "wife" and "child under the age of 16" shall include certain meanings. "Wife" includes any one woman between whom and the said exempted person there exists a union recognized as a marriage under the tenets of an Indian religion, notwithstanding that "the union of the exempted person with other women at the same time would by those tenets also be recognized as a marriage"—I am quoting the section subject to certain provisos. So far there is no difficulty. If the exempted person has several wives in India to whom he is married according to the rites of an Indian religion, any one of such wives may enter the Union, not being prohibited. Then come the provisos: provided that no woman shall be deemed to be a wife of such exempted person,

(a) if such a union exists between him and any other woman who resides in any Province. This is clear: no matter how many of such wives the exempted person may have outside the Union one may enter the Union, but if he has in any Province a wife married according to his religion, no other wife can enter the Union.

Then comes the second proviso; (b) or "if such exempted person has in any Province offspring by any other woman who is still living." It is contended by Mr. Alexander that these words are capable of two constructions, under either of which the wife C of the special case would not be a prohibited immigrant, viz., they mean any other woman between whom and the exempted person a marriage recognized as such by their Indian religion exists, although such wife is outside the Union; or it means any other woman who is still living and who resides in any Province. But Mr. Alexander contends that the simple plain meaning of the words is not that intended by the Legislature.

But if the Legislature had meant what is contended why could it not have said so? There is no difficulty in either of the cases contended for in expressing the intention in plain intelligible words. Thus in the first case put, all that was required was to add the words, "and between whom and such exempted person such a union exists"—repealing the words in subsection (a). The proviso would then read: "or if such exempted person has in any Province offspring by any other woman who is still living and between whom and such exempted person such a union exists."

In the second case put, all that was required was to add: "in any Province," and the proviso would read, "if such exempted person has in any Province offspring by any other woman who is still living in any Province." Simplicity itself. But, says Mr. Alexander, if you read the proviso in its plain meaning you are not carrying out the policy of the Legislature, and if you recognize such a union as "existing," then if a divorce has taken place under such Indian religion, no such union exists, because it is no longer recognized as a marriage under the tenets of such Indian religion. That is, if the Legislature recognizes such a union as existing then it must recognize the divorce of such union which has caused such union to cease to exist.

It is not for this Court to speculate upon what was the policy of the Legislature; we must construe the section according to its meaning and in consideration with the legislation as expressed in Act 22 of 1913 which it amended, and where the Legislature has used plain terms it would require to me strong reasons to induce the Court to select one of two other meanings not expressed in words, but which could have been quite simply so expressed.

I am by no means satisfied that the Legislature in recognizing such a union also recognized the divorce of such a union under the tenets of the religion. That opinion arises from the definition in this section 3 of Act 22 of 1914 of "child under the age of sixteen." It is defined to mean the offspring of the exempted person and the wife as defined in the section; or a child of the exempted person and a deceased woman who if alive could have been recognized as the wife or whose union could have been registered under the Act. Now the children in the Province are the children of the exempted person and a woman still alive, whom he married in India according to his religion, who has always lived there, and whom he has divorced. Such if they were not already in the Province could not enter because their mother is not dead. This definition recognizes the children of a deceased wife, not those of a woman still living, and divorced. I am of opinion therefore that we must read the proviso in question according to its plain meaning and that being so the answer to the question of law reserved by the Immigration Board must be in the affirmative, viz., C must be taken to be a prohibited immigrant.

The costs must be paid by Nandkor.

SEARLE, J.: Prior to the passing of Act 22 of 1913 no one could be admitted as the "wife" of an immigrant, where the so-called "marriage" was according to the tenets of a religion that allowed more "wives" than one; hence so-called Indian "wives" were excluded: see Esop's case (1913, C.P.D. 133), which was decided under the Cape Act 30 of 1906, and R. v. Sukina (1912, T.S. 1,079) decided under Transvaal Act 15 of 1907. This being the state of the law, Act 22 of 1913 was passed, and section 5 (g) provided that the wife, or child under the age of sixteen years of an exempted or non-prohibited immigrant, might be admitted (unless there were certain specific personal bars or disqualifications), and that the words "wife" and "child" should include "the wife or child of a lawful and monogamous marriage duly celebrated according to the rites of any religious faith outside the Union." Under this Act, however, it was held that a "wife" according to a Mohammedan "marriage" could not be admitted because such marriage was "polygamous," inasmuch as polygamy was recognized by the Mohammedan religion, even though in the particular case the exempted person seeking to introduce such wife had actually only one wife; In re Kulsam Bibi (1913, N.L.R. 437). Thereafter Act 22 of 1914, the Indians' Relief Act, one object of which was to give a qualified recognition to these Indian "marriages," was passed—and section 5 (g) of Act 22 of 1913 was amended by deleting the words "including the wife or child of a lawful and monogamous marriage . . . outside the Union," and definitions of "wife" and of "child under sixteen years" were given. "Wife" was hereafter to include any one woman between whom and the exempted person there existed a union recognized as a marriage under the tenets of an Indian religion, notwithstanding that by those tenets the union of the exempted person with other women at the same time would also be recognized as a marriage, but then there followed two provisos (a) and (b), and if the circumstances mentioned in either (a) or (b) obtained with regard to the exempted person, the person for whom he claimed admission as his wife was not to be deemed to be his wife and was not to be admitted as an immigrant. The first proviso is, if there is any other woman residing in any Province (of the Union) between whom and the exempted person a similar union (such as an "Indian marriage") exists. From this it will be seen that it is no bar to the admission of a wife by an Indian marriage that there is another such Indian wife outside the Union. The second proviso is that the exempted person shall not have in any Province (of the Union) offspring by any other woman still living.

It is this second proviso that the Court has now to construe; for it is alleged here that the exempted person has children in the Union by an "Indian wife" whom he has divorced in India according to the tenets of an Indian religion with regard to divorce. She is not in the Union now, and indeed has never been in it. It is clear that if the words of the second proviso are read literally and plainly as they stand they do apply to the case in question because the children of the woman now divorced do live here, and she is alive, but we are asked to construe the words in some other way, either to explain them as meaning that the woman who is still living and whose offspring are in the Union, must herself be living within the Union; or that she must be a person with whom the exempted person is still cohabiting, as his so-called "wife." I do not think that we can accept either of these contentions. I see no reason why the clause (b) should have been drafted as it has been if either of the suggested meanings was intended; each could easily have been dealt with in perfectly clear language. On the other hand the contention put forward by the Immigration Officer is exactly supported by the words used. In these circumstances the Court is not entitled to speculate upon what may or may not have been the intentions of the Legislature, especially as there is so little to go upon. It may not appear clear upon what principle the proviso is founded, but broadly speaking if any suggestion can be made, the object seems to be to prevent a man who had already brought in children by one Indian marriage or had begotten such children in the Union, from bringing in a "wife" by another such "marriage," whilst the first so-called "wife" was alive. The object is therefore to prevent as far as possible two families, the product of these Indian marriages, from being introduced into the Union. If, however, the first "wife" had died, although there are children of the "marriage" in the Union, then a second wife may be admitted and there appears to be reason in this privilege. It is quite true that the words of the proviso may be construed as going even further in the direction of exclusion, e.g., where there may be children of a wholly "promiscuous union" already in this country. No doubt apparent hardship may result—as, in the present case, where the first wife is in India and has been divorced. A still greater hardship may perhaps result if an Indian registers his marriage in the Union under section 1 of the Act under consideration, gets a divorce from his wife from this Court on ordinary legal grounds and then seeks to bring in another during the lifetime of the divorced woman, but that case need not be decided now.

The point to bear in mind is that the relief purported to be given is admittedly only a qualified one, and there is nothing in the Act to lead the Court to the opinion that it was intended to introduce the Indian law of divorce into the question or whether an Indian "wife" (i.e., a wife by an Indian marriage) should be treated as a prohibited immigrant or not; it might be a difficult and onerous task for the Immigration Officer to settle as to whether the divorce proceedings were in order; the divorce according to Indian rights does not appear to be granted by any Court of Law but by a priest—and questions of great complexity may arise, in deciding whether what was done in India was validly done according to the customs existing there; it may be a very easy matter to get such a divorce, and the Immigration Laws may not have been intended to give privileges in such a matter.

The question must be answered in accordance with the contention of the Immigration Officer.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Long to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 13th ultimo|| regarding the decision of the Supreme Court of South Africa in the case Nandkor v. WITH reference to your memorandum of the 14th October, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India to return with thanks the South African Law Reports sent therewith.

While it seems clear that no exception can be taken from a legal point of view to the judgments in the Fatima case and the Magda case, Mr. Secretary Montagu thinks that Mr. Secretary Long will agree that these two cases present features of exceptional hardship. In view of the friendly discussions that took place at the recent Imperial War Conference regarding the administration of the South African laws affecting Indians, and the promise then made of consideration, Mr. Montagu would be obliged if Mr. Long thought it possible to suggest to the Union Government that in these cases the application of the law has borne very hardly upon young Indians.

[Answered by No. 118.]

India Office,

SIR,

Whitehall, London, S.W., 19th February, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India to invite a reference to the correspondence ending with Sir H. Lambert's letter, dated the 25th July last,‡ on the subject of the amendment of section 3 (2) (6) of the Union (of South Africa) Act 22 of 1914, and to forward, for the consideration of Viscount Milner, a copy of a letter No. 23, dated the 22nd November, from the Government of India, to whom the correspondence and the judgment of the Supreme Court to which it related was forwarded for consideration. Mr. Montagu trusts that, in view of the considerations advanced by the Government of India, and of the attitude adopted by the Imperial War Conference towards the removal of Indian disabilities, Lord Milner will now see his way to addressing the Union Government on this matter.

2. In this connexion I am to refer to Sir H. Lambert's letter, dated the 28th December,* and to explain that it was not Mr. Montagu's intention to suggest that the cases referred to in that letter, and in letter dated the 5th December† from this Office should be reopened. His hope was that the Secretary of State for the Colonies might invite the attention of the Union Government to the hardships which—as those two cases exemplify—are capable of arising out of the existing law, with a view to possible modification of the law. It will be observed that the case of Fatima, reported from the Transvaal Provincial Division, has features in common with that of Nandkor. In both cases the decision turned on the interpretation of section 5 (8) of Act 22 of 1913, and section 3 (2) of Act 22 of 1914, and in both cases the divorced wife, whose existence affected the issue, had been living not in South Africa but in India, while in Fatima's case the divorced wife was no longer living when the cause of action arose. In both cases the decision involved what appears to Mr. Montagu to be undeniable hardship to the husband and to members of his family, which might have been avoided without violation of the principle underlying the provisions in question.

3. I am, therefore, to express a hope that the Secretary of State for the Colonies will reconsider his opinion, and will recommend to the Union Government an amendment of the law which will enable an exempted person who has divorced a wife and remarried, in accordance with the tenets of his religion, to introduce, subject to such safeguards as may be considered reasonable and necessary, into his home in the Union, or to retain there the successor to his divorced wife and any children legitimately born to him by the divorced wife, even though he may have children by the later wife.

Enclosure in No. 117.

No. 23 of 1918.—GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY.

SIR, Delhi, the 22nd November, 1918.
We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 65 (Public), dated the 23rd August, 1918, and enclosure, on the subject of the admission to South Africa of the wives of resident Indians.

2. The correspondence relates to the case of an Indian, who, having divorced his wife in accordance with the tenets of an Indian religion and married again in accordance with the same tenets, sought admission to the Union for the second wife under the terms of section 5 (7) of the Immigrants Regulation Act, 22 of 1913. On the ground that the husband has children in the Union by the divorced wife who is still living, the Supreme Court of South Africa has held that the woman in question is not his wife in the sense of this section as read with section 3 (2) (b) of the Indians Relief Act, 22 of 1914, and is, therefore, a prohibited immigrant.

3. We have no desire to challenge the correctness of the Court's decision, or to question the ruling that, according to the strict letter of the law, as it stands, the woman is not entitled to admission. It seems to us, however, that it is the wording of section 3 (2) (b) of the Relief Act which is at fault, and that it was not the intention of the legislature to exclude the lawfully married second wife of an Indian who had divorced his first wife. Having regard to the circumstances in which the Relief Act was passed, we believe that we are justified in holding that it was designed to make all such concessions to Indian residents as could be claimed consistently with the acceptance of monogamy as a principle, and we fail to see how the marriage of a second wife after the divorce of the first is more repugnant to the principle of monogamy in the case of an Indian than in the case of a European. The legislation of 1913 and 1914 could not, in the nature of things, be expected to cover every possible case of hardship, and it seems to us apparent that there is an important casus omissus in the law as it stands. The effect of this omission is that, whereas the European resident may introduce his second wife after having divorced the first, and introduce also his legitimate minor children, whether by a divorced wife or not, even though he may have other children already in the country who may or may not be the offspring of a wholly promiscuous union, the Indian resident is precluded from claiming a similar privilege. We are strongly of opinion that this inequality should be removed. We do not agree with the Colonial Office that the fact that no representations founded on the judgment of the Supreme Court have yet been received is a sufficient reason for refraining from making an attempt, as suggested in Sir Thomas Holderness's letter of the 13th June, to obtain an amendment of section 3 of Act 22 of 1914 in order to prevent the occurrence of similar hard cases in future.

COLONIAL OFFICE to INDIA OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 119.]

SIR, Downing Street, 1st May, 1919.

I AM directed by Viscount Milner to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th of February * regarding the admission to the Union of South Africa of the wives and children of resident Indians who have divorced their previous wives in accordance with the tenets of Indian religion.

2. Lord Milner doubts whether it would be politic to press the Union Government so soon for an amendment of the settlement of the general question of the admission of wives and children of Indians into South Africa embodied in the Indians Relief Act, 1914; and the difficulty which he feels in this respect is not removed by the sympathetic attitude of the Imperial War Conference, 1918, in the matter of Indian disabilities. The object of paragraph 3 of the resolution† of the Conference was to settle the grievances of Canadian Indians on the lines already adopted in South Africa. This is clear from the India Office memorandum‡ laid before the Conference, in which it was urged, in connexion with the difficulties in Canada, that: "This unfair and unnatural position is the more galling because the Indians resident in South Africa have, since the passing of the Indians Relief Act, 1914, the privilege of introducing into the Colony one wife as well as her minor children." It is important also to remember that Mr. Burton said at the Conference: "Paragraph No. 3 (of the resolution) embodies, as a matter of fact, the present law of the Union. That is our position there, so that our agreement as to that is no concession." Mr. Burton thus accepted paragraph 3 of the resolution on the understanding that nothing further was involved in it than had already been provided for by the Union legislation.

3. As regards section 3 (2) (b) of the Indians Relief Act, the wording of which the Indian Government now call in question, it would hardly appear to be correct to hold that it was not the intention at the time to exclude the lawfully married second wife of an Indian who had divorced his first wife. As originally drafted this part of the Bill continued, after the words "by any other woman who is still living," with the words, "and between whom and such exempted person such a union exists or has existed." It will be seen from the correspondence enclosed in the letter from this Department of the 5th of June, 1914,§ that the Governor-General had some doubts as to this part of the Bill, and Mr. Stanley, the Governor-General's Private Secretary, particularly called the attention of the

* No. 117. † See page 5. ‡ Pages 245-248 of [Cd. 9177]. § No. 144 in African (South) No. 1012

Secretary for the Interior to hard cases which were likely to arise under it. Mr. Stanley's criticisms were mainly directed against the words "or has existed," which were finally omitted, and he argued that, if these words were omitted, nothing would be added by section 3 (2) (b) to section 3 (2) (a), and the whole proviso (b) might therefore be dropped. This argument was clearly wrong, but it is evident from the correspondence that the wording of the whole section must have received very careful consideration by the Union Government at the time. Moreover, when the draft of the Bill was settled, Mr. Gandhi does not appear to have taken any exception to the proviso (see the Governor-General's despatch* enclosed in the letter from this Department of the 25th of June, 1914), and the words at the end of the definition of a child under 16, which caused difficulty in the case of the girl Fatima, were in fact introduced to meet a point which Mr. Gandhi himself raised, and it is presumed, therefore, that he scrutinized them very carefully. In these circumstances it seems difficult to suppose that the wording of the Act did not carry out the common understanding.

4. Lord Milner agrees, however, that the cases in question do disclose a certain amount of hardship, which might perhaps be removed without materially increasing the total number of Indians in South Africa or encouraging polygamy, and with a view to the matter being referred to the Union Government he would suggest that a memorandum might be prepared on the subject in the India Office, which he could forward to the Union Government with an expression of hope that if now, or at any subsequent time, they are considering amendments to the law in question they will take into consideration the question whether it would be possible to meet such cases of hardship.

SIR,

India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, 6th June, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Grindle's letter of the 1st May, 1919,† regarding the admission to the Union of South Africa of the wives and children of resident Indians who have divorced their previous wives.

In reply I am to state that Mr. Montagu welcomes Viscount Milner's decision to refer the matter to the Union Government for consideration in view of the hardship which has been disclosed as affecting a certain number of Indian residents and of the fact that the matter would appear to be easily capable of remedy without danger to the principle of monogamy. He accepts the suggestion that the point of view of the Government of India should be stated in a memorandum which can be forwarded to the South African Government. I am to enclose a memorandum which has been prepared in this office for the purpose, and to request that it may be transmitted if Viscount Milner sees no objection to the terms in which it has been drafted.

Enclosure in No. 119.

MEMORANDUM.

ATTENTION has been called to certain apparent defects in the definition of "wife" and "child" contained in the Indians Relief Act, Section 3 (2), the effect of which, as declared in two recent judgments of the Supreme Court, is to exclude from the category of non-prohibited immigrants the wife or child of a second monogamous union contracted after the dissolution of a first marriage by divorce.

* No. 102 in African (South) No. 1012.

† No. 118.

The result of the judgment in the appeal Nandkor versus Principal Immigration Officer is that a second wife or her children cannot be introduced while the divorced wife remains in the Union or while (during her lifetime) any of her children remain in the Union.—South African Law Reports, Cape, 1917.

The result of the judgment in the Fatima case is that the child of a deceased wife cannot be introduced if her marriage had been dissolved and before her decease followed by a second marriage with a wife living in the Union (because the deceased woman if she had been alive could not have been recognized as the wife as defined, and therefore, even after her decease, her children are not children as defined).—South African Law Reports, Transvaal, 1917.

The section, as (no doubt correctly) interpreted by the Courts, by making impossible the recognition of Indian divorce, imposes a special disability on Indian residents. It applies the principle of monogamy in a stricter sense to Indian than the European marriages. Re-marriage after divorce is not inconsistent with the maintenance of monogamy as the principle of South African marriage law among Europeans, but, so far as this section operates, is denied to Indians.

The question has naturally arisen whether this was the intention of the Legislature at the time when the Indian Relief Act was passed.

It might perhaps be urged that the relief granted by that Act was only a qualified relief, that it was qualified by the fundamental policy of restricting Indian immigration, that this policy found expression in the section by preventing the immigration of a second wife after the divorce of a first; and that the wording of the section was consciously elaborated to secure this object. But if this was the object of the limits set on the definitions in the section it was not publicly declared at the time. If it had been, public opinion would hardly have greeted with the same satisfaction the settlement which was supposed to have been reached.

A more probable answer is that it was the undoubted and avowed object of the Act to recognize de facto monogamous marriages of Indians, whose religion permits polygamy, so far as this could be done without at the same time giving any sort of legal sanction to polygamous unions; that the complicated definitions of "wife" and "child," coming within the class of non-prohibited immigrants, were due to an endeavour to reconcile these two intentions, and that it was only by inadvertence that these definitions fail to take into account a second monogamous union contracted after the dissolution of a previous one, with the result that their actual wording are in conflict with the wishes of the legislature at the time.

This view would seem to be corroborated by a brief survey of the history of the question:—

In Natal Act 25 of 1891 Sections 76 and 78 provided for the granting by a magistrate of divorces (on grounds of adultery or one year's desertion) to Indian immigrants, section 81 for the re-marriage of the divorced parties, and section 82 for nullity of marriage. These provisions, together with those of Natal Act 2 of 1907, are specifically kept alive by section 4 of the Indians Relief Act.

The Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913, section 5 (g) included in the category of non-prohibited immigrants any person proved to be the wife or minor child of an exempted person "including the wife or child of a lawful and monogamous marriage duly celebrated according to the rites of any religious faith outside the Union." It is understood that this sub-section was adopted on the motion of Mr. Alexander, a Cape Town member, in the interests of the Indian community. It was thought that the words used would cover the case of any de facto monogamous wife (see Mr. Chaplin's speech on the second reading of the Indians Relief Bill, in the House of Assembly). The Natal Division of the Supreme Court, however, held that these words excluded marriages celebrated according to the rites of a religion which permitted polygamy.

It had always been the practice of the Immigration Department to admit one wife and the minor children of a resident Indian. The first recommendation of the Indian Enquiry Commission of 1914 was that the Immigrants Regulation Act should be amended to bring the law (as unexpectedly interpreted in the Court) into conformity with that practice. The Commission also recommended facilities for the registration (and consequent legal recognition with all the incidents following therefrom) of Indian marriages—a system which already rested on legislative enactment in the Cape Province.

To give effect to these recommendations the Indians Relief Bill was drafted. Clause 3 was intended to give effect to the first recommendation.

The definition of "wife" in Clause 3 (2), as first drafted, ran as follows:—
 "The wife shall include 'a woman between whom and the exempted person . . . there exists a union recognized as a marriage under the tenets of an Indian religion, notwithstanding that by those tenets the union of that exempted person with other woman at the same time would also be recognized as a marriage; provided that no woman shall be deemed to be the wife of such exempted person

(a) If such a union exists between him and any other woman who resides in any province; or

(b) if such exempted person has in any province offspring by any other woman who is still living, and between whom and such exempted person such a union exists or has existed."

It should be noted that the words "at the same time" show that what was understood by polygamy was the existence of a state of marriage with two or more wives simultaneously, not the marrying of one wife in succession to another.

The Governor-General's private secretary, in a letter to Mr. Gorges, of 15th May, 1914, drew attention to the last words of proviso (b). He pointed out that the words "or has existed" would operate to exclude a second wife after the divorce of a previous union. It is presumed that due consideration was given to Mr. Stanley's suggestion by Ministers. When the Bill was introduced all the words in proviso (b) after "who is still living" were omitted. The actual effect of this omission was to leave the meaning of the proviso much the same as when it was first drafted; but it appears probable that it had been the intention to re-draft the proviso so as to permit the introduction of a second wife after the divorce of a first. It will be seen that this would actually have been the effect if only the words "or has existed" had been deleted from the draft, and the remainder of the proviso had been left standing so as to read "if such exempted person has in any province offspring by any other woman who is still living, and between whom and such exempted person such a union exists." It would seem that an attempt was made to prevent the very contingency which has now arisen (in the case of Nandkor), of the section being interpreted by the Courts so as to exclude a second wife, after divorce from a first wife, during the latter's lifetime. It may be observed that Juta (J.P.) in his judgment in that case said that if it was the intention of the Legislature to permit the introduction of such second wife the proviso should have read in the words identical with those last quoted (which was precisely what Mr. Stanley proposed at the time). It seems likely that the defect in the clause as originally drafted—which was pointed out by Mr. Stanley—was recognized, and that it was desired to remedy it. Otherwise there was no reason for altering the original draft of the clause. Unfortunately, as too many words were cut out, the defect remained as before.

That it was not the intention to withhold recognition of divorce is also shown by sections 1 and 2 of the Indians Relief Act, which deal with the solemnization and registration of marriages. Sections 1 (2) and 2 (1) provide that "all the incidents" shall follow "from such marriages which follow from any other union recognized in law as a valid and binding marriage." Divorce is one of such incidents, as was pointed out by the Minister in charge of the committee stage of the Bill in the Senate in the debate on clause 1. The divorce contemplated by this section was no doubt only one taking place according to Roman-Dutch law (cf. the debate on the committee stage in the House of Assembly); but the words of the sections are sufficient to show that the legislature did not regard an Indian marriage as incapable of legal divorce or a second marriage after divorce as involving anything contrary to the principle of monogamy.

In the case of Fatima, the result of the judgment of the Supreme Court shows that the Act bears particularly hardly in circumstances such as gave rise to that case. It would appear to be unarguable that the Legislature intended to exclude the offspring of a previous marriage which had been dissolved, even after the decease of the divorced wife. The words added to the definition of "child" at the end of section 3 (2) ("child of . . . a deceased woman who, if she had been alive, could have been recognized as the wife as herein defined") were, it is true, inserted at the suggestion of Mr. Gandhi, but with the object of permitting the admission of the children of deceased women, not of excluding the children of divorced women subsequently deceased.

It is therefore suggested that the Act in this section, as interpreted, subjects Indian residents to a new disability which was not intended, in view of the previous Natal Acts, and other sections of this Act which recognize the possibility of Indian marriages being dissolved by divorce, and in view also of the history of the subject prior to the passing of the Act and the changes made in the draft Bill before it was introduced. If the Union Government agree in this conclusion it is hoped (1) that this disability may be removed by amending legislation, as opportunity offers, enacting that the wives and children of Indian residents shall not be excluded from the category of non-prohibited immigrants on any ground solely connected with an exempted person's re-marriage subsequent to the dissolution of a previously existing union, subject to reasonable safeguards against abuse. Such safeguards could probably be secured by defining the grounds, which, for the purposes of the section, would be recognized as dissolving a marriage. This need present no difficulty in view of the fact that grounds of dissolution were successfully defined for the purposes of Natal Act 25 of 1891. (2) That meanwhile the Immigration Department may be instructed to administer the Act so as not to exclude such wives and children. Such instructions would be in accordance with the promise made to Mr. Gandhi in Mr. Gorges' letter of the 30th June, 1914, to the effect that existing laws should be administered in a just manner and with due regard to vested rights, and would be a natural consequence of the friendly attitude displayed by the South African representatives towards the Indian question at the last Imperial War Conference.

No. 121.

MR. H. S. L. POLAK to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 3rd April, 1918.)

SIR,

Danes Inn House, 265, Strand, W.C.2, 2nd April, 1918.

It is with great regret that I have to draw your attention to the very serious matter dealt with in the enclosed extracts from Indian Opinion of 8th and 22nd February, being the report of a case heard in the Natal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court of South Africa, the paper's editorial comment thereon, and an expression of editorial opinion from the Star, Johannesburg, by no means a pro-Indian journal.

I need hardly, I am sure, emphasize the seriousness and far-reaching character of the Court's decision, not only as regards the position of a considerable proportion of the settled Indian population in South Africa, but also as it may affect the Constitutional relations of the Indian Native States and the British Government in India.

If the Court's decision be well-founded the prospects of some thousands of Indians coming from the Native States of Western India are alarmingly jeopardized, for there is nothing except their goodwill, which depends largely upon the extent to which they are influenced by public opinion in South Africa—it is often very hostile and bitter—to prevent the Union Government from deporting from the country that portion of the Indian population which comes from the Native States as undesirables and prohibited immigrants, and there will be no right of redress or right of appeal to the Supreme Court, which is expressly excluded by the terms of the Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913, in the case of aliens. By the action that they have now taken, in instructing the Natal Attorney-General to raise this technical point, the Union Government have, in effect, proclaimed their power to cancel every document of residence or domicile created by statute, in the case of such persons, and either to remove them from the country or prevent their return if they should temporarily absent themselves. As you will observe, they have actually exercised this power in the present case, and have thereby converted the document held by the unsuccessful appellant into "a scrap of paper." The effect of this procedure of the Government and the decision of the Court upon public opinion in India cannot easily be calculated.

* Enclosure in No. 119.

Hitherto it has been accepted in South Africa that no distinction should be drawn between British and non-British Indians, all Indians who were not subjects of France or Portugal being equally regarded as British Indians in South Africa. For this reason, and in order not to involve the Indian rulers in controversies in which the relations of the Imperial Government and the Dominions were concerned, Indians from the Native States, resident in South Africa, refrained almost completely from representing Indian grievances to rulers of the States from which they came. Now, as a result of this decision of the Court and the action of the Government, it has been publicly declared that, as aliens, and not British subjects, they may not appeal for protection to the Courts of South Africa, and, unlike French, American, or Japanese aliens, they cannot appeal to their consular representatives. The constitutional reply of the Governor-General of the Union would undoubtedly be that he cannot act independently of the advice of his Ministers. Accordingly, Indians from the Native States find themselves entirely without official or judicial protection against any excess of administrative zeal or hostile change of policy on the part of the Union Government. Had the Government taken this point at an earlier stage, during the passive resistance struggle, it would have been competent for them to have deported Mr. Gandhi, the Indian leader, himself the subject of the State of Porbander, as a prohibited immigrant, and they are now armed with the power to prevent his return to the country—should he deem it necessary to resume his former rights there.

A further result of what has happened is that, in future, the subjects of the Indian States, resident in South Africa, in order to protect their interests, will be obliged to apply for the intervention of their rulers in India, and at the very moment when the whole tendency of constitutional reconstruction in India is in the direction of bringing the territories of British India and the Native States, and their peoples, into closer relations with each other, advantage has been taken of Imperial preoccupations to add to the difficulties that surround the delicate relations of the Governments of British India and the Native States. No more tragic disservice could have been rendered to the Empire at the present juncture than this. And it is particularly painful, as the Star remarks, in that this action has been taken in Natal, which especially owes its prosperity to Indian settlement.

I venture respectfully to request that the Right Honourable the Secretary of State will give the matter his urgent and most careful consideration, with a view to settle satisfactorily the constitutional issue thus unnecessarily raised, and in order to appease the indignation of all thoughtful people in India, and allay the very natural anxiety of the entire Indian community in South Africa.

I have, &c.,
H. S. L. POLAK.

Enclosure 1 in No. 121.

EXTRACT FROM "INDIAN OPINION" OF FRIDAY, 8TH FEBRUARY, 1918.

INDIANS FROM NATIVE STATES: IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION.

AN important decision was given in the Supreme Court, Maritzburg, on the 4th instant, which, says the Times of Natal, will have the effect of declaring hundreds, if not thousands, of Indian residents in the Union to be aliens, and therefore coming within the radius of recent legislation.

The facts of the case are these: Essa Jan Mahomed, an Indian, came to Natal in 1896, and at the time of his entry into the Province he possessed a domicile certificate, which was substituted in 1911 for the one he received in 1896. He is a storekeeper in Maritzburg by calling. He paid three visits to India between 1896 and 1917, but on his return to Natal on the last occasion, in April last, his right to come into the Province was questioned. The Immigration Officer ruled that Mahomed and his minor son, whom he brought from India, were prohibited immigrants. Mahomed appealed to the Appeal Board against the decision of the Immigration Officer, and thereupon Mahomed appealed to the Supreme Court.

Mr. R. J. Harrison moved for a writ of mandamus, directing the Board to reserve certain questions of law for the decision of the Supreme Court, in terms of section 3, subsection 2, of the Immigrants Regulation Act (22 of 1913).

The Attorney-General, for the Board, raised the objection that the applicant was not a British subject, but was a subject of the Native State of Mavanaga [Bhawanagar], in India, as was shown by the applicant's passport, which was produced.

The Court decided that this preliminary point should be dealt with first, as under subsection 3 of section 3 of the above-named Act an alien has no right of appeal against the decision of the Board.

The Attorney-General argued at considerable length, and quoted authorities to show that the subjects of a Native State in India, while they had the protection of the British Crown, were not British subjects, and therefore were aliens.

Mr. Harrison contended that the applicant and his son were not aliens, and that they were in a peculiar position seeing that the Princes of the State to which they belonged owed allegiance to the Crown, and therefore, he argued, the applicants were British subjects.

In delivering judgment, the Judge-President went into all the authorities quoted, and said that on these authorities the subjects of Native States in India, in what was described as Native India as distinguished from British India, were not British subjects, although such States were under the protection of the British Crown. It was clear from the authorities that the applicants were not British subjects, but were aliens, and as such were not entitled to appeal to the Supreme Court against the decision of the Immigrants Appeal Board. The application must, therefore, be refused.

The Honourable Justice Carter and the Honourable Justice Tatham agreed.

The Attorney-General applied for costs in favour of the Board, but, after argument, the Court decided to make no order as to costs.

Enclosure 2 in No. 121.

EXTRACT FROM "INDIAN OPINION" OF FRIDAY, 8TH FEBRUARY, 1918.

A BRITISH ALIEN!

THE recent decision of the Natal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court raises a great question. By a stroke of the pen more than half of the Indian residents, born in India, are declared to be aliens and not British subjects. The Attorney-General, for the Immigrants Appeal Board, raised objection to the entry of an Indian, domiciled here since 1896, on the ground that he was not a British subject, but was a subject of the Native State of Bhawanagar, in India. We do not know whether the Judges of the Natal bench realize that they are thereby raising a very big question, and not merely deciding a point of law in an immigration case. Perhaps that does not concern them. The Attorney-General, we learn, argued at considerable length, and quoted authorities to show that the subjects of a Native State in India, while they had the protection of the British Crown, were not British subjects, and therefore were aliens. And what is an alien? He is, according to a dictionary, a foreigner, one born in, or belonging to, another country. In English law an alien is one born out of the allegiance of the King. If the subjects of Native States in India do not owe allegiance to King George, the Princes themselves certainly do. How is it possible for a Prince, who is not an alien, to rule over subjects who are aliens? The thing is preposterous. Another puzzle is this: If Indians, born in Native States, are aliens, of what nationality are they? They must still be Indians, and India is called a Dependency of the British Crown. They are certainly not Russian, French, or German. This creating aliens within the Empire is as absurd as it is unjust. We wonder what the "Princes and Peoples of India," as affectionately addressed by His Majesty, will think of this latest monstrosity from South Africa. Now we must indeed marvel at the wonderful loyalty of India and at the generosity of "Princes and Peoples" in providing aeroplanes, motor ambulances, and whole regiments for the British Army. It seems that, whilst being actually aliens, they have been a thousand times more loyal and generous than, say, the Nationalist British subjects of South Africa.

But to return to the immediate question affecting the subjects of Native States resident in this country, it appears that the Government, through its Immigration Officers, have started a fresh campaign of weeding out domiciled Indians. If the Union Government have done this deliberately, we must say it is a distinct breach of faith on their part. But if it is the ingenious device of the Immigration Officer it only proves more clearly than ever that the object of these gentlemen is to harass the people and find excuses for excluding lawful residents. In any case the matter cannot rest where it does to-day, and it is not a problem which should be thrust upon any individual to solve. It is essentially a matter that should be taken up by the Indian community.

EXTRACT FROM "INDIAN OPINION" OF FRIDAY, 22ND FEBRUARY, 1918.

INDIANS FROM NATIVE STATES: THE "STAR'S" COMMENT.

The Star (Johannesburg), commenting upon the recent decision of the Natal Supreme Court in deciding that an Indian born in one of the Native States of India was an alien and therefore not entitled to appeal to the Court against the decision of the Immigration Officer who had pronounced him to be a prohibited immigrant, says:—

"To us it appears entirely contrary to equity that a man who has been allowed to reside in a British Dominion for close on a quarter of a century, and has built up a business for himself, should be declared an alien on a legal side issue, his vested rights and his domicile alike being disregarded. The Natal Supreme Court has of recent years taken an unfortunate part in creating feeling of apprehension among the Indian people. It is always more easy to foster that feeling than to allay it. The legal and technical position may be quite sound. We are, however, not concerned with that special aspect, but with the broader standpoint of national and Imperial policy from which the judgment appears to be indefensible. It is not beside the point to remember that no colony owes more to the Indians than Natal. She was virtually bankrupt before the Indians were imported to stimulate her flagging industries, and was only pulled out of the mire by the free use of Indian labour. To-day her prosperity is to a very large extent based on that labour, and it is therefore all the more a matter of regret and reproach that the spirit of Natal policy in late years—as interpreted by the Judges of the Court—should be in such flat violation of the principles of justice and so completely out of consonance with Imperial interests."

COLONIAL OFFICE to INDIA OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 123.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 22nd April, 1918.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Long to transmit to you, to be laid before the Secretary of State for India, a copy of a letter* from Mr. H. S. L. Polak regarding the case of a native of the Indian State of Bhawanagar, residing in Natal, who, on his return from a visit to India, has been treated as an alien for the purposes of the Union Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913.

Mr. Long would be glad to receive the observations of the Secretary of State on the case.

(Received 4th May, 1918.)

[Answered by No. 127.]

India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1,

3rd May, 1918.

SIR,

IN reply to your letter dated the 22nd April, 1918,† I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to state, for the information of Mr. Secretary Long, that he received from Mr. H. S. L. Polak copy of the letter addressed by him to the Colonial Office on the 2nd April, 1918,* drawing attention to the newspaper reports of the recent case before the Supreme Court, Maritzburg, from which it would appear that a subject of the Native State of Bhawanagar was prevented from landing in South Africa, and was subsequently held to be not entitled to appeal against the decision of the Immigrants Appeal Board, on the ground that he was an alien.

The Secretary of State cannot but think that, if this report is correct, the Union Government or the Immigration Authorities must have been misinformed as to the treatment that His Majesty's Government habitually accord to subjects of the Native States of India. It is the case that these persons are the subjects of the rulers of their States and not British subjects, but, on the other hand, they are far from being treated as aliens, and His Majesty's Government would be seriously concerned to find such treatment being accorded to them. For example, they have been quite recently declared by Parliament to be eligible under certain conditions for nomination to Legislative Councils in British India and for civil or military offices under the Crown, including the Indian Civil Service (6 & 7 Geo. V., c. 37, sections 1, 3, and 4).

* No. 121.

† No. 122.

Moreover, it has been accepted by the Secretary of State for the Home Department that the subjects of these Native States are not to be regarded in the United Kingdom as aliens within the meaning of the Aliens Restriction Order, and instructions have been issued by him to ensure they should not be required to register or otherwise comply with the Order. Mention may also be made of the fact that in the draft Order in Council annexed to the recent report of the Aliens Committee a clause in section 26 definitely declares that "the expression 'alien' shall not include a subject of any protected State or a native of a British Protectorate."

In further explanation of the position an extract is enclosed from a note to an edition compiled for official use of the Government of India Acts, 1915 and 1916.

The Secretary of State trusts that, in view of the importance of the issue raised, Mr. Long will consider the propriety of addressing the Union Government, and inviting their good offices to secure, by an amendment of the Immigration Act, 1913, or by some other means, that subjects of the Native States of India should be accorded the same treatment as that which, so far as he is aware, is given to them in other parts of the Empire.

If the facts are as stated in the newspaper reports the case to which Mr. Polak has drawn attention would seem to call for further inquiry. Under the decision of the Supreme Court the individual in question is precluded from appealing against the order of the Immigration Board. But for this decision he would have had a right of appeal on the question of domicile or other question of law. In these circumstances the Secretary of State would be glad if Mr. Long would also consider the propriety of addressing the Union Government with a view to an inquiry and a report as to the circumstances in which the order was made by the immigration authorities as to the action taken in pursuance of the order.

I am to suggest that the Union Government might be asked by telegraph to send the text of the judgment referred to in this letter.

I have, &c.,

J. E. FERARD.

EXTRACT FROM NOTE TO SECTION 134 OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.

SUBJECTS of the Native States of India are not British subjects, but, inasmuch as the ruling chiefs owe allegiance to the British Crown, they are "protected persons," that is to say, they are treated as British subjects when in any foreign State. See, e.g., section 3 of the Persian Coast and Islands Order in Council of the 7th May, 1907, which provides that "'British subject' includes a British protected person, that is to say, a person who either (a) is a native of any Protectorate of His Majesty, or (b) by virtue of section 15 of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, or otherwise, enjoys His Majesty's protection within the Persian coast and islands." Section 15 of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict., c. 37), declares that "where any Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act extends to persons enjoying His Majesty's protection, that expression shall include all subjects of the several princes and States in India." Section 1 of the Fugitive Offenders (Protected States) Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo. V., c. 39), authorizes the application of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69), by Order in Council, to places over which His Majesty extends his protection, as if they were British possessions. Section 2 of the Marriage of British Subjects (Facilities) Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 40), authorizes the extension of that Act, by Order in Council, to British Protectorates. See further Hall's "Foreign Jurisdiction of the British Crown," page 127, and the preamble to the Slave Trade Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict., c. 46).

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 13th May, 1918.)

[Answered by No. 126.]

(No. 243.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 5th April, 1918.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you copies of correspondence on the subject of a recent decision of the Supreme Court in Natal regarding the legal status of Indians born in the Native States of India.

2. I understand that Ministers have adopted my suggestion and have informed the British Indian League and the Transvaal Hindoo Association in the sense of Ministers' minute No. 386 of the 12th March.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure 1 in No. 124.

The British Indian League, P.O. Box 2100, Johannesburg,

YOUR EXCELLENCY, 15th February, 1918.

IN this matter I am respectfully venturing to address you, not as Governor-General of the Union, High Commissioner of South Africa, but as the representative of the King-Emperor of India. On the 6th instant the Supreme Court of Natal, comprising of three English judges, pronounced a judgment to the effect that Indians born in the Native States of India are not British subjects. In the Delhi Coronation Durbar, His Majesty King George said to the Indian Princes and representative Indian people assembled therein: "You are all my loyal subjects, men of valour, of proud lineage, and noble traditions." A similar proclamation was issued to the Princes and people of India by His Majesty King Edward. That being so it is not necessary for me to cite any other authority to show that Indians are British subjects, and this had been an unquestioned fact accepted by the world.

The learned Natal judges have altered the whole situation. They have established a precedent dangerous to the stability of British rule in India, insulting to the Princes and people of India, and surprising to the world at large. They have reduced our King-Emperor's sacred proclamation to a mockery. Only the other day, in his address from the Throne, our King-Emperor spoke of "my Indian Empire." Ever since the beginning of the world-War the Courts of the Union have been pronouncing decree after decree against Indians, while the Government has been passing the most reactionary laws, striking at the very bedrock of our liberty—or rather what we have left of it. No civilized Government in the world is engaged in such a sinister task against their fellow subjects. Canada and Australia are free from this taint: they have their Asiatic problems to solve, but they are solving it by a more humane, liberal method. They have never degraded or debased human beings by legislation. They remember that they are trustees of British honour.

Alas! the Union Government, where Asiatics are concerned, do not seem to remember anything except their prejudice. Their efforts to solve the Asiatic, coloured, and native problems have culminated in a series of laws which are the ugliest blots upon the honoured name of England. The irony of this is that the Central Empires may not impose similar laws upon humanity—the whole world is up in arms for their destruction!

It is an axiom that a Government is both guardian and trustee of peoples under their rule. They are responsible for the people's mental and moral improvement, political, economical, and commercial prosperity. They should be fair, just, and impartial: truth and honour being the foundation of their rule.

But is the Union Government fair, just, or impartial? No. They have a law for Europeans, a violent, unreasoning racial prejudice, translated into laws, for non-Europeans—laws in the administration of which justice, principle, and all moral scruples are thrown to the winds. Even the Courts of Justice have been muzzled to administer laws, not justice.

The question which now confronts the whole Asiatic world is whether the Union, in having been entrusted with self-government, and having been appointed trustees of subject races and trustees of British honour, are discharging that trust faithfully; whether the Natal Supreme Court's decision is at all calculated to satisfy the people of India as to how such affairs are possible under the British flag; whether the Union Government cannot devote their full time to fighting Prussianism in Europe than to harassing Indians whose friends and brothers are fighting in defence of the British Empire as a whole. The answer to all this is to be found in the seething discontent of the non-European races in South Africa.

An American negro claims to be an American citizen; a negro from French Africa claims to be a citizen of France. Both are honourably treated by their respective Governments. These individuals know that, as far as they are concerned, their Governments will never shirk their responsibility. These foreign Governments treat their white and black citizens with absolute equality. They have raised their white and black citizens by an equal system of education, by equality of opportunity, to become respectable and responsible members of the body politic, thus making of them a valuable asset in their scheme of national defence.

What a contrast is the position of the non-European races under the Union Government! I believe a sum of £18,000 is voted for the maintenance of the Zoo Garden in Pretoria; a similar sum is voted for the education of non-European children in this Province. They receive just enough education to become useful servants, not responsible citizens. Comment is needless. And what Your Excellency saw in Fereiratown with your own eyes is an eloquent testimony to the callousness of the Government who, by every species of reactionary measure, drove people to lead a life of wretchedness and squalor. It is a testimony possible in a country where Government is determined to degrade all non-European races to a position of permanent inferiority to Europeans, compel them to occupy the place of hewers of wood and drawers of water.

This is not a pleasant state of affairs, yet it exists under the British flag, and yet the non-European races have not shirked in their duty to the Empire.

I regret to have to digress from the main subject and make these general observations.

What is the position at present of those thousands of Indians in South Africa who were born in the Native States, and who were declared by the three English judges of Natal "not British subjects"? Are they to apply to their respective Princes to appoint Consuls for their protection here? Since they are nobody's subjects can they apply to the nearest foreign Power, the Mozambique Government, for letters of naturalization to become the subjects of Portugal?

These questions are not asked with a view to embarrassing Your Excellency, they are asked in view of the above judgment, and in a spirit of honest inquiry. As a loyal British subject I would be failing in my duty if I did not point out how dangerous to the peace of India this judgment has become, and what an instrument of mockery it would be in the hands of the enemies of the Empire. All because the highest law recognized by the Union Government is "white supremacy," and they are obsessed by that term. No method has been thought too bad or too good to enforce this obsession. In illustration of this point, about 50,000 of the most intelligent natives were recruited and sent to Europe to assist in war work. Soon after they were sent out the Government brought forward a Native Land Act to rob the land of the wives and children of these very natives! My Lord, history records no greater act of "slimness" than this action of the Government. Therefore my countrymen humbly beg of you to advise and protect them against a tyrant Government, which, under the ægis of the British flag, is strenuously endeavouring to degrade British Indians.

I have, &c.,

M. V. DESAI,
Honorary Joint Secretary.

His Excellency

The Right Honourable Viscount Buxton, P.C., &c.,
Cape Town.

The Transvaal Hindoo Association, P.O. Box 2941, Johannesburg.
 YOUR EXCELLENCY, 16th February, 1918.

THE decision of the Supreme Court of Natal in the matter of Essa Jan Mahomed has caused a certain amount of anxiety on the part of the Hindoos of the Transvaal Province, and my Committee have accordingly instructed me to address Your Excellency on the subject.

The judgment above referred to has no doubt been brought to Your Excellency's notice. It affects by far the greater portion of Hindoos in this country, and it is to the effect that those of us who hail from parts of India where we are subject to the rule of a Native Prince are not British subjects.

Many Hindoos in the past have been under the impression that they are British subjects. Amongst the more enlightened, however, we have never claimed to be British subjects, but we have all been given to understand, in practice at any rate, that the laws of this country, where they spoke of British Indians, referred to all Indians who came here from any part of Hindustan. The Indian Relief Act would be meaningless unless it did give us to understand that this was so, because it was on account of the agitation of all Indians that the relief was brought about; and until the present moment it was never anticipated by us that the Government would avail itself of an obvious mistake in terminology. The Relief Act, and any other Act that refers to British Indians, cannot but mean Indians from India, that is to say, the whole of India as it is usually understood.

Whatever interpretation is placed upon the words is a matter for the Courts of Justice, and not for ourselves. We do feel this, however, that our position in this country should be officially defined.

We now approach Your Excellency as the representative of His Majesty King George V., Emperor of India. In a sense Your Excellency's position, we take it, would be towards us very much as that of an ambassador or consul to a foreign people. If this relationship does not exist then we would ask Your Excellency to define our status. We are, according to the judgment, as foreign to Great Britain as are the Turks, or the Russians, or the Greeks living in this country. But these people, if they are not at war with Great Britain, have their consular representatives here, as have also the Chinese. But we, apparently, are a foreign people, or the law is about to regard us as such, without any representative whatsoever. The Government of the Union certainly are not our representatives.

We are daily suffering great hardships, and it would appear that the time has come when further hardships are about to be imposed upon us. Up to the present we have always been under the impression that we could appeal to the British Government, of which we appeared to be subjects. At least this was the position from the British point of view when war was declared upon the Boers, and the fact of our being British subjects was used as a casus belli. At that time the Indians whose grievances the British statesmen championed were not British subjects, or at least a very great number of them were not, but it suited diplomacy so to designate them. To-day there is apparently no desire to recognize them as such, since they can serve no useful political purpose.

The Indian, as Your Excellency no doubt knows, receives no benefit from his being a British subject or being styled a British subject, nor does he particularly desire the distinction, sometimes wrongly and sometimes designedly conferred upon him, but he certainly will not tolerate his status being played about with to suit political aims and political conditions.

In order to communicate with our various Princes in India we would like Your Excellency to explain to us whether the existing privileges, such as they are, contained in the laws of the Union, refer to the handful of Indians who, according to international law, are British subjects, or whether the practice followed in the past is to prevail. It is our wish, further, to ask our various Princes to appoint such persons in this country with consular rank who may be able to protect our rights, and to whom we may go to in case of distress. The Transvaal Hindoo Association has a total membership of over 2,000 members, and the Hindoos of the Transvaal who are not British subjects number more than a thousand. All these people are anxiously awaiting Your Excellency's reply.

We sincerely trust that Your Excellency will view this communication in the spirit in which it is meant. We have no desire to be disrespectful to the British Crown, to which we owe allegiance through our Princes, but we are now about to fight for our very existence in this Dominion, and we intend to be guided by Your Excellency's advice.

(Minute 386.)

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 12th March, 1918.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minutes, No. 15/893 and No. 15/894, of the 22nd and 26th February last, respectively (with enclosures), Ministers have the honour to forward, herewith, for His Excellency's information, a copy of the recent judgment of the Natal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court, declaring natives of the Protected Native States of India to be aliens, and to state that, notwithstanding the legal position, they will instruct their officers not to press this point in the event of any further appeals being made by such persons to the Supreme Court in terms of section 3 of Act No. 22 of 1913.

In consequence of other pressing matters which have to be dealt with by Parliament, Ministers regret that they are unable to introduce any amending legislation during the present session, but, in view of the legal decision referred to, they intend to propose to Parliament, next time the Act in question is dealt with, that it should be provided that, for the purposes of the appeal referred to, a native of one of the Protected States in India shall not be regarded as an alien.

LOUIS BOTHA.

(File No. 6540.)

4th February, 1918.

E. J. MAHOMED AND MINOR SON V. IMMIGRANTS APPEAL BOARD.

DOVE-WILSON, J.P.: This is an application by a person claiming to be an appellant in the sense of section 3, subsection 2 of Act 22 of 1913, for an order upon the Indian Immigrants Appeal Board to reserve for the decision of this Court certain questions of law. Preliminary objection is taken by the Attorney-General that the applicant has himself in the course of the proceedings before the Board furnished evidence that he is not entitled to be regarded as an appellant at all in the sense of the section because he is an alien.

Subsection 3 of section 3 provides that "appellant," in the sense of subsection 2, shall not include an alien. In the course of the proceedings before the Board the applicant produced his passport as evidence of his status. That passport bears his photograph, is signed by him, and declares that his national status is that of a subject of the State of Navanagar, a Native State in India, and as such entitled to His Majesty's protection; and the passport regulations provide that passports may be issued, amongst others, to subjects of Native States in India.

If, therefore, the subject of a Native State is an alien, then the preliminary objection is made out; and upon this question I think the law is quite clear. It is common knowledge that India is divided into what may for convenience be called British India and Indian India, the latter portion of India consisting of a large number of States of varying sizes, owing allegiance to their own Princes or rulers, but under the suzerainty and protection of the British Crown. I take in the first place the definition of "alien" afforded by Lord Halsbury's "Laws of England," volume I, section 662: "An alien is, at common law, a subject of a foreign State who has not been born within the allegiance of the Crown"; and in a note to that section an old case (1608) is cited, where it was laid down that "Ligeance is the mutual bond and obligation between the King and his subjects whereby subjects are called his liege subjects because they are bound to obey and serve him." Again, in Renton's "Encyclopaedia of the Laws of England," volume I, "alien" is stated to be in practice applicable to all persons who, although they may be on British soil, are not British subjects. In short, "alien" is simply the converse of "British subject," and all who are not British subjects may comprehensively be described as aliens.

The question accordingly is whether the subjects of Native States in India under the suzerainty of the British Crown are British subjects. In Hall's "International Law," at page 29, fourth edition, it is stated: "For the purpose of International Law a protected State is one which, in consequence of its weakness, has placed itself under the protection of another Power on defined conditions, or has been so placed under an arrangement between Powers the interests of which are involved in the disposition of its territory. The incidents of a Protectorate may vary greatly; but in order that a community may fall within the category of the Protected States, which are persons in international law, it is necessary that its subjects shall remain a distinct nationality . . . ; in other words, its members must owe no allegiance except to the community itself." And in a note to the passage I have just quoted it is said: "Protected States such as those included in the Indian Empire of Great Britain are of course not subjects of international law. Indian Native States are theoretically in possession of internal sovereignty, and their relations to the British Empire are in all cases more or less defined by treaty. The treaties really amount to little more than statements of limitations which the Imperial Government, except in very exceptional circumstances, places on its own action." In 10 Halsbury's "Laws of England," section 1017, dealing with the Native States of India, it is said: "It is probably impossible to attempt the definition of a Native State, or even to ascertain the precise status of its ruler, if there be one. The accepted test is that the inhabitants are not British subjects properly so called, that they are not amenable to ordinary British jurisdiction, and that they do not pay revenue." Again, in Renton's "Encyclopædia," volume 2, page 251, it is said that "the term British community does not include the territories of independent Native Princes. In the Native States the Governor-General has only such powers as have been ceded to him by the local governments, but the subjects of Native Princes are recognized for various purposes as persons enjoying Her Majesty's protection."

I think it is clear from these authorities that if we accept—and I see no reason why we should not—the applicant's own evidence as to his status, he is not a British subject; and if he is not a British subject he is an alien, and consequently not entitled to the advantages given to an appellant by the Act. Upon these grounds the application must be refused. There will be no order as to costs.

CARTER, J., and TATHAM, J., agreed.

Enclosure 4 in No. 124.

(Minute No. 15/896.)

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 19th March, 1918.

THE Governor-General acknowledges the receipt of Ministers' minute No. 386, of the 12th March, and is glad to know that Ministers have decided not to take advantage of the judgment of the Natal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court declaring natives of the Protected Native States of India to be aliens, and that they will introduce suitable amending legislation at the first convenient opportunity.

It appears to the Governor-General that this decision should be made public as soon as possible. If Ministers agree, he would suggest that Ministers should send a reply in the sense of their minute No. 386 of the 12th March, to the letters of the 15th and 16th February from the British Indian League of the Transvaal and the Transvaal Hindoo Association, respectively.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 13th May, 1918.)

(Confidential.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 5th April, 1918.
WITH reference to my despatch No. 243, of 5th April,* I have the honour to transmit to you copies of correspondence which I have had with Sir Thomas Watt, the Minister of the Interior.

2. On the information at present before me the undertaking given by Ministers in their minute of the 12th March, and the action of Sir Thomas Watt in regard to this particular man, Essa Jan Mahomed, would appear to be satisfactory. It is, however, disquieting to find that the Principal Immigration Officer raises such a plea at the present time as that the man being born in a Native State is not a British subject. The Attorney-General, as a lawyer, of course is in a somewhat different position.

3. It is not yet clear how the Supreme Court decision will affect the position of Indians from the Native States in their dealings with local authorities over whom Ministers have no control, e.g., with provincial or municipal authorities in regard to trading licences and the municipal franchise.

I shall, however, bear this aspect of the matter in mind.

4. I understand that the Department of the Interior has, since the decision of the Supreme Court, received an application from an Indian born in a Native State for naturalization as a British subject, and that Ministers have not yet decided what attitude they will adopt to this and similar applications.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure 1 in No. 125.

(No. 15/896.)

Governor-General's Office,

DEAR SIR THOMAS, Cape Town, 20th March, 1918.

I HAVE received Ministers' minute No. 386, of 12th March, in regard to the legal status of Indians born in the Native States of India.

The first reference which I saw to the recent judgment of the Natal Court was in a brief paragraph of the Cape Times of 5th February. There it was stated that the point arose out of an application by an Indian named Mahomed, who had been resident in Natal since 1896 and was refused readmission in April last.

I should be much obliged if you would let me have a full report on the case of this man Mahomed. In particular I should be glad to know:—

1. The facts as to his residence in Natal;
2. On what grounds his application for readmission was refused;
3. What were the points of law on which he wished to appeal to the Supreme Court;
4. By whom the plea that he was not a British subject was first raised; and
5. What is his present position.

I desire this information in order that my report on the matter to His Majesty's Government may be as complete as possible.

Yours sincerely,
BUXTON.

The Honourable Sir T. Watt, K.C.M.G., Minister of the Interior, Cape Town.

Enclosure 2 in No. 125.

Union of South Africa,
Office of the Minister of Public Works and Interior,

27th March, 1918.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

In reply to your letter of the 20th instant regarding Essa Jan Mahomed, I beg to inform you that the position is as follows:—

He arrived in Durban, Natal, from Calcutta, India, per the s.s. "Surat," on the 10th April, 1917, and was declared a prohibited immigrant by the Principal Immigration Officer at Durban under the provisions of section 4 (1) (a) and (b) of the Immigrants Regulation Act, No. 22 of 1913. Mahomed appealed to the Immigration Appeal Board established under the provisions of section 2 of the same Act, and the appeal was heard by the Board on the 4th September, 1917. Mahomed's plea was: (a) that he is the legal holder of certificate of domicile issued on the 20th April, 1911; (b) that by virtue of the provisions of paragraph (f) of section 5 of Act No. 22 of 1913 he is not a prohibited immigrant. The evidence taken before the Board showed that no definite statement could be obtained from Mahomed as to his period of residence in Natal. In one part of his evidence he referred to twenty-one years' domicile, then to fifteen, and again to six, but, after a full hearing of the case, the Board found that his first arrival was somewhere about 1902, and that he never satisfied the Immigration Officer at that time of his right to enter Natal, and they dismissed the appeal. Although the Board did not refer in their finding to the certificate of domicile produced by the appellant, it is assumed that they were of opinion that he was not the person referred to in it or that he had obtained it by fraud or error.

In regard to the specific questions put by you, the replies are as follows:—

1. In regard to the facts as to Essa Jan Mahomed's residence in Natal the finding of the Board is that his first arrival was in 1902.

2. The reason for the refusal of his application for readmission to Natal was that he originally came in illegally, and, therefore, had no right to remain in Natal.

3. The points of law and questions submitted by the appellant to the Natal Provincial Division of the Supreme Court were as follows:—

(1) Did the evidence submitted to the Board establish that Essa Jan Mahomed is entitled to be regarded as having his domicile in the Province of Natal?

(2) Did the certificate of domicile held by Essa Jan Mahomed entitle him to claim domicile in Natal?

(3) If Essa Jan Mahomed had acquired a domicile in Natal at any time was there any evidence before the Board to justify it in holding that he had abandoned such domicile?

(4) Does the applicant come within the provisions of Act No. 22 of 1913?

(5) If the applicant comes within the provisions of the said Act is he entitled to exemption under section 5 (f) of the said Act?

(6) If Essa Jan Mahomed is exempted from the provisions of the said Act is his son Gannie Essa entitled to claim that by virtue of paragraph (g) of section 5 of the said Act he is not a prohibited immigrant?

(7) Did the evidence generally entitle the Board to declare that the applicant and his said son are prohibited immigrants?

4. The point that he was not a British subject was first raised by the Principal Immigration Officer on the 26th October, 1917, in reporting the proceedings of the Immigration Appeal Board to the head office, but the Attorney-General also took this exception to the appeal to the Supreme Court, a copy of whose judgment has been sent to you.

5. The present position is that Mahomed is still at Pietermaritzburg, but it is understood that he is taking the advice of counsel with the object of appealing against the decision of the Court.

I may add that, after taking all the circumstances of the case into consideration, I have thought it wise to allow him to remain in Natal as if he were legally domiciled there, and have instructed the Immigration Department accordingly.

I am, &c.,

T. WATT.

DEAR SIR THOMAS,

I AM much obliged for your letter of the 27th March in regard to Essa Jan Mahomed.

(No. 223.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 5th June, 1918.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 243, of the 5th April,* on the subject of the decision of the Supreme Court of Natal in the matter of Essa Jan Mahomed, regarding the legal status of Indians born in the Native States of India.

2. I have learnt with satisfaction of the action which your Government have decided to take to meet the situation caused by this decision of the Court. I may observe that the case had been brought to my notice prior to the receipt of your despatch, and I had been in communication with the Secretary of State for India on the subject, who has pointed out that, though it is true that the subjects of the Native States of India are the subjects of the rulers of their States and not British subjects, they are far from being treated as aliens, and His Majesty's Government would be seriously concerned to find such treatment accorded to them. For example, they have been quite recently declared by Parliament to be eligible under certain conditions for nomination to Legislative Councils in British India, and for civil or military offices under the Crown, including the Indian Civil Service (6 and 7 George V., chapter 37, sections 1, 3, and 4).

3. Moreover, it has been agreed that the subjects of these Native States are not to be regarded in the United Kingdom as aliens within the meaning of the Aliens Restriction Order, and instructions have been issued to ensure that they should not be required to register or otherwise comply with the Order.

I have, &c.,

I am to enclose also a copy of a despatch§ which has been addressed to the Governor-General on the subject.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch No. 252, of the 21st April,* copy of a minute from Ministers (with copies of certificates), dated 10th September, and of a despatch to the Viceroy of India, dated 11th September, on the subject of the grant of passports to India.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,

Governor-General.

Enclosure 1 in No. 128.

MINUTE 1468.

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 10th September, 1917.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minute No. 9/133/90, dated 6th June, 1917, transmitting despatch from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the subject of the grant of passports and visas to India, Ministers have the honour to state that passports are now being issued to all persons (including Indians) travelling to India from the Union.

In this connexion Ministers would, however, point out that, as passports are valid for a period of two years and may be extended by competent authority for further periods, the present general issue of such documents to Indians by the Union Government conflicts with the period of availability of three years for which certificates of identity under the Immigrants Regulation Act No. 22/1913, and the regulations thereunder, are given to Indians. These certificates are issued to Indians lawfully resident in the Union, who, desiring to proceed thereout with the intention of returning thereto, are for any reason apprehensive that they will be unable to prove on their return that they are not prohibited immigrants—vide section 25 (2) of the Act and No. 20 (1) of the regulations above mentioned.

Ministers would therefore request that His Excellency the Governor-General will be good enough to make representations to the Government of India with a view to the issue of passports by the Union Government being dispensed with in the case of Indians wishing to visit India, and that, in lieu thereof, the Government of India accept the certificates of identity above referred to and registration certificates issued to Asiatics under the Asiatics Registration Amendment Act No. 36/1908 (Transvaal). Such certificates contain means of identification such as description and thumb prints of the holder, which would doubtless prove sufficient for the purposes of the Government of India, but, if further identification is thought to be essential, it would be arranged that the certificates should in all cases also bear the holder's photograph. The form of the certificates of identity is published under Government Notice No. 1221, dated 23rd July, 1914, and the form of the certificate of registration is set forth in the schedule to the Act 36/1908 above mentioned.

Ministers would point out that it is desired that the above-mentioned certificates of identity and registration certificates only, and no other certificates or documents that may be presented by Indians issued under any South African immigration or other law or regulations, be accepted by the authorities at India, if the request in the third paragraph of this minute is concurred in by the Government of India.

* No. 12.

It is further desired that, in the cases of Indians to whom passports to visit India are being, and have been, issued, the Government of India be requested to be good enough not to extend such passports for more than one year beyond the original two years, thus making their total period of availability coincide with the period of three years for which the certificates of identity are issued.

It is desired that if possible the reply of the Government of India be sent by cable.

(No. 112.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 20th February, 1918.
WITH reference to my despatches, No. 783 of the 11th September, and No. 1002 of the 5th December,§ I have the honour to transmit to you the accompanying letter addressed to the Secretary of State for India by the Chairman of the Transvaal British Indian Association.

2. I am referring a copy of the letter to my Ministers for their observations.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 134.

THE TRANSVAAL BRITISH INDIAN ASSOCIATION,

P.O. Box 6522, Johannesburg,
9th February, 1918.

SIR,

My Committee direct me to forward, for your consideration, the following statements of facts and representations by the community my Committee represents.

As you are doubtless aware, Indians resident in this Province are by law compelled to carry registration certificates. These documents contain very distinctive particulars of identification, including the right thumb impression of the holder.

Prior to the present War Indians returning to their Motherland on a visit required no passport or other document of identification. On their return to the Transvaal they might be required to produce their registration certificates, which, in terms of the law, are their warrant of right of entry and residence.

Since the outbreak of the present War Indians visiting the Motherland found that they were required to apply, at first, for a passport containing very full particulars of identification, including the photograph of the holder. Although the taking of such passports involved some trouble and also some expense, the community in general readily fell in with the requirement.

* No. 129.

† No. 130.

‡ No. 132.

§ Nos. 128 and 131.

Subsequently, however, a new type of form was submitted for completion by Indians returning home on a visit. This latter form contained certain clauses to which my Association took exception, chiefly on the ground that the said clauses appeared to impose conditions restricting the rights conferred by the taking out of the Asiatic registration certificate.

Protest was made accordingly to the Union Government, under the impression that a subtle attempt was being made to impose further restrictions, e.g., to compel return to the Transvaal within a limited period, failing which the absentee might have opened up the whole question of his right to re-enter and reside in this Province.

My Committee was astonished to learn that this new form originated with the Government of India, and that the Union Government was simply complying with the requirements of Indian Government.

My Committee was informed that the Union Government was, for its part, satisfied with the measure of identification comprised in the Asiatic registration certificate issued by it in terms of the law, but that the Government of India were not any longer requiring passports to be taken, but insisted upon what is styled a certificate of identification, containing very full personal particulars and having affixed a photograph of holder. Alternatively, so my Committee was informed, the Government of India required a photograph of the returning or visiting Indian to be affixed to his Asiatic registration certificate.

As you will probably be aware, the photograph as a form of identification has been consistently objected to by a large section of the community. This objection is particularly strong in the case of Indians professing Mahomedanism.

My Committee feels and submits very strongly that, seeing that the Asiatic registration certificate is found to be sufficient as a passport by the exclusive Government of the Union and the immigration authorities of this Province, it should be at least as effective as a check upon Indians returning to their own native land, and as good a proof of their identity and nationality. Any danger that might be feared of such registration certificates getting into wrong hands is easily guarded against by the fact that the certificates bear both the signature and thumb impression, as well as the name, height, and personal peculiarities of the lawful holder.

In view of the foregoing, I am directed to represent that the requirements of the Government of India appear to be unnecessarily severe, and that they involve inconvenience, delay, and expense, as well as being offensive, particularly in the matter of photographs, to a large and important section of the community.

My Committee further direct me to express the hope that you will use your powerful influence to get the present requirements dispensed with.

I have, &c.,

A. MCACHALIA,
Chairman.

MINUTE 384.

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 12th March, 1918.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minute No. 9/133/90, dated 20th February, 1918, relative to the issue of certificates of identity to Indians travelling to India, Ministers have the honour to refer to His Excellency's minute No. 9/133/90, dated 6th June, 1917, transmitting a notice issued by the Secretary of State for India intimating that no person over fifteen years of age would be permitted to land in India unless in possession of a valid passport, and to state that, in consequence, all persons (including Indians) proceeding to India from their Union were required to take out passports. By arrangement, however, with the Government of India, vide Minister's minute No. 1468, dated 10th September, 1917, and His Excellency's minute No. 9/133/90, of 5th December, 1917, the issue of passports by the Union Government to Indians was discontinued, the Government of India having agreed to accept, in lieu thereof, certificates of identity and/or registration certificates (Transvaal), provided that such certificates bore photographs in addition to the description of the holder. These certificates, without photographs, are provided for under section 25 (2) of the Immigrants Regulation Act, No. 22/1913, and No. 21 of the regulations thereunder, and under the Asiatics Registration Amendment Act, No. 36/1908 (Transvaal), respectively, and were, prior to the change of procedure, carried, in addition to a passport, by Indians proceeding to India.

Ministers would also refer to His Excellency's minute No. 9/133/90, dated 12th November, 1917, wherein the Viceroy of India notified that photographs are essential on all passports to India, irrespective of caste or sex.

In the fourth paragraph of the letter from the Chairman of the Transvaal British Indian Association it is stated that the community in general readily fell in with passport requirements, and, as these requirements included the furnishing of photographs, the present objection would not appear to be well founded.

With regard to the statement of the Association that the present requirements are unnecessarily severe, and involve inconvenience, delay and expense, Ministers would point out that the new arrangement is less severe, the expense is not so great, and that there need be no delay where the case is bona fide and the ordinary requirements of Government are met in a reasonable manner by members of the Asiatic community.

Enclosure 1 in No. 138.

P.O. Box 27, Gatooma, Southern Rhodesia,
14th May, 1918.

DEAR SIR,

I BEG to ask your most kind assistance in granting to me the following request.

I am an Indian (Hindoo), born in Bulawayo, and educated here also.

My mother was born in Johannesburg, and my uncle and other relations are all residing up to this date in the Transvaal. My mother came to Rhodesia in the year 1898; during that time I was born in Bulawayo, Rhodesia. I presume that my parents have visited Johannesburg about the year 1907. The permit was issued to my father as resident, father's name, son, and wife. Such permit I propose my father has in possession.

Sir, it's now nearly twenty years. I am all the time in Rhodesia. I would be glad to visit my people in Johannesburg and elsewhere; furthermore, I would like to visit other countries. I am well educated and sober; I have also good references from prominent people here; also I haven't done anything against the law up to this day. I am positive that every gentleman who knows me can recommend me that I have been honest and am still honest. I visited Cape Town in August, 1917, and was doing work when I received letter from my uncle from Johannesburg asking me to come and visit them. When I went to the Immigration Officer at Cape Town for visiting permit to Johannesburg they questioned me to how and when I came into the Colony. I stated the truth and filled up the visiting [form], which was sent to Pretoria, and answer returned in due course saying they will not allow me to go to Johannesburg, also not to reside in the Colony.

Sir, I am asking you your protection, and if need be I can prove that I have a good character here in Rhodesia, also I am sure some respectful gentlemen in Cape Town can also recommend me. I wrote once or twice to Pretoria Immigration Officer, and they will not give me permission.

My dear Sir, I am well educated, and there are also Indians who come from India straight to Johannesburg, and elsewhere, and they are allowed to reside in the Union; why should it be refused to me when I am a South African born Indian? also my mother was born in Johannesburg; and also all our relations are residing there; only for us it should be a step without reason and barring us to visit our people, and perhaps remain in the birth-place of my mother. My uncle's name is Dookhee Teli, P.O. Box 4980, Johannesburg; and others are in different parts of Johannesburg.

Should you require to know if my character is good or bad, I think the Criminal Investigation Department of Bulawayo can give you best information, otherwise my schoolmaster, Reverend F. L. Hadfield, Intini Mission, Bulawayo, Rhodesia. There are dozens of other names; if it is necessary I would name them.

I hope and trust, my protector and helper, that you may overlook this matter and consider why should I not visit my people, and also my mother, but mostly myself. I am sure to get work in Johannesburg as clerk; I was offered in different places, but the Immigration Officers are not doing me justice. I leave this matter into your hands to do me justice.

Anxiously hoping to receive your most favourable reply at your earliest,

I remain, &c.,

W. N. BABOO SINGH.

The High Commissioner,
Pretoria,
Transvaal.

(No. 1042.)

SIR, High Commissioner's Office, Pretoria, 19th June, 1918.
I AM directed by the High Commissioner to transmit to you a letter from W. N. Baboo Singh, an Indian, of Gatooma, who was born in Rhodesia, asking for assistance to enable him to enter the Transvaal for the purpose of visiting his relatives in Johannesburg, and endeavouring to secure work there.

I am also to enclose a copy of a letter from the Secretary, Department of No. 149: 10th June, 1918. Administrator, Salisbury, reporting on the character of the applicant.

His Excellency will be glad if the matter may be referred to Ministers for consideration of Baboo Singh's request.

SIR, Department of Administrator, Salisbury, 10th June, 1918.
WITH reference to your letter No. 134, of 30th May, forwarding a copy of a despatch from the High Commissioner regarding an application by W. N. Baboo Singh, an Indian, of Gatooma, for assistance in obtaining a permit to enable him to travel to the Transvaal, I have the honour to inform you that the Commissioner of Police reports that Baboo Singh is "a man of excellent character and highly spoken of on all sides."

(Minute No. 1117.)

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 5th July, 1918.
WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minute No. 15/904, dated 20th June, on the subject of the desire of W. N. Baboo Singh, an Indian, of Gatooma, to enter the Transvaal, Ministers have the honour to state that, in view of the provisions of the Immigrants Regulation Act, No. 22/1913, and of their policy not to add to the existing coloured and Asiatic population of the Union, they regret that they are unable to accede to this request.

LOUIS BOTHA.

Enclosure 4 in No. 138.

(No. 1042.)

SIR, High Commissioner's Office, Pretoria, 11th July, 1918.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 15/907, of the 8th instant, enclosing a copy of a Ministers' minute with reference to the application of W. N. Baboo Singh for permission to enter the Transvaal.

I am to inquire whether the objection felt by Ministers to adding to the existing Asiatic population of the Union would preclude the issue of a temporary permit to Baboo Singh under the provisions of section 25 (1) of Act No. 22 of 1913, in the event of his desiring only to visit his relatives in the Transvaal for a short period.

The Secretary
to the Governor-General,
Pretoria.

I have, &c.,
H. J. STANLEY,
Acting Imperial Secretary.

Enclosure 5 in No. 138.

(Minute No. 1221.)

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 23rd July, 1918.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minute No. 15/909, of the 13th July, 1918, forwarding copy of letter dated 11th idem from the Acting Imperial Secretary, Pretoria, on the subject of an application by W. N. Baboo Singh for permission to enter the Transvaal, Ministers have the honour to state that their policy of not adding to the existing coloured and Asiatic population of the Union precludes them from approving of the issue of a temporary permit to Baboo Singh under the provisions of section 25 (1) of the Immigrants Regulation Act, 1913 (No. 22 of 1913), in the event of his desiring only to visit his relatives in the Transvaal for a short period.

Ministers would add that this attitude is necessary owing to the difficulty hitherto experienced in getting such people to leave the Union once admission has been secured.

LOUIS BOTHA.

Enclosure 6 in No. 138.

(Southern Rhodesia. No. 1042.)

Sir, High Commissioner's Office, Pretoria, 3rd August, 1918.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatches, No. 210 of 14th June, and No. 258 of 25th July, respecting an application by W. N. Baboo Singh, an Indian, of Gatooma, for assistance in obtaining a permit to enable him to visit Johannesburg.

19th June, 1918.

From Ministers, No. 1117: 5th July, 1918.

To Secretary to Governor-General, No. 1042:
11th July, 1918.

From Ministers, No. 1221: 23rd July, 1918.

I enclose, for your information, a copy of correspondence which has passed with the Union Government upon the subject.

I shall be glad if Baboo Singh may be informed that this is a matter in which the decision rests with the Union Government; that his representations have been referred to Union Ministers for their consideration, and that in reply they have expressed their regret that they are unable to accede to his request.

As regards the letter of 11th July, from the applicant's solicitor to your Private Secretary, a copy of which accompanied your despatch No. 258, of 25th July, I have to request that Mr. Holderness may be furnished with a copy of your letter in the above terms to Baboo Singh, and informed that his letter is being communicated to Union Ministers, but that the information which it conveys had in essentials been brought to their notice before their decision was reached, and that a reconsideration of their attitude can hardly, therefore, be anticipated. Mr. Holderness will be aware that the discretion exercisable under sections 4 (1) (a) and 25 (1) of the Immigrants Regulation Act, No. 22 of 1913, is vested in the Minister concerned.

I have, etc.,

BUXTON,
High Commissioner.

I HAVE the honour to invite Your Excellency's attention to my letter of the 16th August, 1917, relative to the illicit immigration of Indians into the Union via Portuguese territory, and would be gratified to learn the result of Your Excellency's consideration of the matter.

In this connexion I have been asked by the Union Government to bring to your notice the fact that four Indians, respectively named Valli Mahomed, Hussein Ebrahim, Abdool Kadir, and Kana Dayal, who were deported from Durban for India by the s.s. "Taroba" in January last, landed at Delagoa Bay. It is reported that they were subsequently accommodated in Hajee Sukoor Machumba, where there were about fifty immigrants waiting the opportunity of proceeding to the Union.

I should be obliged if Your Excellency would be so good as to cause this matter to be investigated.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 6th December, 1918.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 905, of this date,* I have the honour to enclose a copy of the minute from my Ministers upon which the telegram of the 2nd October to His Majesty's Consul-General at Yokohama was based.

2. Upon the receipt of this minute I caused the attention of the Department concerned to be drawn to the terms of your Confidential despatch of the 9th August, 1917,† and an inquiry to be made as to the nature of the arrangement which appeared to have been entered into by the Union Government with the Japanese Vice-Consul.

3. I understand that about two or three years ago the Department of the Interior agreed with the Japanese Consul at Cape Town to allow the conditional entry of Japanese immigrants to the Union on temporary permit, provided that such immigrants were able to comply with the provisions of the immigration laws respecting the educational test and money deposits. These temporary permits were for specific periods, and were in each case granted on the recommendation of the Japanese Consul. Steps were taken to ensure that the conditions attached to the permits were adhered to, and that undue advantage was not taken of the privilege.

4. As I informed you in my despatch No. 526, of 30th June, 1917,‡ Ministers contemplated going beyond this arrangement, but I gather that upon the receipt of your despatch Confidential of the 9th August, 1917, the intention was abandoned and the practice previously in force was continued.

Oyama and S. Matsubara, to South Africa from Japan to purchase carbonate of soda, Ministers have the honour to state that there would be no objection to the admission, on temporary permit, under the Immigration Regulations, of these two men, subject to the recommendation of the Japanese Vice-Consul, Cape Town, first being obtained, in terms of an arrangement with him.

Ministers would also be glad to be furnished with the name of the port and expected date of arrival in the Union of Messrs. Oyama and Matsubara, and to state that it is desired, if possible, they should land at the port of Cape Town or Durban, and not enter via Delagoa Bay.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions No. 258, of the 25th of April,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of Your Ministers, the accompanying extracts† from the Proceedings of the Imperial War Conference, as revised, on the subject of the demobilization of the Dominion contingents.

I have, &c.,

Note.—This despatch was followed by a certain amount of correspondence with the Dominion Governments on various aspects of the demobilization problem. This correspondence, however, raised no new point of principle, and, therefore, is not included here. The whole question of demobilization was further discussed at the Imperial War Conference, 1918. See pages 137 to 148 of Dominions No. 69, and Resolution No. XVII of the 1918 Conference.

RESOLUTION II.: UNIFORMITY OF EQUIPMENT.

That this Conference, recognizing the importance of assimilating as far as possible the military stores and equipment of the Imperial forces throughout the Empire, recommends that an expert Committee representative of the military authorities of the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India be appointed as early as possible to consider the various patterns in use with a view to selecting standard patterns for general adoption as far as the special circumstances of each country admit.

RESOLUTION III.: TRAINING OF ORDNANCE PERSONNEL.

This Conference is of opinion that it is desirable that the ordnance personnel of the military organizations of the Empire should, as far as possible, be trained on the same methods and according to the same principles, and that to secure this end selected officers of the ordnance service from all parts of the Empire should be attached for adequate periods to the Imperial Ordnance Department.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 2nd October, 1917.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions No. 491, of the 30th July,† I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Army Council state, as regards resolution No. II. passed by the Imperial War Conference, that they do not consider it advisable to constitute a committee, during the War, to consider the question of assimilating military stores, equipment, etc., throughout the Empire, though they consider that after the War such a committee should be very useful.

* See extracts from pages 15-23, 27-37, 253-6, of Dominions No. 62.

† No. 2.

2. As regards resolution No. III., relating to the training of ordnance personnel, the Army Council offer the following observations:—Officers of the Imperial service who successfully pass the course at the Ordnance College (details concerning which are set out in paragraphs 738 to 743 of the King's Regulations) thereby become eligible for employment with the Army Ordnance Department, and as vacancies occur therein they are filled by selection from officers so qualified.

3. Such officers are on appointment posted to stations where, under the supervision of the senior departmental officers, they are led to apply the principles acquired at the college to the everyday working of the Department.

4. At the end of seven years' employment with the Department they become eligible for permanent transfer thereto. It will thus be seen that the training of an Imperial ordnance officer before permanent transfer consists of about one year's academical study and of seven years' practical work.

5. As regards the application of this comprehensive training to the Dominion officers, who, in the terms of the resolution of the Conference, may be selected to undergo it, the Army Council state that they are of opinion that the college course should normally be regarded as an essential condition; and they would be fully prepared to arrange for the subsequent attachment to the Army Ordnance Department of any Dominion officer successfully completing that course. The duration of such attachment would appear to be a question to be settled with the military authorities of each Dominion, and to depend upon the length of time during which the officers in question could be spared from their duties in the Dominion.

The Council feel, however, that one year's attachment—over and above the college course—should be regarded as the minimum calculated to ensure a sound acquaintance with the Imperial procedure.

6. The Army Council state that a few vacancies for Dominion officers at the Ordnance College courses are always available, but, as it may be difficult at the present time to arrange for their attendance at these courses, the Army Council are fully prepared to arrange for the attachment of such officers to the Army Ordnance Department, both at home and in the field, for practical work and instruction, as, indeed, several are at the present time. In this connexion it is suggested that, if the authorities of the Dominion forces will communicate with the Director of Equipment and Ordnance Stores at the War Office, the necessary arrangements in detail can be made.

7. The Army Council add that the training necessary should also be applied to technical branches, such as inspectors of ordnance machinery, assistant inspectors of armourers, armament artificers, armourers, laboratory foremen, etc., for whose training courses and practical work can be arranged

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a memorandum on naval defence drawn up by the Admiralty. This memorandum was put down for discussion at the Imperial War Conference, but, at the meeting of 24th July, as will be seen from the extract† enclosed, it appeared that it was the wish of the Conference that the memorandum should not be discussed in the Conference, but should be discussed directly with the Admiralty. The Prime Minister of Canada subsequently consulted the Prime Ministers of the other Dominions on the subject, and I enclose a copy of a letter from Sir R. Borden to the First Lord of the Admiralty informing him of the result of the consultation. The matter is receiving the further consideration of the Admiralty.

MEMORANDUM.

THE Dominion Ministers, having considered the Admiralty memorandum of 17th May, 1918, on the naval defence of the British Empire, which was circulated to the Imperial War Conference, 1918, submit the following conclusions and observations.

1. The proposals set forth in the Admiralty memorandum for a single navy at all times under a central naval authority are not considered practicable.

2. Purely from the standpoint of naval strategy the reasons thus put forward for the establishment of a single navy for the Empire, under a central naval authority, are strong but not unanswerable. The experience gained in this war has shown that in time of war a Dominion Navy (e.g., that of Australia) can operate with the highest efficiency as part of a united navy under one direction and command established after the outbreak of war.

3. It is thoroughly recognized that the character of construction, armament and equipment, and the methods and principles of training, administration, and organization should proceed upon the same lines in all the navies of the Empire. This policy has already been followed in those Dominions which have established naval forces.

4. For this purpose the Dominions would welcome visits from a highly qualified representative of the Admiralty, who, by reason of his ability and experience, would be thoroughly competent to advise the naval authorities of the Dominions in such matters.

5. As naval forces come to be developed upon a considerable scale by the Dominions it may be necessary hereafter to consider the establishment for war purposes of some supreme naval authority upon which each of the Dominions would be adequately represented.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 3rd January, 1919.

WITH reference to my Secret despatch of the 16th October,* regarding the naval defence of the Empire, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of instructions drawn up by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, who, in accordance with invitations already received, has been deputed by their Lordships to visit Canada, Australia, and New Zealand early in the present year to advise in regard to naval matters.

Instructions for Lord Jellicoe.

1. THE Admiralty have had under their consideration the invitation contained in the memorandum of 15th August from the Dominion Ministers,* stating that the Dominions would welcome visits from a highly qualified representative of the Admiralty for purposes of advice.

2. Whilst the Admiralty do not depart from their declared views as to what would be the most effective scheme of naval defence of the Empire, they cordially recognize that the main object of this invitation is the promotion of uniformity in naval organization and training and types of naval material throughout the Empire, with a view to efficient naval co-operation.

3. They therefore propose to depute Lord Jellicoe to visit the Dominions to advise the Dominion authorities whether, in the light of the experience of the War, the scheme of naval organization which has been adopted, or may be in contemplation, requires reconsideration, either from the point of view of the efficiency of that organization for meeting local needs, or from that of ensuring the greatest possible homogeneity and co-operation between all the naval forces of the Empire.

4. Should Dominion authorities desire to consider how far it is possible for the Dominion to take a more effective share in the naval defence of the Empire, he will give assistance from the naval point of view in drawing up a scheme for consideration.

Lord Jellicoe proposes to spend about six weeks at South Africa, and a day at Delagoa Bay; returning via the Suez Canal or the Cape, and arriving in England probably about the 1st May, 1920; the return route to be governed by the date on which the work in South Africa is completed. Should the mission, and consequently the date of leaving Delagoa Bay, be delayed, for any reasons, so far ahead as the month of May, the return to England by the east coast of Africa would not be taken; and in these circumstances the return would be made via the Cape, St. Helena, Ascension, and St. Vincent.

SIR, Admiralty, 30th January, 1920.

I AM commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that the question of Dominion naval co-operation has been more fully investigated at the Admiralty in the light of recent events, particularly in regard to the need for universal economy. It has become evident that further discussion of Lord Jellicoe's reports on the Naval Defence of Australia, New Zealand, and Canada will be necessary with a view to co-ordinating the Naval effort of the Empire. The Admiralty, who have not yet received the views of the Dominion Governments on Lord Jellicoe's reports* would therefore welcome the opportunity of a discussion with the representatives of the Dominions who are responsible for Naval policy, and their Naval Advisers, on the question of Dominion Navies and Dominion Naval co-operation in the defence of the Empire. It would be convenient if the proposed discussion could take place when all Dominion representatives are present together, and a favourable opportunity would appear to be the next occasion of an Imperial Conference. I am to inquire whether the Secretary of State for the Colonies concurs.

2. A letter in a similar sense is being sent to the India Office.

I am, &c.,

W. F. NICHOLSON.

The Under Secretary of State,
Colonial Office.

* Note.—The various volumes of Lord Jellicoe's Reports are set out under the communications from Canada, Australia, and New Zealand referring to them. Only the published volumes were exchanged, in 1920, between the Dominion Governments, as the Admiralty expressed the view that there might be a certain danger of misconception and leakage (22620/S/20) which would not be incurred if the Reports were discussed in Conference.

I submitted the matter to Ministers for consideration, and have now had from the Prime Minister a communication expressing his concurrence in the opinion that the most convenient time for the discussion of the subject would be when all the Dominion representatives are present at the next Imperial Conference.

3. Mr. Squires further suggests that in any scheme of naval defence Newfoundland should receive special consideration, seeing that so many cables land on her shores, and she is, with wireless stations for the help of shipping, situated in a favourable position for a naval base.

MINUTE 430.

MINISTERS have the honour to state, with reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Secret Minute No. 2/1366, of 20th March, 1920, that they note that the Admiralty wish to defer consideration of Dominion naval co-operation until the next occasion of an Imperial Conference affords an opportunity for discussion with Dominion representatives.

Ministers desire to observe that they have not had the benefit of any expert naval advice on this subject as affecting the Union of South Africa, and are at present unable to formulate their views.

Ministers anticipate, however, that His Majesty's Government will in due course favour them with a further communication setting forth the aspects of the question which His Majesty's Government may wish the Union Government to consider.

FOLLOWING from my Prime Minister. Begin: Commonwealth Government, having given most serious consideration to defence, finds itself in difficulties. In the first place Australia is, in common with all other countries, circumscribed by financial considerations. This applies equally to military and naval defence schemes. The limitations imposed by finance are, at all events for the time being, insurmountable. But Commonwealth Government, quite apart from this consideration, finds itself unable to say how moneys available for naval defence can best be utilized. It is groping in the dark. For example it does not know whether Britain approves the whole or any part of Lord Jellicoe's scheme, nor in regard to this or any naval policy has it any information as to the intentions of New Zealand, South Africa or Canada. In the circumstances we feel, therefore, that we cannot decide in which direction we should move, and would be glad to have the views on the matter of the British Government and the Admiralty. Clearly, if the question of naval defence of the Empire is to be considered next year at the Imperial Conference, Commonwealth ought not to take such steps in interim as would or might be inconsistent with such policy. Will you let us know, therefore, the views of the British Government on Imperial Defence policy for the Pacific. Ends.—FERGUSON.

REFERRING to the following extract from Lord Jellicoe's Report to the Commonwealth Government, which appears on page 243 of Volume IV:—

"In chapter 8, Volume II, it is recommended that a committee should be appointed immediately to inquire into the provision of Fleet stores.

"The distribution and transfer of these stores to meet war requirements are equally of vital importance, and it is recommended that the Naval Board should, at the same time, investigate this problem and make proposals to the Admiralty for joint action in the supply of stores to Far Eastern Fleet."

I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to ask that your Lordship will be good enough to cause the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to be approached with a view to consideration being given to the question of the supply of stores to the Far Eastern Fleet in time of war, in order that arrangements may be made in Australia to meet with the wishes of the Admiralty, as far as possible.

REFERRING to your telegrams 3rd of July and 7th of August,‡ His Majesty's Government hope to forward Memorandum on Imperial Naval Defence to Commonwealth Government at an early date.

Following is outline of position in Canada, New Zealand, and Union of South Africa according to latest available information:—

1. Canada.—It has been announced in Canadian Parliament that decided to defer at present action in regard to adoption of permanent naval policy for Canada, in view of Canada's heavy financial commitments, of the fact that Great Britain has not yet decided on her permanent naval policy and of approaching Imperial Conference at which question of naval defence of Empire will come up for discussion. Canadian Government has, however, accepted two torpedo boat destroyers and one light cruiser presented by Admiralty to take place of present obsolete and useless training ships "Rainbow" and "Niobe." Vessels acquired by Canadian Government will be manned exclusively by Canadian officers, except senior officers on light cruiser. Crews will consist of men recruited from Imperial Navy up to about two-thirds of complement, remainder being recruited in Canada. Canadian Government have accepted also two modern submarines presented by Admiralty.

2. New Zealand.—For financial reasons New Zealand Government has decided for the present to adopt Report of Lord Jellicoe only to following extent:—

(a) Acquire light cruiser "Chatham," which has been presented by Admiralty.

(b) Fit "Philomel" for training ship.

Maintenance of "Chatham" estimated to cost £172,000 per annum.

Confidential. Begins: There is no recent information here as to how far New Zealand naval policy announced in Parliament, and it is suggested that inquiries should be made of New Zealand Government. Ends.

3. Union of South Africa.—No policy yet formulated.

Pending discussion at Imperial Conference Admiralty make following suggestions as regards utilization for naval purposes of any moneys made available by Commonwealth Parliament:—

Ships.—"Australia" of great value for training purposes, but she is expensive to maintain, and it is for consideration whether she could not be placed in reserve and used for training purposes only, efforts being at present concentrated on maintenance in commission of remainder of Squadron and construction of submarines and light cruisers. Not recommended to construct ships in connexion with naval aircraft work as best types to develop still in experimental stage.

Aircraft.—Reconnaissance machines for flying-off from light cruisers and for work from shore bases recommended.

Bases.—Development of Port Stephens suggested to meet requirements of Australian Navy, which may eventually contain capital ships.

Personnel.—Training to be continued to meet fleet requirements.

Fuel.—Suggested that start should be made towards provision of large reserves of oil fuel which will be eventually necessary.

Stores.—Ultimate aim should be for Australia to be self-supporting in regard to munitions and other naval stores. Interchangeability of stores and munitions between all portions of Imperial fleet extremely desirable.—MILNER.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 19th October, 1917.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, revised copies of the proceedings at the Imperial War Conference dealing with the question of temptations to oversea soldiers.* Since the discussions took place His Majesty's Government have given most careful consideration to the best means of carrying out Resolution XXIV, passed by the Conference. The question was further discussed recently at an interdepartmental conference in London, which was attended by representatives of the Home Office, War Office, Colonial Office, and the Metropolitan Police.

2. According to information laid before this conference, the rate of admissions to hospitals in India for venereal disease steadily declined from 154.3 per thousand in 1905 to 52.5 in 1913. In the United Kingdom the annual admission rates in the Army during the same period were as follows:—

	Rate per thousand.
1906	81.8
1907	71.9
1908	68.4
1909	66.0
1910	65.5
1911	60.5

So far as the period of the War is concerned, the figures for the whole period August, 1914-June, 1917, show the rate of admissions to military hospitals for venereal disease to be thirty-four per thousand per annum. In France the admission rate in the British Army is approximately twenty-four per thousand per annum, and in Egypt thirty-two per thousand. These figures, which are supplied by the Army Medical Department, cover all troops, Regulars, Territorials, and oversea troops combined. They are necessarily approximate, and some allowance must be made for the fact that the number of admissions has recently been reduced by the introduction of salvarsan treatment, but there appears to be no doubt that the marked decrease in the incidence of venereal diseases, which has been continuous for many years in this country and in India, has not been interrupted by the War.

3. It has not been found possible at present for the Army Medical Department to show the figures for each class of troops separately, but Lieutenant-Colonel L. W. Harrison, Lecturer on Venereal Diseases and Officer in Charge of the Military Hospital, Rochester Row, London, stated to the Conference that, from personal inquiry at the offices of the various oversea contingents, he had ascertained that the rates per thousand for the Australian, New Zealand, and Canadian troops in this country during the first six months of 1917 were respectively 144, 134.2, and 49.2 per annum.

4. The incidence of venereal disease, at any rate among the Australian and New Zealand troops, appears, therefore, to be disappointingly and disproportionately high, and this was attributed to their high pay, to the opportunities given them, on landing and before going to the front, of spending their leave in large towns, and to the fact that, unlike their British fellow soldiers, they have no opportunity of spending their leave at their homes.

5. The difficulties of combating the evil by disciplinary measures or by exercising the powers provided by the Defence of the Realm Regulations No. 35 (c) were explained in detail at the Conference. Women are already excluded from camps, but the soldiers resort to towns in the neighbourhood, and are often infected, not by known and regular prostitutes, with whom it might be possible to deal, but by women outwardly respectable, only occasionally immoral, and therefore beyond the reach of repressive regulations. For this and other reasons it was thought that a general application of Regulation 35 (c) was quite impracticable. It was further held to be impossible to place London or other centres of population out of bounds for soldiers on leave. A special restriction of this kind upon oversea troops seemed even more objectionable. To make such a distinction between oversea and British soldiers would be invidious, and, even if such an order were issued in regard to oversea troops, its enforcement would be very difficult and would give rise to disciplinary troubles of a serious character.

6. The question of compulsory segregation and medical treatment of women known to be infected was also considered by the Conference, but did not appear to be a possible remedy. No such system could be established in this country without encountering great opposition in Parliament and elsewhere on the ground that it would mean a revival of the Contagious Diseases Acts. Moreover, even if it could be established, it would merely palliate the evil, because the difficulty of dealing with the amateur prostitute would be almost as great as it is now.

7. The recent experience of the opposition to the Criminal Law Amendment Bill has shown that there would be no less difficulty in inducing Parliament to increase the severity of the punishments for prostitutes plying their trade in the streets, and, even if this could be done, the difficulty of distinguishing the prostitutes, and the prevalence of disease among women who are not prostitutes, would limit the usefulness of such a measure to a very small compass.

8. In these circumstances the best hope of improving the present state of matters appeared to the Conference to lie in developing the agencies which already exist for educating both the civil and military population and warning them against the dangers of venereal disease, for treating persons affected before they communicate the evil to others, and for the provision of prophylactic measures against infection.

9. In the Army much is already being done by means of lectures to instruct the soldiers in sexual hygiene and to warn them of the risk to which they may be exposed. Up to June, 1917, 1,648 lectures had been given to 1,270,062 troops by selected lecturers under arrangements made by the National Council for combating Venereal Disease.

The Army Council have further, on the recommendation of their Advisory Committee on the Army Chaplaincy services, authorized the delivery of a series of special addresses on purity at the military centres in the United Kingdom. These lectures have been attended by large bodies of troops, and it is hoped to extend their scope in the future. In addition, opportunities for recreation and games of all kinds for soldiers have been multiplied in order to keep the men healthily engaged.

10. It should also be mentioned that a soldier in the Imperial Forces loses his corps or proficiency pay for time during which he is inefficient on account of venereal disease, and the hospital stoppage of 7d. per day (officers 2s. 6d.) charged under paragraph 73 of the Allowance Regulations is not remitted as is done in the case of soldiers admitted for other diseases.

Concealment of venereal disease is a military crime.

11. As regards treatment, the system now in force is described in the War Office circular,* of which a copy is enclosed herewith.

Specially qualified officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps and civil profession have been appointed in centres where treatment can be carried out, and special hospitals fully equipped with all that is necessary have been established where soldiers requiring hospital treatment for venereal diseases can receive it.

Courses of instruction in the treatment of these diseases have been arranged, given by expert officers to general medical practitioners, and large numbers of the latter have taken advantage of them. It may be added that the scheme of treatment for venereal disease is regulated from one centre, and definite standards of cure must be satisfied before the patient is discharged.

12. As regards venereal disease amongst the civil population, I enclose copies of the Venereal Diseases Act of 1917* and of a memorandum† furnished by the Local Government Board setting out the administrative and other action taken to combat the disease. It will be seen from these papers that both official and unofficial propaganda has been undertaken, and there is no doubt that much valuable work is being done, both in spreading information and educating the people, and also in treatment of actual cases.

13. Your Ministers will see from the account given above that His Majesty's Government are making every effort not only to cope with the existing evil, but to bring about a more enlightened state of public feeling on the subject of venereal disease.

As regards the case of the oversea troops, His Majesty's Government fully sympathize with the representations made at the Imperial War Conference, and they are most anxious to do anything further in their power to diminish the prevalence of venereal disease. They have felt bound to set out fully in this despatch the difficulties which exist in taking special measures, but they would most gladly welcome any suggestions which your Ministers may be able to make for effecting improvement.

I have, &c.,

(No. 200.)

MY LORD,

Ottawa, 31st March, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of an approved minute of the Privy Council for Canada laying down certain principles which underlie the organization of an Air Force in Canada.

As you will observe, my Government are anxious to obtain an arrangement with the Air Ministry releasing officers of the Canadian Air Force who are also on the reserve of the Royal Air Force from their obligations in the latter capacity in so far as these might interfere with any duties they may be required to perform in the former. It is suggested that this arrangement might take the form of an undertaking by the Air Ministry not to call upon the officers of the Canadian Air Force to perform any duty as officers of the Royal Air Force without first obtaining the approval of the Canadian Government to such officers being seconded for such duty. The names of the officers on the reserve of the Royal Air Force, who are commissioned in the Canadian Air Force, would be notified to the Air Ministry in order that it may have full information of the cases in which the dual obligation may exist.

I have, &c.,

W. H. DAVIES,
Administrator.

Enclosure in No. 58.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 18TH FEBRUARY, 1920.

(P.C. 395.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 29th November, 1919, from the Honourable Arthur L. Sifton, Chairman of the Air Board, stating that the Board has had under consideration the general principles which should underlie the organization of an Air Force in Canada and, in accordance with the decisions reached, submitting the following observations and recommendations:—

If Canada is again obliged to engage in war, it will be necessary for her to rely upon an air force as well as upon land and sea forces, and the longer the period intervening before the commencement of such a war, the greater will probably be the importance of the air force by comparison with these other forces.

The maintenance in the air of aircraft is and will remain expensive, and it is consequently essential that every hour of flying done with a view to war strength should tend directly to serve that purpose. Casual and superficial training must be rigidly avoided.

War strength in the air depends not only upon very expensive and highly technical equipment, but upon the exercise both in the air and on the ground of a high degree of special skill. The equipment, unlike artillery equipment, very rapidly deteriorates even if unused. The skill, unlike almost all other military skill, is capable in a large measure of useful exercise in peace.

War flying requires a mental and physical condition seldom found in men much beyond their youth, and there should be very few men in a military air force who are beyond the average efficient age for war flying.

In an exclusively military air force, flying not yielding a high return in military preparedness would be almost impossible to prevent, and the profession of a military air force officer would be a "blind alley" profession from which he must be compelled to retire at a comparatively early age. Further, a professional military air force must, by reason of its cost, be so small as to be almost negligible in war, since war strength in the air will, as in other branches, depend primarily upon numbers. These difficulties and objections weigh so strongly against a purely military air force as to practically exclude resort to it.

Some, but not all of them, might be met by the employment of air force officers and airmen on useful civil duties, such as mail carrying and surveying, but these duties can be as well, or better, carried on as civil services, and uncertainty on the point of the primary or ultimate purpose of an organization always results in confusion and inefficiency.

It follows, therefore, that war strength in the air must ultimately depend upon civil or commercial air strength; that most of the members of a war air force must normally pursue peaceful occupations (preferably, but not necessarily, in connexion with air navigation), that war formations should exist only upon paper and not in the form of embodied units, and that war training should be periodic, intensive, and widespread.

Such war training, which must include instruction in the use of many types of machines and complicated and various technical equipment, should be carried on at well organized and thoroughly equipped training stations. At least a small part of the staff at such stations would necessarily be continuously employed, but the size of this professional nucleus must be kept within the narrowest possible limits, partly on account of the expense involved not only for the pay but also for the pension of its members, and partly because it cannot in Canada be made large enough to offer to the best type of young man a sufficiently attractive career.

In peace even the instructional and administrative personnel at the training stations should consequently, with the fewest exceptions, be civilians temporarily assuming military duty. It is obvious that this would result in a lower peace efficiency than if a more numerous permanent professional military personnel were relied upon, but peace efficiency is not the primary consideration. A war organization so constituted as to be comparatively inefficient in peace, but reasonably efficient in war, is very greatly to be preferred to a war organization which shows a high degree of efficiency in peace but breaks down when it is called upon for war service.

It is the opinion of the Governor in Council that, once trained, both officers and airmen would retain their efficiency if they underwent further training during one month in every twenty-four, or, in other words, that the air force as a whole would be maintained in a sufficient state of efficiency if one twenty-fourth of its total authorized non-professional strength was always on duty.

It is not possible to define with definiteness the number of professional military officers and airmen whose employment would be required for the maintenance of a reasonably efficient peace administration, but it is thought that this should not exceed twelve to each training station, with an even smaller number at headquarters.

There are other uncertain factors to be considered in making an estimate of the annual expense involved in keeping trained personnel in a reasonable state of efficiency. The expenditure on stations and equipment for use only in war will, of course, depend upon strategical considerations and upon policy. The cost of the recruitment of all ranks of the air force will depend upon the development of aviation generally.

For the purpose of the initial constitution of an air force in Canada, there are understood to be in Canada more than 12,000 officers and airmen who have served overseas with the Royal Air Force, and a large additional number who have served only in Canada.

In view of the considerations above set forth, and for the purpose of laying a foundation for the organization of a Canadian Air Force on the general lines indicated, the Minister, at the instance of the Air Board, recommends that Your Excellency in Council

- (a) Authorize the publication of an invitation to former officers and airmen of the Royal Air Force to offer their services as members of the Canadian Air Force, on the footing that they will, in peace, not ordinarily be called upon for active duty for more than five weeks in any two years (including time spent travelling to and from training centres), that they will receive pay only for the time so spent on active duty, and that the term of enlistment of airmen will be four years.

- (b) Authorize steps to be taken looking towards the administration of the Canadian Air Force through provincial Air Force Associations, of which the Lieutenant-Governor of each province be asked to act as Honorary President, the duties of each such association being, among other things, to maintain the paper war formations of the Canadian Air Force in its province, to keep a roster of the officers and airmen belonging to them, and to select the individuals in turn for their tour of training, each association to receive a small grant to meet the cost of a secretary and office accommodation.
- (c) Authorize negotiations to be entered into with the Air Ministry looking to an arrangement whereby officers of the Canadian Air Force who are also on the Reserve of the Royal Air Force will be released from their obligations in the latter capacity in so far as these might interfere with any duties they may be required to perform with the former.

The Committee, concurring in the foregoing, submit the above recommendations for Your Excellency's approval, and advise that the requisite authority be granted accordingly.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU.
Clerk of the Privy Council.

SECRET. My Ministers' attention has been given to future naval and military defence of the South African coast and harbours and ocean trade routes round Southern Africa. This question forms part of larger problem of Imperial defence. While it is recognized by Ministers that any scheme of Imperial defence must depend for the future on the nature of the Peace settlement and the international position at the time, which factors are still obscure, they assume that whole question will at an early date necessarily be reconsidered in the light of the new conditions brought about by the War, and especially by the defeat of Germany and the removal of the menace which was associated with German tacit colonization. Ministers trust on these grounds that His Majesty's Government will take advantage of the presence in London of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Defence for the Union to discuss those aspects of naval and military defence which more particularly concern the Union. It is added by Ministers that they trust that, in view of importance to the Union of the considerations of policy and finance which are bound up with this question, a discussion such as they have suggested may take place at the earliest moment at which His Majesty's Government consider it is likely to lead to a settlement consistent with general security.—BUXTON.

6TH SEPTEMBER. Very urgent. I have been informed by the General Officer Commanding Cape Town that he has been notified by the War Office in a telegram numbered 24,616/A.G.I. of the 27th of August, that they propose, whenever the shipping situation allows, to despatch for garrison purposes at Cape of Good Hope a body consisting of Royal Engineers, Cheshire Regiment, and others, amounting in all to about 1,000 men.

From a consultation which I have had with General Smuts it appears that the War Office did not consult him or General Botha regarding the question of the garrison here. The Union Government will certainly feel bound to make some representations on the general question of garrison here to the Imperial Government, and, at all events, they desire to have time to consider the whole question before any definite step is taken. If serious difficulties are not to arise it is therefore quite essential that the War Office should not take any action in preparing to send, much less in sending, troops here, until you hear further from my Ministers. The War Office should further instruct the General Officer Commanding to postpone making preparations for the accommodation of infantry at Wynberg.—BUXTON.

11TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. Very urgent.

Referring to my telegram 6th September* as to garrison, following is substance of Ministers' minute commenting on telegram from War Office to General Officer Commanding South African Military Command of 27th August:—

Begins:—This is first notification received by Ministers of the proposal to send Imperial troops to the Cape Peninsula immediately to take over garrison duties there.

Ministers intimated in their Secret minute March 13th (see my telegram 17th March)† that they were anxious that His Majesty's Government should discuss with the Union Prime Minister and the Minister of Defence, who were at that time in Europe, the future arrangements for naval and military defence of South African coasts and harbours. No opportunity apparently presented itself for any discussion which led to conclusions on any points including the important one of the defence of the Cape Peninsula.

Ministers feel that it would in any case be inopportune under present circumstances to prejudge the issues involved by re-establishing the pre-War position of the Cape Peninsula Garrison Regular Imperial troops until the Union Government and His Majesty's Government have exchanged views, and have arrived at definite conclusions on problem as a whole.

The early return of even a portion of the Imperial garrison would, moreover, present certain practical difficulties and create considerable embarrassment locally. The problem of the employment of returned soldiers, specially enlisted for garrison duty in Union Defence Forces would be rendered more acute, and the very grave shortage of housing accommodation which exists would be most materially accentuated, while the pressure on the available shipping for returning soldiers and other South Africans would be materially increased.

There are also highly important constitutional political aspects involved, upon which Ministers at this juncture, during special session of the Union Parliament, do not feel that they are in a position to state attitude of Union Government, and they would not, moreover, be able to do so until after full consultation with His Majesty's Government.

Ministers, in these circumstances, earnestly request that any proposals to send Imperial troops to the Cape Peninsula may be held in abeyance until such consultation has taken place and a course of action has been agreed upon covering the general scheme.—Ends.—Buxton.

Local conditions as regards housing, garrison duty, returned soldiers, and pressure on shipping constitute a very real drawback to any immediate despatch of troops here, and are not exaggerated.

They would appear to constitute quite sufficient grounds if it is necessary to give any public reason for delay.—Buxton.

My Lord,

Downing Street, 10th October, 1919.

With reference to my telegram of the 7th October,† informing you that no Imperial troops have been ordered to the Cape, and that no such orders will be issued by the Army Council without consultation with myself and with your Government, I have the honour to request you to explain to your Ministers that all that is being done at present is to maintain the existing Imperial garrison, consisting of Commander, Staff, and technical personnel only, and that there is no suggestion that any increase should be made. I assume that your Government has no objection to this course.

A decision is not urgent, as it is doubtful whether there is any necessity for the naval base to be prepared to resist external attack for some years to come. When it has been possible to formulate the defence requirements of the Cape Peninsula in accordance with modern conditions, the respective responsibilities of the Imperial and Union Governments can be discussed.

Meanwhile, the Army Council is acting on the assumption that no Imperial troops will be required in the future in any other part of the territory of the Union. I trust that this is in accordance with your Ministers' views.

15TH OCTOBER. With reference to your telegram 7th October,‡ garrison, I am glad to receive assurance from Army Council. I must point out, however, that War Office definitely stated in their telegram to General Officer Commanding, Cape Town, of 27th August, that certain named troops, including Cheshire Regiment, were "available for your Command, and will be despatched as soon as shipping situation permits." My telegram 6th September,* therefore, was fully justified.—Buxton.

MINUTE 1664.

MINISTERS have the honour to state, with reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Secret minute 1/1142 of the 12th November, 1919, that they have noted with much satisfaction the terms of the Secretary of State's Secret despatch of 10th October, 1919, forwarded under cover of that minute.

2. Ministers are glad to learn that there is no suggestion to increase at present the cadre of the existing Imperial garrison of the Cape Peninsula.

3. They propose to continue to provide at Union expense a small infantry force, consisting of not less than 300 of all ranks, for guard and other duties, together with a small supply and transport service, but would be glad if arrangements could be made at the earliest possible date which would enable the present details of the Cape Garrison Artillery (101 all ranks) and Cape Fortress Engineers (50 all ranks) to be demobilized. These units are not permanent, and should be demobilized at once. It will be very difficult to get any of these men to extend their service voluntarily or to replace them by trained men. The artillery, search-lights, and communication machinery and equipment of the fortress can then be maintained in proper condition, under the supervision of such trained details of Royal Garrison Artillery and Royal Engineers, as are now available in the Peninsula, assisted, if necessary, by men detailed from the Union infantry unit.

In view of the improbability referred to in the second paragraph of the Secretary of State's despatch, Ministers trust that this course will be feasible and commend itself to His Majesty's Government on the grounds of economy, which is urgently desired, even though this may involve laying up and putting out of immediate working order some portion of the armament and machinery, at all events until the future defence requirements of the Peninsula can be formulated and the respective responsibilities of the Imperial and Union Governments have been discussed and settled.

5. With regard to the last paragraph of the Secretary of State's despatch Ministers consider that for the future no Imperial troops will be required in any other part of the territory of the Union.

SIR,

War Office, London, S.W.1, 12th February, 1920

I AM commanded by the Army Council to acknowledge receipt of your letter No. C.R.S.A./19433A, of 8th January, 1920, on the subject of post bellum garrison in South Africa.

2. The question of the future garrison of South Africa has been engaging the attention of the Army Council during the past year, in consultation with the Colonial Office, and the present position is as follows:—

- (a) It has been decided that a garrison of Imperial troops will not be required in the future in the interior of South Africa
- (b) It has been decided that the existing Imperial garrison of the Cape Peninsula shall be maintained for the present, but that no increase shall be made.

* No. 74.

- (c) Discussion of the respective responsibilities of the Imperial and Union Governments as regards the defence of the Cape Peninsula in future is being deferred for the present.

3. In these circumstances I am to inform you that the Army Council propose to maintain for the present in your command the existing Imperial garrison only, consisting of Commander, staff, and a few technical troops.

The detailed establishment of this garrison is now being drawn up and will be forwarded to you later. The total will probably not exceed that already notified to you in War Office letter No. 79/South Africa/171 (Q.M.G.5), of 15th November, viz., thirty-one officers and seventy-nine other ranks.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 17th December, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the consideration of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a memorandum on the subject of loans, attachments, and interchanges between individuals belonging to the military forces of the Empire.

This memorandum, which has been brought up to date, is similar in principle to that issued in 1910, copies of which were enclosed in Lord Crewe's Confidential despatch of the 17th of September, 1910.*

I shall be glad to receive at an early date any comments which your Ministers may desire to offer upon it.

Enclosure in No. 77.

(Confidential.)

MEMORANDUM ON THE SUBJECT OF LOANS, ATTACHMENTS, AND INTERCHANGES BETWEEN INDIVIDUALS BELONGING TO THE MILITARY FORCES OF THE EMPIRE.

(Amended to November, 1919.)

1. It was customary for many years before the Great War for the Home Government to lend officers of the regular army to the Governments of the oversea Dominions to serve in various capacities with the local forces.

With the initiation of the Imperial General Staff in 1908 the system was largely developed, and in August, 1910, a memorandum on the subject was drawn up by the Chief of the Imperial General Staff (Sir William Nicholson). This memorandum formed the basis of the arrangements in force before the Great War, and was considered under three separate headings:—

* No. 325 in Dominions No. 19.

- (a) Loans.
(b) Attachments.
(c) Interchanges.

In the light of present day conditions, it is necessary to bring these arrangements up to date. Whereas before the War loans and attachments were the rule and interchanges the exception, the contrary is now the case, owing to the war experience gained by the Dominions. While, therefore, they may not be able entirely to dispense with assistance from the Mother Country as regards special subjects such as gas, tanks, aviation, and the like, they are able to provide suitable officers for exchange with officers of the Home army. For various financial and administrative reasons it is not possible to arrange exchanges in the case of the more senior officers, and it is therefore necessary to limit "exchanges" to the case of junior officers and to allow more senior officers to acquire experience by means of "attachments."

From the foregoing it is therefore clear that provision must be made for loans, attachments, and interchanges as have been carried out heretofore, and the subject will be considered on those lines. In addition, the system will apply to the case of non-commissioned officers and men.

Before discussing the details of such arrangements it is well to define the object in view. This is clearly expressed by the following extract from the memorandum of August 1910:—

"The object that all Governments of the Empire have in view is to create Imperial forces capable of fighting side by side in case of need. To attain this object, similarity of training and organization is important, but it is not everything; the bonds of true camaraderie and mutual understanding are also important, and these are based on sentiment rather than on business calculations. While seeking to adjust the burdens to be borne, therefore, the relative cost, at the moment, to each Government must not be given undue weight."

In other words, it is necessary to provide as far as is possible a machinery whereby in future all Imperial forces may be trained to fight in war as one homogeneous whole and not as unconnected parts hastily thrown together in a time of crisis.

LOANS.

2. As regards the loan of officers of the regular army, there can be no question of the justice of the proposal that the Government borrowing an officer should defray the whole cost. It is necessary, however, to consider how much such Governments must expect to have to pay in order to obtain what they require. In offering suggestions on this point for the guidance of the Governments concerned, it is desirable to make clear the position which the Army Council occupies in relation to the employment of officers of the regular army on regimental or on staff or other extra-regimental duties. The officers may be divided into two classes, viz.:—

- (i) Those still borne on the cadres of units or corps.
(ii) Those who, on promotion, have been removed from the cadres of units or corps.

(b) A regimental officer belonging to a unit or corps of the regular forces is legally liable to military service with that unit or corps in any part of the world. He is also legally liable to be transferred for military service from one to another unit of the regular army, although it is unusual to enforce this liability in peace time without his consent.

Officers of both classes may be held to be legally liable to military service in any part of the world; but it is a long-established custom not to enforce this liability in peace time, as regards extra-regimental employment, either on the staff or in command, and whether at home or abroad. It has been customary for many years to allow officers the option of refusing such employment in peace time, and, in the opinion of the Army Council, it would be undesirable to institute any departure from this custom.

For these reasons the Army Council are averse to ordering officers of the regular army to take up regular employment with the forces of the oversea Dominions, without their own consent, in time of peace. It follows that sufficient inducements must be offered to procure the services of suitable officers, and it is natural to expect that the pecuniary aspect of the employment offered will always be an important consideration.

(c) As a guide towards estimating the emoluments likely to suffice, a statement is given in Appendix A, showing the pay and allowances of staff and regimental officers serving with the regular army at home. Owing, however, to dissimilar conditions of life overseas, family reasons, and various other causes affecting the aggregate expenses likely to be incurred, it must be expected that higher rates of pay than those drawn at home will be necessary to attract suitable officers. The amounts likely to suffice for this purpose can only be ascertained by experiment and experience, and it is impossible to lay them down definitely until further knowledge has been gained. For the present, therefore, it is proposed that each case should be considered on its merits, and that, whenever the services of an officer of the regular forces are asked for on loan, the proposed rates of pay and allowances should be stated. Should these rates prove insufficient to procure the services of a suitable officer, it will be necessary for the Army Council to inform the overseas Government concerned of the fact. In no case will the Army Council be prepared to recommend an officer who is not considered by them to be in all respects suitable for the work he is required to do. With regard to this point, it is desirable to explain that the term "regimental officer," where used in this paper, should be taken to mean an officer on the cadre of a unit or corps who is thoroughly conversant with his regimental duties, and who can be relied on to perform those duties well and to instruct others in them—but no more. Officers in this category must not be considered qualified to perform, instruct in, or advise on staff duties, or on matters outside ordinary regimental work. Such officers should not be borrowed, therefore, for work other than that for which they are qualified. Whether such regimental officers are required in the overseas Dominions is a point which it lies within the discretion of each Dominion concerned to determine. It is suggested that in most cases trained staff officers are more suited to present needs.

In addition to the payment of the officers there would also be a sum due to the Home Government in respect of their non-effective* pay.

(d) The system of "Loans" is applicable also to the case of non-commissioned officers and men.

ATTACHMENTS.

(i) Attachments other than to the War Office.

3. By the term "attachments," as used here, is meant all cases of officers of the forces of an overseas Dominion, staff or regimental, irrespective of rank, who are sent to be attached to the regular army for instruction or for duty, but not to fill a vacancy on the authorized establishment of that army. They will also apply to officers of the home army sent for attachments to the Dominions or India. The financial system at home is that the pay for officers of the regular army is voted on certain definite establishments, and no pay or allowances are provided by Parliament for any individual not included in those establishments. The cost of the pay, allowance, passages, or other emoluments of attached officers who are not taken on establishments must, therefore, be borne by the Government sending them. This seems equitable, inasmuch as these officers are sent for the purpose of learning their work for the benefit of the Government sending them—and not with the object of performing duty for the Government receiving them.

(b) The obligation resting on the Home Government in respect of these attached officers is to afford them every possible opportunity of fulfilling the object with which they have been attached. It must be understood that such officers cannot claim to be entrusted with command as a right, or with responsibility for the performance of any duty, excepting in so far as may be advisable for their better instruction. They will be given local rank in the regular army should this appear advisable, and quarters, as well as any necessary office accommodation, will be provided for them by the War Office, if public quarters and offices are available, free of charge. A similar obligation will rest on Dominion Governments in respect of officers of the home army attached.

* Non-effective charges are those relating to an officer's pension, half-pay, or retired pay. Thus, in connexion with the present subject, if an officer of the regular army is seconded in order to serve under the Government of an overseas Dominion, a new officer has to be appointed to the unit he leaves in order to complete the establishment of that unit. This would involve "non-effective" charges in respect of both officers.

(c) The system of "attachments" is applicable also to the case of non-commissioned officers and men.

(ii) Attachments to the War Office.

(a) It is not proposed to continue the system of having a Dominion section attached to the Directorate of Staff Duties at the War Office, as it is considered that such a system contributed to work being carried out in water-tight compartments and debarred the officers selected for the appointment from obtaining first-hand information regarding the work of the Imperial Army as a whole.

Some Dominions may appoint a permanent military representative to the staff of their High Commissioner in London. If this is the case it is suggested that his duties should include those given in sub-paragraph (b).

(b) If a military representative is not appointed it is proposed that each Dominion should have an officer at the War Office who should be available to give advice on matters affecting the Dominion concerned, and it is desirable that such officers should study the workings of the War Office as a whole by means of attachment to all the Departments of the Military Members of the Army Council.

(c) For the efficient performance of such important duties, it is considered that officers of some seniority and experience of the work at local headquarters sections are required. It is not desirable that their rank should be below that of Major or above that of Colonel. As regards the actual system of conducting correspondence, it is recommended that on purely technical and routine matters it should be conducted direct between the local representative and the authorities in his own country, the latter deciding to whom the correspondence should be addressed. It is further recommended that the local representative should be instructed when he joins the War Office that communications sent by him conveying the views of the Military Members of the Army Council concerned on any point should always be submitted before despatch to the Director responsible for the subject dealt with, and should bear the initials of such Director, or of the Military Member himself when of sufficient importance.

(d) In order that an insight into our military system may be obtained, officers will also be attached to the various branches of the War Office, and to commands, depots, schools of instruction, as may be required.

(e) As regards the question of finance, it is submitted that all expenses of pay and passages should be borne by the Dominion concerned in whose direct interests the officer is detailed. The Home Government, on the other hand, in return for the great, if less direct, benefit of uniting the military forces of the Empire, should bear the cost of office accommodation and clerks, and the cost of travelling expenses and allowances at army rates for these officers within the United Kingdom. Such allowances to be authorized for such staff tours, classes, courses, manoeuvres, etc., as the officers might be detailed to attend by the Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

INTERCHANGE.

General Remarks.

4. The question of the interchange of officers is more complicated than either "loans" or "attachments."

Interchange may take place between—

Home and Dominions.

Home and India.

Dominion and Dominion.

Dominions and India.

Australia and New Zealand are particularly affected by interchange with India.

Interchange may be of three kinds, viz.:—(i) Direct interchange between staff officers; (ii) direct interchange between regimental officers; (iii) mixed or indirect interchanges, e.g., the exchange of a staff officer for one or more regimental officers, or the interchange of an officer of one arm of the service with an officer either of another arm or corps or department.

(b) The theory underlying interchanges is that an officer received by one Government fills a vacancy on its establishment, thereby enabling someone to be spared to be sent to fill his, or another's, place in the country from which he came.

(c) For the present, therefore, and until the rates of pay and other conditions become more uniform, it is proposed that, except in the case of interchanges between

Home and India, interchanged officers should be paid by the Government to which they belong, which should also defray the passage to and fro of the officers and their families, travelling allowances, and such additional allowances and expenses (including all non-effective charges) as may be thought necessary; travelling allowances and expenses within the United Kingdom or the Dominion should be paid at local rates by the Government of the country in which he is serving. In the case of India a recognized system of excoluments for British officers serving in India already exists, and it is considered that the Government to which the officer is attached should pay the officers at the rates current for the forces in its country.

It must be recognized that interchanges will entail expense to each Government, and that the value received in return in the form of increased military strength cannot be exactly determined. On the other hand, it must be remembered that, eventually, every part will gain by the increased strength of the whole.

(d) Having cleared the ground as regards these general conditions, details may now be considered for each class of interchange.

(i) Interchange of Staff Officers.

5. Interchange of staff officers is only possible at present to a very limited extent. It is proposed that in the case of interchange between Home and the Dominions, exchanges would be carried out between staff officers and in junior appointments, i.e., 2nd Grade and under up to approximately a total of eight, i.e.:—

India	2
Canada	2
Australia	2
New Zealand	1
South Africa	1

In addition arrangements between Dominions and between India and the Dominions should be made between the Governments concerned.

Officers above the rank of 2nd Grade will be loaned or attached but not interchanged.

Officers of administrative services and departments will be treated in the same way as staff officers, but, as a rule, a period of "attachment" should precede that of interchange. The usual qualifications required of officers of the regular army for appointment to the Staff are defined in Army Orders as follows:—

"For the efficient performance of Staff duties special aptitude and extensive and varied military knowledge are required, including a knowledge of the principles of the administration and maintenance of the Army in peace and war. With a view to ensuring the possession of the necessary military knowledge, officers for employment on the Staff will, as a rule, be chosen from those who have graduated at the Staff College, or who have proved their ability and qualifications on the Staff in the field."

(ii) Other Interchanges.

6. It is considered that in the case of interchange of regimental officers, such officers should fill the vacancies of their opposite numbers of equal ranks without any intervening period of attachment, and that they should not be supernumerary to establishment. There appears to be no reason to limit the number of such interchanges, but officers so interchanged should not be above the rank of Major.

It is suggested that the following should be regarded as a minimum at any one time:—

India	4
Canada	4
Australia	4
New Zealand	2
South Africa	2

(b) In order to avoid complications in regard to the regular flow of promotion, the seconding of officers, and other matters too detailed to enter upon in this paper, it is considered that interchanges should not be for a longer period than two years, and that the provisions of King's Regulations, paragraph 1252, should apply, i.e., that neither the senior Major, two senior Captains, nor the two senior Subalterns of a cavalry regiment, nor the senior Major, three senior Captains, nor the six senior Subalterns of an infantry battalion, should be selected for interchange.

It is thought, also, that interchanges should involve no change of uniform, and that officers, during the time they are employed with the forces of an overseas Dominion, should not be subject to the deduction from retired pay laid down in Article 485 of the Royal Warrant.

(c) The system of "interchange" is applicable also to the case of non-commissioned officers and men.

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS.

7. It is necessary to point out to the Governments concerned that attachments and, in particular, loans and interchanges cannot be arranged at short notice. Suitable vacancies to be filled by officers from overseas, and the selection of suitable officers to be sent overseas, can seldom be arranged without considerable difficulty. It is necessary therefore to request the Governments of the overseas Dominions to give the Home Government as much notice as possible when they desire to obtain the services of a regular officer, and to state fully the work for which he is required, and the pay and allowances of the appointment. Similarly, when it is desired to send an officer home, it is necessary that the Government concerned should first state his qualifications, experience, and length of service, and the proposed conditions of the transfer, and that the Home Government should be asked at least six months beforehand whether he can be received, and, if so, on what date.

8. It is hoped that the India Office and the Government of India may accept the principles set forth in this paper as a basis to work on when considering questions connected with loans, attachments, and interchanges between the Indian army and the forces of the Dominions.

HENRY WILSON,

Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

War Office.

MINISTERS have the honour to state in reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's confidential minute 1/1161 of 14th January, 1919, that under present circumstances and until the Government is in a position to take up and deal with the reorganization of the Defence Forces, it would be premature for them to deal fully with the points raised in the War Office confidential Memorandum of 15th November, 1919, on the subject of Loans, Attachments, and Interchanges of officers.

At the moment no arrangements have matured which will involve the loan, attachment, or interchange of any officers except the attachment of one officer annually to the Staff College, Camberley, but in that instance, and in other instances, should the necessity arise to effect other loans, attachments, or interchanges, before the Union's military policy is more fully developed, Ministers are quite prepared to accept the financial arrangements set forth in the memorandum.

Prime Minister's Office, Wellington, 21st April, 1920.

MEMORANDUM FOR HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

THE Prime Minister presents his compliments to His Excellency the Governor-General, and, with reference to the despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 17th December last, enclosing copy of a Confidential memorandum dealing with Loans, Attachments, and Interchanges of Officers of the Military Forces of the Empire, begs to submit the following comments thereon, as requested in the above-named letter.

1. (a) The war experience gained by officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces has proved most valuable. It is agreed that interchange between Imperial and New Zealand officers will in future be the rule, and loans and attachments the exception, as indicated in the memorandum.
- (b) With special services, such as Gas, Tanks, Aviation, and the like special arrangements may require to be made for the supply of suitable Imperial officers for these instructional duties.
- (c) It is questionable whether it is a wise policy to limit exchanges to junior officers only. New Zealand does not possess a Standing Army, and consequently senior officers of its Permanent Forces have little opportunity to gain experience in the manoeuvring of troops in the field.
- (d) The New Zealand Government is quite in agreement that it is most desirable to provide machinery by which all Imperial Forces may be trained to fit in as one homogeneous whole.

2. Loans.

It is not considered that in the future New Zealand will require officers of the Imperial Army other than by exchange, except in very special cases.

The pay of Imperial officers being now much higher than that given officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces, it cannot be expected that the New Zealand Government will be able to offer higher financial terms than the ordinary pay and allowances of the Imperial Army to those of its officers who come to New Zealand. In the higher ranks, officers of the Imperial Army receive over one hundred per cent. higher rates of pay and allowances than officers of similar rank in the Dominion Forces.

3. Attachments.

Experience in the past has shown that the policy of attaching officers to the Imperial Army has not proved satisfactory. It is considered that a policy of interchange of officers, by which permanent officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces would find themselves recognized members of an Imperial Army unit for a certain period, will prove more satisfactory.

In special cases, senior officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces would derive benefit by being attached to the various branches of the War Office, and to Commands, Depôts, Schools of Instruction, etc. Experience has, however, shown that greater benefit is derived by requiring officers to hold a definite position and perform a definite task. For this reason it is considered that a system of exchange of officers is preferable.

Where officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces are attached to the Imperial Army it is agreed that all expenses of pay and passage should be borne by the Dominion. It is not expected that the New Zealand Government will take advantage of the opportunity to attach officers to any large extent.

4. Interchange.

It is agreed that New Zealand is particularly affected by the interchange of officers of the Dominion's Permanent Forces with Imperial officers serving in India, and that interchange of Staff and Regimental officers both in India and England is most desirable.

The difficulty regarding such a policy of interchange is entirely financial.

Officers of the New Zealand Permanent Forces interchanged with officers of the Imperial Army will require to be paid at Imperial rates. If a Lieutenant-Colonel, the New Zealand officer will require an increase of £615 per annum while attached to the Imperial Army. In addition, the Imperial Lieutenant-Colonel with whom he exchanges will be receiving £615 more than his brother officer of similar rank in the Permanent Forces of the Dominion.

The War Office memorandum lays stress upon the importance of the Empire possessing Imperial Forces capable of fighting side by side. With this desire the New Zealand Government entirely agrees. The large increases of pay and allowances for officers of the Imperial Forces have resulted in a certain injustice being done to officers of the Imperial Army on loan to the New Zealand Government who are serving under contract, and who remain at the old rates of pay, which are considerably lower than the present Imperial rates.

Two Imperial officers only are affected (i.e., Lieutenant-Colonel J. L. Sleeman, C.B.E., I.G.S., and Captain C. W. Brocks, M.B.E., M.C., Worcestershire Regiment).

It is suggested that the Imperial Government, in such cases, should defray any extra pay and allowances for Imperial officers interchanged with permanent officers of the New Zealand Forces. The New Zealand Government has recently consented to increase the pay and allowances of those officers of the New Zealand Forces while serving in England or India to Imperial rates. Under these circumstances it would appear fair to ask your Government to supplement the pay of all Imperial officers serving in New Zealand to corresponding Imperial Army rates of pay and allowances, and particularly the pay of the two officers mentioned, who were retained at the special request of the New Zealand Government.

It is impossible to expect efficient and experienced officers of the Imperial Army to serve in New Zealand at New Zealand rates of pay. Neither is it possible to expect officers of the New Zealand Forces to serve with Imperial troops for less pay and allowances than the officers with whom they would be serving. It will therefore be appreciated that the arrangements for these attachments or interchanges cannot be satisfactory until the anomalies existing between Imperial and New Zealand rates of pay and allowances are adjusted in a satisfactory manner.

W. F. MASSEY,
Prime Minister.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 24th November, 1920.)

(Confidential.)

MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 12th October, 1920.

REFERRING to your despatch, Confidential, dated the 17th December, 1919,* covering a copy of a memorandum on the subject of loans, attachments, and interchanges between individuals belonging to the Military Forces of the Empire, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government concurs generally in the principles contained in the memorandum, but desires to submit the following detailed observations:—

Paragraph 1, sub-paragraph 3.—The principle of exchange is concurred in, but the wisdom of limiting exchanges to junior officers can be questioned. Attachment is not always a satisfactory method of obtaining instruction.

Notwithstanding any difficulties in its application the principle of interchange is sound, and its wider application is suggested.

Paragraph 2 (c): Non-Effective Pay and the Footnote thereto.—The principle of charging the Government to whom an officer is loaned with payments in respect of non-effective pay is at present in operation. The Commonwealth Government may, however, desire at a later date to suggest a revision of the principle. It is not quite clear whether it is the intention that the Dominion Government should meet the non-effective charges both of the officer of the Home Army loaned and those of the Home Army officer who takes the place of such loaned officer.

Paragraph 3 (ii): Attachments.—It is noted that the Dominion Section at the War Office is dispensed with, and two alternatives are suggested.

This Government has under consideration the attachment of two officers to the office of the Australian High Commissioner in London, and by this means it would appear that the requirements of the memorandum under discussion could be met. One will be a senior officer.

Paragraph 4 (c).—The proposals generally are acceptable, but as regards the suggestion that a Dominion officer serving on exchange in India should draw the travelling allowance and other emoluments current for officers of the Indian Army, it is thought that the Commonwealth should be free to frame its own financial regulations to meet particular cases.

Paragraph 5 (i): Interchange. Staff Officers.—As previously stated, the wisdom is questioned of confining the interchange of officers to juniors. It is considered that greater mutual benefits would be obtained by the interchange of more senior officers.

The numbers suggested by the War Office are suitable, and can be accepted as a guide.

Regimental Officers.—The proposals generally are subscribed to. The numbers indicated can, however, only be accepted as a guide. However desirable, it may not always be practicable to furnish the minimum suggested from the small number of permanent officers maintained.

I have, &c.,

FORSTER,

PERSONAL and Secret.

Both Mr. Massey and Sir J. Ward have intimated their dissent from the War Office view that the occupation of Gallipoli should not appear on bar of war medals, and indicated the possibility, in the event of this not being done, of striking a separate medal.

I would urge the War Office most strongly to acquiesce in a bar for Gallipoli, which, I think, from what Prime Minister said to me, would overcome the difficulty. The Minister of Defence and others are most averse to a separate medal, but are very strongly in favour of Imperial recognition of the name of Gallipoli. The question should not be indefinitely delayed.—LIVERPOOL.

COMMONWEALTH Government desires to urge strongly that 1914 medal which it is understood is about to be sanctioned for men who left England during first few months of war in original Expeditionary Force should be extended to men of Australian forces who left with original contingents in 1914. This would include those present 25th April at landing Anzac. Such recognition would be appreciated enormously.—FERGUSON.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,]

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that since the subject of war medals was discussed at the Imperial War Conference (vide pages 37-51, 231-236, and 256-7, of the Confidential print, Dominions No. 62, of which copies have already been sent to you) the matter has been under further consideration by His Majesty's Government.

2. It will be seen from the announcement by the War Office, of which a copy is enclosed, that it has been decided to issue a distinctive decoration to certain troops who landed for service in Belgium and France up to and including the first battle of Ypres. On the other questions raised at the Conference, however, no definite decision has yet been reached.

3. The present position is as follows:—

As regards the Army, it is generally agreed that two medals should be issued, one being an international medal for all troops engaged in theatres of war, and the other a British medal for all troops serving at home and in garrisons. Troops serving in theatres of war would also be entitled to the British medal.

With regard to clasps, the Army Council was first of opinion that these should not record actions of localities, but only the calendar years of the duration of the War.

This view was, however, challenged by the New Zealand representatives at the Imperial War Conference: there is also a considerable body of feeling against it in the Army itself; and the decision to award a distinctive decoration to officers and men of the first Expeditionary Force is, of course, a further argument in favour of differentiation of actions and localities. In these circumstances the Army Council have recommended that the question of the description and allotment of clasps should be referred to a committee of representatives from all theatres of war, to be held at the close of hostilities; on this committee there would, of course, be representation of the Dominions.

As regards the Navy, while it is desired to adopt the same general procedure as in the case of the Army, the authorities concerned desire to retain the principle of awarding clasps for all actions of conspicuous merit, and for certain special services considered deserving of special recognition. Further, as the major portion of naval contact with enemy craft is in home waters, whereas the contact with enemy military forces is overseas, the international medal would have to be issued accordingly.

4. I may mention, in illustration of the difficulties attending the subject, that it is estimated that from twelve to fifteen million medals will have to be struck. The arrangements for their speedy preparation and distribution after the cessation of hostilities will naturally need detailed consideration later on.

5. So far, no decision has been reached on the question whether the medals should be made of silver, or of some alloy. In any case, the present exceptional cost of silver, and the effect which any extensive purchase would have on Indian finance, etc., has rendered it necessary for instructions to be given that no purchases of silver for the purpose of medals should be made under present market conditions

I have, etc.,

WALTER H. LONG

Enclosure in No. 87.

THE King, having expressed a wish to recognize specially the services given in the earlier part of the War in 1914 by troops in France and Belgium, the Army Council—after consultation with Field-Marshal Viscount French—have advised His Majesty that the object could best be met by the award of a distinctive decoration, with riband, but without clasp, to all officers, warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men on the establishment of a unit of the British Expeditionary Forces, including the Indian Contingent, the Royal Naval Division, and other naval and marine units, who landed for service in France or Belgium during the earliest and most critical phase of the War up to and including the first battle of Ypres.

Arrangements are being made accordingly to give effect to his Majesty's wishes, and a further announcement on the subject will be made as soon as possible.

SUGGESTION that some recognition should be given by Australia and New Zealand to Australians and New Zealanders who left in 1914, and afterwards took part in the operations in Gallipoli, has been given careful consideration. One decoration to be issued by the two Governments. Question has been discussed by Army Council, and, on condition that the decoration is only given to members of the Australian Imperial Force or New Zealand Expeditionary Force, the proposal has their full approval. It has been submitted to His Majesty, who has been graciously pleased to approve. It is wish of His Majesty that this mark of distinction should take the form of a decoration such as is being given in the case of the British Expeditionary Force of 1914 rather than of a medal. The design and ribbon should be submitted for approval of His Majesty. It should, of course, be quite distinct from any British decoration past or present. YOUR telegram of the 24th November,* [? 22nd November] on the subject of a decoration for the men of the Newfoundland Regiment who have taken part in the operations at Gallipoli, has been under the consideration of my Ministers, and I have the honour to inform you that they desire to have a recognition given to the men of the Newfoundland Regiment similar to that which is given to the men from Australia and New Zealand who also fought at Gallipoli.

2. My Ministers understand that the distinction will take the form of a decoration quite distinct from any past or present British decoration, and they would be glad to have submitted to them, if possible, the design which it is proposed to approve for it. If a general design for all the three forces is proposed my Ministers believe that they should be glad to adopt the same design; if there is to be a difference in design they would be glad to have an opportunity of considering the variation intended for Newfoundland.

DIFFICULTIES of serious nature have arisen owing to strong objection taken not only by Press and Members of Parliament here, but by Dominion troops themselves, to the issue to the Dominion troops serving in Gallipoli of decorations which cannot be conferred on their British comrades who shared the hardships and dangers. Even more serious anomalies would be involved by the extension of this decoration, for demands for issue of indefinite number of further campaign decorations would become irresistible. Following proposal has now been made by Committee presided over by General Seely, to whom His Majesty's Government entrusted consideration of question:—

(1) 1914 Star in its present form to be granted under conditions now approved as defined in Army Order 350 of 1917.

(2) 1914 Star, with the same riband but bearing an altered date, 1914-15, to be extended to all those ineligible for the 1914 Star who served in the campaign in a theatre of war prior to 5th August, 1915, and to be granted to all those who arrived in such theatre of war on duty and with proper authority prior to that date.

(3) Army Council to define "theatre of war," in consultation with the Air Board and Admiralty, thus including:—

- (a) All Australian, New Zealand, and Newfoundland troops who fought in Gallipoli, as well as all the British and Indian troops who were on the Peninsula, with very few exceptions.
- (b) The 1st Canadian Division, the Canadian Cavalry Brigade, and the early reinforcements of both, who fought at battle of Festubert at second battle of Ypres.
- (c) All those who fought in German South-West Africa, and nearly all the Indian troops who fought in East Africa.
- (d) All British, Dominion, and Indian troops who fought in the defence of Egypt.
- (e) All officers and other ratings of the Royal Navy and the Royal Marines who served during first year of war on a ship at sea.
- (f) All members of the Flying Services fulfilling the prescribed conditions.

Solution proposed above would remove entirely the anomaly of troops serving side by side in the same theatre of war not receiving the same reward for their services, and would give to nearly all those who first responded to the call of duty a decoration which would be prized extremely highly, and which has been confined hitherto only to those who rendered this service in France. It would remove also existing anomaly by which the 1914 Star is issued to many thousands of officers and men whose duties kept them far away from the fighting line at a base in France, whereas officers and men who offered their services at the beginning of the War, and took part in the fighting at Festubert or Gallipoli, are ineligible for any special decoration. The grant by the King himself of one decoration to British Dominion and Indian troops alike would symbolize the unity of the Empire.

[To Australia and New Zealand: Great importance, His Majesty's Government are aware, has been attached in Australia and New Zealand to a special decoration for Gallipoli. It is proposed that, in event of proposal being adopted, special clasp on War Medal for Gallipoli should be given. His Majesty's Government earnestly trust that your Government will concur in adoption of the proposals of the Committee, which will, of course, involve giving up the proposals already approved for Gallipoli decoration and ribbon. I may add that, in opinion of His Majesty's Government, proposals of Committee offer only satisfactory solution. I cordially concur in this opinion.]

1914 STAR. My Government is in entire concurrence with the general principles expressed in your telegram of 16th October,* but regard as essential the following modification, viz.: that as regards New Zealand troops the date should be 19th December, 1915, the date of evacuation of Gallipoli, instead of 5th August, 1915, for the following reasons: first, because, owing to very strong criticism of the original proposal, it has been published widely in Press here already that all New Zealand troops would be awarded Star who served at any time during operations on Gallipoli; secondly, because the application of the date of 5th August, 1915, to New Zealand troops would have the effect of excluding those who took part in the hard fighting in August and September, 1915, on the peninsula, while the force which occupied Samoa, which it is assumed would be regarded as a theatre of war though no fighting actually occurred, would be eligible for the decoration; thirdly, because of the inequality that would be created between Imperial and New Zealand troops by adherence to 5th August, 1915. The former could, in most cases, reach the theatre of operations after embarkation in a much shorter time than the latter, and, as the New Zealand Expeditionary Force did not leave here until 16th October, 1914, and did not arrive in Egypt until December, 1914, the period in the case of New Zealand troops of eligibility for the decoration would be only eight months, i.e., from the beginning of December, 1914, to 5th August, 1915.

My Prime Minister desires especially to place on record that he has always considered that Imperial troops should not be excluded from recognition in connexion with their services on Gallipoli, and therefore is very pleased indeed to observe the proposals contained in your telegram, but he is anxious for reasons given above that the decoration will be granted up to time of the evacuation of Gallipoli, so far as New Zealand troops are concerned. I should be glad of an early reply.—LIVERPOOL.

Enclosure in No. 120.

HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATES, 14TH NOVEMBER, 1918.

War Service (Decorations).—Statement by Mr. Macpherson.

COLONEL LESLIE WILSON (by private notice) asked the Under-Secretary of State for War whether he is in a position to make any announcement with regard to the award or decoration to officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who took part in the Gallipoli operations

MR. MACPHERSON: I have received also a private notice question from my honourable friend the Member for South Salford (Sir M. Barlow). I hope the House will pardon my giving a somewhat long answer to the questions.

As has been already stated in the House, the settlement of this matter has been complicated, owing to the diversity of the interests involved, and has been delayed by the need for consultation with the Dominion authorities.

I am glad to be able to say that an agreement has been reached which has received the approval of the War Cabinet and His Majesty the King, and which, I am assured, is satisfactory to those principally concerned. In the first place, the 1914 Star will be reserved for its special purposes. A Star on the same model and with the same riband, but bearing distinctive marks as to date, viz., the years 1914-15, will be given to all officers and other ranks of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines who, prior to 31st December, 1915, served in a ship of war at sea, and all officers and other ranks of military and air forces who served in a theatre of war prior to the same date. In every case the officer or man must have served on duty and with proper authority, and no officer or man will receive the 1914-15 Star in addition to the 1914 Star.

Thus, in the same way that those who first bore the brunt of the attack in France and Flanders received a special mark of recognition by the award of the 1914 Star, so those from our Dominions and Colonies, as well as British and Irish troops who first responded to the call of duty and served in a theatre of war, will receive special recognition. The House will recollect that it has been originally proposed and sanctioned that the Governments of Australia and New Zealand should present their troops with a special medal for the operations on the Peninsula. They have now agreed to the new proposal, so that all troops, British and Indian, and those from the Dominions, who shared the same dangers and hardships shall receive the same award. The date chosen, namely, the 31st December, 1915, forms a definite break in the operations, and all concerned have accepted it on the understanding that it is final. It will interest the House to know that there will be included, in addition to all those who fought on the Gallipoli Peninsula, the Canadian troops who fought at the second battle of Ypres, the battle of Festhubert, and subsequent operations of that year in France and Flanders, all those who fought at the battle of Loos, the troops engaged in the defence of Egypt, the troops who conquered German South-West Africa under the command of General Botha, as well as all who were engaged in other parts of the African continent, the Australian force which captured the Bismarck Archipelago, and those who fought so gallantly under General Townshend at Kut.

2. 3. I venture to emphasize this matter in order to avoid any possibility of friction or annoyance when the medal rolls come to be made out.

4. I gather that this correspondence entirely supersedes and cancels the correspondence with reference to a special decoration for forces from the Self-governing Dominions which ended with my despatch Confidential of the 23rd September, 1918.‡

2. Allies medal which has been agreed to at Paris Conference to be restricted as far as possible for fighting service, and be given—

(c) in Air Force to all officers and men (1) posted to any theatre of war, (2) engaged in air against enemy, (3) employed in flying new aircraft to France, (4) who have formed part of complement of aircraft-carrying ships.

3. Question of battle clasps to be considered by Special Committee of Representatives of all three services. Dominions to be represented on this Committee.

4. Special Mercantile Marine medal to be granted, see my telegram of 29th January,* but proposed that in no circumstances should any man be allowed to wear more than two medals.

5. Special medal to be called Red Cross and St. John's Medal, to be given to all men and women engaged in actual hospital work in any part of the Empire; those who have entered theatre of war to receive British and Allies medal, like Army.

6. Women borne on strength of organized force to be entitled to both British and Allies medal if they have entered theatre of war on duty. Women belonging to any independent organization recognized by War Office in any theatre of war to receive British medal only.

7. Question of a general war workers' medal has been carefully considered, but difficulties found to be insuperable, and, moreover, proposal not welcomed by Trade Union Advisory Committee. Idea accordingly abandoned.

It is desired to issue notice to Press to above effect.

Please telegraph any observations which Ministers may desire to make as soon as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

EXTRACT FROM "TIMES," OF 11TH APRIL, 1919.

War Medal and Ribbon.

GENERAL SIR IVOR PHILIPPS (Southampton, Coalition Liberal) asked the Secretary for War whether a general war medal had been decided upon and a design for a ribbon approved; whether the design for the ribbon had been registered under the Patents and Designs Act; and whether an order had been issued by the Army Council that no person would be allowed to deal in such ribbon without written permission of the Army Council, contrary to the decision of the House on 2nd April.

MR. CHURCHILL, Secretary for War and Air (Dundee, Coalition Liberal): A general war medal has been decided upon and the design of a ribbon has been approved. The design of the ribbon has been registered under the Patents and Designs Act, the object of such registration being to ensure that all the ribbon manufactured shall be conserved for Government requirements. It is the intention that a free preliminary issue shall be made to all men entitled to the medal, whether serving or discharged. The quantity of ribbon required exceeds 2,000,000 yards, and if the private manufacture and sale of this ribbon is permitted before Government requirements are satisfied, the issue of the ribbon will be delayed for a very long time. As in the case of the 1914 Star ribbon, which was similarly registered,

* No. 125.

this riband will be released for general sale as soon as sufficient quantities are obtained. The War Office is not only responsible for obtaining sufficient riband for the Army, but has to provide for the consolidated requirements of all Government Departments, which include the Admiralty, Air Ministry, Colonial Office, Board of Trade, India Office, and all Dominions.

SIR IVOR PHILIPPS: Then the right honourable gentleman has no intention of licensing all the traders in this country who desire to provide this ribbon for the use of soldiers after the public issue has been completed?

MR. CHURCHILL: No, I don't mean that. I think it natural we should try to get the ribbon out to the men who have earned it as quickly as possible. We must have control in the first instance.

SIR IVOR PHILIPPS: You do not propose to license all the traders afterwards. The words in the Order are that they may not deal in it. When the Army Bill was before the House the member for North Cumberland proposed that the Army licence should be given, and the right honourable gentleman said he could not accept the proposal.

MR. CHURCHILL: I have no intention whatever of overriding the law of the land, and if I had that extreme intention I could not carry it into effect. The law has been passed by the House. Administrative action can in no way run counter to the law.

SIR IVOR PHILIPPS: If the right honourable gentleman makes this a patent production does he not see that he is creating a gigantic monopoly in the supply of ribbon to about ten million soldiers and sailors?

MR. CHURCHILL: What we want to do is to get the ribbon out, so that it may be worn by our soldiers before the people have almost forgotten that a war has been on. The moment that is over there will be free trade.

CAPTAIN C. CRAIG (Antrim, S., Coalition Unionist): Has the right honourable gentleman come to any decision about making a distinction between 1914 and 1915?

MR. CHURCHILL: The decision has been reached that there shall be a silver rosette similar to that which marks the repeated D.S.O. on the 1915 ribbon for the 1914 men of the original army. I have submitted to a committee the study of the regulations which shall secure that this rosette is only given to those people who in 1914 really took part in the fighting (cheers), and not distributed among a mass of people who never went beyond Havre (cheers).

Asked whether it was proposed to give a free issue of the new medal ribbon with the rosette upon it.

MR. CHURCHILL said: We intend to make free issues in the first instance, not only to serving, but to discharged, soldiers.

15TH APRIL. My telegram 11th April,* your telegram 8th March,† medals. Ministers of Militia and Naval Service concur in proposals set forth your telegram; it appears, however, that, in opinion of Overseas Minister of Militia, Allies medal should not be restricted to "officers and men who have entered theatre of war on strength of any military unit on duty," but that in case of troops from overseas Dominions they should also be granted to those who have been serving in British Isles. My Ministers suggest that Overseas Minister be given opportunity of stating his views in this matter to War Office.—DEVONSHIRE.

WITH reference to my telegram of the 8th of March,† I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copies of a memorandum on war medals, which it is proposed to issue shortly to the Press. [Not to Newfoundland: A copy has been sent to your Prime Minister.]

3. It will be observed that the name "Red Cross and St. John's Medal," under which the medal to be given to those engaged in hospital work was described in my telegram, is replaced by the title "War Hospitals Service Medal."

WAR MEDALS.

THE question of war medals was first discussed in 1916 in connexion with the interchange of bravery medals with the Allies. At that time it was assumed that at the conclusion of hostilities the European custom of an interchange of war medals would be carried out. In wars in which European countries had been allied together, it had been the practice for the Allies to exchange a certain number of war medals, e.g., the Crimean War and the Boxer rebellion. This was a comparatively easy matter when the forces engaged were not numerous, but in the present War, where armies are composed of millions, it would be practically impossible to distribute with any fairness a certain number of war medals from each Ally. It would, moreover, be extremely unfair on the troops who had fought in theatres of war outside Europe, since they would probably be excluded from this distribution.

In order to devise an emblem of the victorious alliance which could be worn by the soldiers and sailors of all the Allied countries, it was proposed to institute an Allies Medal. The conditions of service vary, however, in each country, and it was therefore suggested that each Allied Government should have a perfectly free hand to decide the lines on which it should be distributed, but a hope was expressed that it should, as far as possible, be associated with actual fighting.

At a meeting of representatives of all the Associated Powers, held in Paris, in March, 1919, it was decided to put forward the following recommendation:—

1. A medal of the Great War will be instituted and called the Victory Medal.
2. This medal will be distributed on principles to be decided by each Government, but in such a manner that it cannot be confused with a purely commemorative medal which might be given to all mobilized men.
3. The ribbon shall be identical for all the countries, and will consist of two rainbows joined by the red in the centre. It shall be distributed as soon as possible.
4. The medal will be round (36 millimetres in width) and made of bronze.
5. As it was thought impossible to have an international competition in the time available, and by this means to select a single artist, it is proposed that, instead of an identical medal, the Allied and associated Powers shall agree to have medals as nearly identical in appearance as possible.

With this object in view they will have the medal designed by their own artist upon the following lines:—

- (a) On the obverse there will be a winged figure of Victory, full length in the middle of the medal, and full face; the borders and the background plain, without either inscription or date.
- (b) On the reverse there will be an inscription: "The Great War for Civilization," translated into the different languages, and either the names of the different Allied and Associated Powers or their coats-of-arms.
- (c) The rim will be plain.

After the Allied Governments had agreed to the proposal, the question was discussed how this medal should be distributed to the troops throughout the British Empire, and the obvious scheme of restricting it to troops who had been engaged in actual fighting at once presented itself. But on referring the matter to experts at the War Office who had been engaged in former distributions of war medals, it was found that, owing to the great depth of fire zone under modern conditions, the expressions "under fire" and "in the presence of the enemy" were very difficult to define with any degree of accuracy, and, therefore, that even if any precise definitions could be made, it would take many years to examine and adjudicate the claims of so many million men. Even then this distribution would be unsatisfactory. It was therefore decided that all that was possible was to give a distinctive reward to those who had entered a theatre of war. As regards the Army it was therefore proposed to restrict the Allies Medal to those officers and men who had entered a theatre of war on the strength of any military unit.

The problem as regards the Navy was somewhat different, although there would not be the same difficulty as would be experienced when dealing with the Army in distinguishing between those who had been engaged in fighting and those who had not, yet it was considered that the definition "all officers and men who had been afloat on duty" would be analogous to the definition applied to military personnel, viz., "all officers and men who had entered a theatre of war on duty and on the strength of any unit"—it was therefore decided to adopt the former condition of award for naval personnel.

If this analogy was carried on to the Air Force, it would necessarily follow that all those who had been up in the air would be eligible for the Allies Medal, but after consideration it was found that the qualifications in the Army and Navy could in no way be applied to the Air Force, and that distinct conditions of service would have to be drawn up. The Air Council therefore proposed the following:—

1. All officers and men who had been posted to a unit in any theatre of the War outside Great Britain.
2. All officers and men of operational units in Great Britain who have been actively engaged in the air against the enemy.
3. All officers and men employed on flying new aircraft to France.
4. All officers and men who have formed part of the complement of aircraft-carrying ships.

The operational units include those employed on the following duties:—

- (a) Airships employed on fleet reconnaissance, convoy work, and anti-submarine patrols.
- (b) Aeroplanes and seaplanes employed on coast reconnaissance and anti-submarine patrols.
- (c) Aeroplanes and seaplanes employed to protect Great Britain from hostile air raids.

The British Medal.

If the Allies Medal was to be given on these conditions, the question arose how the British Medal should be distributed. It was maintained by many that in a war of this magnitude a man on this side of the Channel had often done far more than a man at the base on the other side or in a distinct theatre of war. It was necessary also to take into consideration the fact that men had been sent to India or to the Colonies without being given the choice of going to a theatre of war. Not only in the British Isles, but also in the Dominions, men had been employed on important and necessary military duties. When a man was once enlisted he had no choice as to where he should serve, and whether he was kept at home or sent to a theatre of war was entirely a matter for the Government to decide. It was therefore proposed that every gazetted officer and every attested man should receive the British Medal, no matter where he had served.

Different Theatres of War.

A general desire was expressed to have a separate medal for each theatre of war, but, on inquiry, it was found that there were several hundred thousand men who had served in more than one theatre of war. As many as 150,000 had even served in four. As it would obviously be unjust to give these men four medals, while the greater portion of the Army serving in France would only receive one, it was decided to abandon the idea of separate medals for each theatre of war.

Battle Clasps.

It was first considered that, owing to the kaleidoscopic nature of the War, and the protracted periods and extensive areas covered by the battles, it would be impossible to award "battle" clasps.

It was thought that the examination of different claims would be such a vast undertaking that the issue of clasps would not be possible for many years. It was therefore decided to award "date" clasps only.

A very strong desire was, however, expressed that "battle" clasps should be awarded. It was represented that there was not the same urgency with regard to the issue of clasps as there was with regard to the issue of medals, and that the British soldier would prefer "battle" clasps, even though their issue would be protracted, than none at all. The matter was therefore reconsidered, and it has been decided that a special committee, composed of representatives of all three services—the Navy, the Army, and Air Force—will be appointed to decide what "battle" clasps should be awarded.

War Workers' Medal.

In the spring of 1915 the late Field-Marshal Lord Kitchener made the following announcement in the House of Lords:—

"I am glad to be able to state that His Majesty has approved that where service in this great work of supplying munitions of war has been thoroughly, loyally and continuously rendered, the award of the medal will be granted on the successful termination of the War."

The question has now arisen how Lord Kitchener's pledge can be put into practice. The matter has been carefully considered from this point of view by various committees appointed for the purpose.

The three main practical points which had to be considered were:—

- (a) To what classes of war workers, in practice, the medal could be awarded.
- (b) Whether existing machinery is available for the distribution of the medal.
- (c) Whether there is a desire on the part of the workers generally that this medal should be given.

Taking the second point first, there is no administrative machinery in existence which could give effect to the distribution of the medal, and the records of the late Ministry of National Service are not likely to be of much use in this connexion. Machinery would have to be set up for the purpose.

As regards the first point, there is the preliminary difficulty of defining "munitions of war." No justification can be sustained for distinguishing between the various kinds of munitions, such as guns, small arms, ammunition, and explosives, which no doubt were in Lord Kitchener's mind when he made his pledge, and those which have been developed since then, such as tanks, aeroplanes, poison gas; as well as equally essential articles, such as mechanical transport, railway materials, optical stores, machine tools, gauges, etc. Further, the claims of those engaged in the shipbuilding industry and the production of raw materials cannot well be ignored; while workers in many firms have often been concurrently engaged on munitions of war and essential civil work, in such a way as to make it impossible to distinguish between the workers engaged in each of these classes of work. There has also been a considerable flow of workers into and out of all factories.

If Lord Kitchener's pledge were to be read as applying to "war work" generally, it is probable that some 6,000,000 people would be affected. Even then it would not be easy to refuse a demand for the inclusion of workers engaged on "other Government work," much of which may be deemed to have been just as essential to the progress of the War as munitions, as well as of those engaged indirectly on war work and of those who have had to perform essential civil work under more difficult conditions.

It was, however, felt that, notwithstanding these difficulties, every effort must be made to find a way of honouring Lord Kitchener's pledge. It was thought that this might be done by narrowing it down to a class of war workers which had specially distinguished itself by doing unaccustomed war work under circumstances of special danger to life and health. These conditions emphatically existed in the case of women employed on dangerous occupations in filling explosives, and chemical factories.

Before, however, making any recommendation to this effect, it was thought to be very desirable that representatives of the employers and trades unions should be consulted. The Trades Union Advisory Committee were consulted, with the result that the representatives expressed themselves as being strongly against any award of a medal, either to all workers or to any particular class of workers.

In these circumstances, the project of giving a general war workers' medal has been reluctantly dropped.

It was originally intended that the medal of the Order of the British Empire should be utilized for recognizing good work generally in the case of war workers. Owing, however, to the very strongly expressed opinions of the workers themselves, this idea was abandoned and the grant of the medal has been confined to war workers who have, in the course of their service, shown special bravery or self-sacrifice, or who have performed some specially distinguished service. Including the January, 1919, Gazette, nearly 1,000 British Empire Medals have, so far, been awarded under these conditions. The medal is greatly prized by its recipients and its reputation stands very high with the public and the workers.

The Mercantile Marine War Medal.

It was universally acknowledged that, if any medals were to be given, the officers and men of the Mercantile Marine should be among the first to be considered. It was the King's wish that they should have a distinct medal of their own. Moreover, in view of the perils which they have faced in bringing food and other necessities to this country, transporting troops and munitions, and carrying on our overseas trade, it was felt by the Admiralty that they were fully qualified for the award of the British War Medal also.

It was therefore decided that the Mercantile Marine should be given a special Mercantile Marine War Medal and the British War Medal, the former being restricted to those who had served in a ship which had entered certain specified danger zones. The award of the Mercantile Marine Medal will include pilots, fishing fleets, crews of light ships, vessels employed under pilotage and lighthouse authorities, and Post Office cable ships.

The War Hospitals Service Medal.

The large number of both men and women who have worked under the Red Cross and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, both at home and abroad, during the War, clearly deserve recognition. Those who have entered a theatre of war will receive the same medals as the Army, but the services of those who have worked in hospitals at home cannot well be ignored. The fact that there would be no medal for war workers made any recognition of their services very difficult, but it has been decided to give a special medal, to be called the War Hospitals Service Medal, to all who have been engaged in actual hospital work in any part of the Empire.

Medals for Women.

Women borne on the strength of an organized force will, if they have entered a theatre of war on duty, be entitled to both the British and Allies Medal, but women belonging to any independent organization recognized by the War Office in any theatre of war will receive the British Medal only.

Precedence of Medals.

It has been decided that these medals and stars shall rank in the following order:—

- The 1914 Star.
- The 1914-15 Star.
- The British War Medal.
- The Mercantile Marine War Medal.
- The War Hospitals Service Medal.
- The Victory Medal.

The Composition and Design of the Medals.

The British War Medal will be made of silver, but all the others in bronze. The design for the British War Medal has been the subject of an open competition among artists, and the best artists in this competition have now been asked to design the Victory Medal for the troops of the British Empire.

I have, &c.,
BUXTON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 149.

MINUTE 1565.

(Confidential.)

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria,
29th October, 1919.

MINISTERS have the honour to inform His Excellency the Governor-General that they regard with grave concern the arrangements about war medals which are set forth in the printed Confidential memorandum headed War Medals, and dated 15th July, 1919, which was forwarded under cover of His Excellency's minute No 9/235/3, of 13th September, 1919.

2. Those arrangements appear to exclude from any war medal a considerable number of officers and men of the Union Defence Forces who have been held to service in the Union at defended ports and at other stations in the Union on garrison duty and other service directly connected with the War. Many of these were necessarily held to service in the Union, and were not permitted to volunteer for service overseas or in East and Central Africa owing to their services in the Union being considered indispensable for carrying on the garrison duties whereby Imperial troops were released, or the duties in recruiting, training, etc., the South African Imperial Service contingents.

3. Ministers desire to point out that, in their minute No. 818, of 26th May, 1919, they expressed concurrence in the proposals contained in the Secretary of State's telegram of 8th March, 1919, the first of which was that "every gazetted officer and attested man in the Navy, Army, and Air Force to receive British War Medal."

* No. 125.

† No. 142.

‡ No. 144.

§ No. 146.

4. Under cover of His Excellency's minute No. 9/235/3, of 6th June, 1919, a printed memorandum on War Medals was transmitted to Ministers, with the Secretary of State's despatch Dominions No. 326, of 30th April, 1919. In that memorandum, under the heading "The British Medal," it was stated: "Not only in the British Isles, but also in the Dominions, men had been employed on important and necessary military duties. . . . It was therefore proposed that every gazetted officer and every attested man should receive the British Medal, no matter where he had served."

5. Subsequently, under cover of His Excellency's minute No. 9/235/3, of 18th July, 1919, Ministers learnt from the Secretary of State's telegram of 16th July, 1919, that an Army Order regulating the issue of the British War Medal has been issued, but did not provide for officers and men who remained at home. That telegram intimated that His Majesty's Government had modified their view and thought it better in the first instance to restrict issue, but that a further communication would be made explaining the position and inviting the concurrence of Ministers.

6. Ministers, however, have received no such explanation, nor has their concurrence been invited in any alteration of the original proposals to which they had agreed. Another printed memorandum on War Medals, dated 15th July, 1919, was transmitted to them by His Excellency's minute No. 9/235/3, of the 13th September, 1919, covering the Secretary of State's despatch Dominions No. 649, of 13th August, 1919, which merely states that "this memorandum supersedes that already sent you, and embodies the arrangements as regards the British War Medal announced in the recent Army Order, of which copies are also enclosed." The Army Order is dated 16th July, 1919. The memorandum itself contains no sort of explanation or indication of the reasons why this most material change has been made. It repeats word for word the statement in the first memorandum about the Victory Medal, but contains an additional clause at the end as to the Victory Medal obviating an interchange of medals between the associated Powers. Under the heading British War Medal, the memorandum merely gives the second and third paragraphs of the Army Order of 16th July, 1919.

7. Ministers are quite in accord with the principles and proposals set forth in the memorandum so far as concerns the Victory Medal, and think that this is rightly confined to service in a theatre of war, but they find themselves entirely at a loss in understanding, and being able to agree to, the restriction in the issue of the British War Medal, which has the effect of altering the whole basis of the original arrangement to which they had agreed.

Ministers may possibly be labouring under some misunderstanding which His Majesty's Government will be able to explain, but in any case they feel assured that His Majesty's Government will be ready to suggest such alterations in the conditions of the British War Medal as will remove the general sense of injustice and dissatisfaction among officers, men, and nursing staffs held to service in South Africa which Ministers find is general and consider to be well grounded.

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 29th December, 1919.

My attention has been invited to Army Order 8 of 1918 which, as amended by Army Order 179 of 1919, reads:—

"It has been decided that officers or soldiers not definitely appointed for duty on the establishment of a unit serving overseas are not, by virtue of a visit to any theatre of operations for a temporary purpose, to become eligible for war medals unless specially authorized by the Army Council."

My Government request that His Majesty's Government arrange that the Army Council delegate to the Minister of Militia-in-Council the power to authorize the issue of war medals in special cases to officers and soldiers of the Canadian Forces who otherwise might not be eligible for them under the terms of Army Order 8.

The Department would also be glad to know what considerations are likely to be taken into account when, in special cases, the Army Council exercise the power conferred on them by Army Order 179.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE MEMORANDUM.

(8th November, 1919.)

THE following procedure is to be observed as regards correspondence relating to naval matters in the Dominions:—

(1) General questions of policy and large administrative questions will be dealt with by correspondence through the Governor-General and Secretary of State for the Colonies.

(2) Correspondence on routine subjects, such as contract arrangements as to ships, supply of stores,* engagement of men, business matters involving payments and receipts, and other matters of detail, will be dealt with through the respective High Commissioners.

(3) The following arrangements have been made as regards interchange of intelligence, confidential books, etc.:—

Canada: Direct with the Director of Naval Service, Ottawa.

Commonwealth of Australia: Interchange of intelligence: Through the Naval Representative on the staff of the High Commissioner. Supply of confidential books and printed matter: Direct with the Naval Secretary, Melbourne.

New Zealand: Direct with the Naval Intelligence Officer, Wellington.

(4) Letters as to the loan of individual officers' services are to be addressed to the Colonial Office, in order that the Secretary of State may inform the Governor-General, a copy of the letter to the Colonial Office being sent to the High Commissioner for information and any necessary action.

(5) In the case of the Dominion of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia, matters of advice and administrative details which are settled in Canada or Australia may be dealt with by direct correspondence between the Admiralty and—

(a) the Minister of Naval Service or Director of Naval Service, Ottawa.

(b) the Naval Secretary, Navy Office, Melbourne.

(6) The Senior Naval Officer, New Zealand, is to be kept informed of the more important correspondence with the New Zealand authorities.

(7) In order to secure a complete record in official correspondence any terms and conditions which have been discussed and agreed upon in intermediate correspondence that may be semi-official are to be embodied in an official letter before final action is taken.

(8) It is of great importance that the rule should be carefully observed that general questions of policy and large administrative questions must be dealt with through the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Governor-General, otherwise there is danger that the Governor-General may not be kept fully informed of matters of which he should be aware.

Should a case occur in which a correspondence on a question of policy is opened by the High Commissioner, or in which a correspondence on matters of detail develops so as to involve questions of policy, the Admiralty reply should be sent to the High Commissioner through the Colonial Office.

In any case of doubt as to the correct procedure to be followed, the Secretary or Assistant Secretary should be consulted.

(9) In communicating with the High Commissioners letters should be addressed in the following manner:—

Commonwealth of Australia: The Official Secretary, Office of the Commonwealth of Australia, Australia House, Strand, W.C.2.

Dominion of Canada: The Secretary, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 19, Victoria Street, S.W.1.

* NOTE.—In the case of Australia routine correspondence with regard to the supply of naval, victualling, ordnance, and medical stores may be carried on directly between the head of the Admiralty Store Department and the Official Secretary to the High Commissioner.

Dominion of New Zealand: The Secretary, Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, 413-416, Strand, W.C.2.
 Union of South Africa: The Secretary, Office of the High Commissioner for South Africa, 32, Victoria Street, S.W.1.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 30th July, 1919.

WITH reference to Mr. (now Viscount) Harcourt's despatch No. [573] [291] of the 14th of July, 1911,* regarding the status of Dominion Navies, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have recently had under consideration the rearrangement of naval stations abroad, including an alteration in the limits of the Australian naval station. A statement is enclosed setting out the limits now proposed.

2. It will be observed that under this rearrangement the Australian station, as well as the Canadian, Atlantic, and Pacific stations, will now include territory belonging to foreign Powers, and in this connexion the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have suggested that the alterations indicated below (by underlining [italics]), should be made in paragraphs 6, 7, and 8 of the Memorandum of Conferences between the British Admiralty and Representatives of the Dominions of Canada and Australia (subsequently published as Cd. 5746-2), copies of which were forwarded in the despatch under reference.

"6. In the event of the Canadian or Australian Government desiring to send ships to a foreign port outside of their own respective stations, they will obtain the concurrence of the Imperial Government, in order that the necessary arrangements with the Foreign Office may be made, as in the case of ships of the British Fleet, in such time and manner as is usual between the British Admiralty and the Foreign Office.

"7. While the ships of the Dominions are at a foreign port outside of their own respective stations, a report of their proceedings will be forwarded by the officer in command to the Commander-in-Chief on the station or to the British Admiralty. The officer in command of a Dominion ship, so long as he remains in such foreign port, will obey any instructions he may receive from the Government of the United Kingdom as to the conduct of any international matters that may arise, the Dominion Government being informed.

"8. The Commanding Officer of a Dominion ship having to put into a foreign port outside the limits of his own station, without previous arrangement, on account of stress of weather, damage, or any unforeseen emergency, will report his arrival and reason for calling to the Commander-in-Chief of the station or to the Admiralty, and will obey, so long as he remains in the foreign port, any instructions he may receive from the Government of the United Kingdom as to his relations with the authorities, the Dominion Government being informed."

3. I should be glad to learn in due course whether your Ministers concur in the proposals of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

4. A similar despatch has been addressed to the [Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia.] [Governor-General of Canada.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th November, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that as a result of proposals made by the Naval Representative in London of the Commonwealth of Australia, in May, 1919, it was arranged by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that a liaison should be established between the Naval Intelligence Division of the Naval Staff at the Admiralty and the Commonwealth Naval Representative. It was also arranged that the monthly Intelligence Reports of the Intelligence Division should be exchanged for information collected by the Commonwealth Government.

2. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty consider, however, that this arrangement is only the first step towards ensuring full co-operation on intelligence matters between the Admiralty and the Commonwealth Government, and they suggest that the assistant to the Commonwealth Naval Representative in London, or other officer selected by the Commonwealth Government, should attend the Naval Intelligence School for a course of instruction, so that he may thoroughly understand the intelligence organization and work, and then act in the closest liaison with the Naval Intelligence Division of the Naval Staff.

3. The Lords Commissioners further state that, with a view to completing arrangements for the exchange of information with the Commonwealth Government and systematizing the intelligence organizations, they are prepared to consider the question of lending to the Commonwealth Naval Board a qualified Senior Intelligence Officer from the Imperial Service, who would be paid from Imperial funds.

4. I shall be glad to learn the views of your Ministers on the above proposals for communication to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

ADMIRALTY to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 5th March, 1920.)

SIR,

Admiralty, 4th March, 1920.

I AM commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to request that you will inform the Secretary of State for the Colonies that they are desirous of affording representation to the Naval Forces of the Dominions and of India on the Naval Staff at the Admiralty.

2. The precise form which the organization of those Naval Forces will take in future is at present a matter of uncertainty. The recommendations of Admiral of the Fleet Viscount Jellicoe have still to be considered, and it is recognized that some time must elapse before a fully-thought-out and co-ordinated plan can be followed. But whatever the details of the plan may be, it is abundantly clear that provision must be made on the one hand for local interests and local effort, and on the other, for complete mutual understanding, co-operation, and unity of strategical thought.

* No. 166.

† Note.—It was subsequently arranged, in connexion with the reorganization of the Canadian Intelligence Service, that a Senior Intelligence Officer (Commander W. H. Fves) should be loaned by the Admiralty to the Canadian Government and paid from Canadian funds. (See Gov. 156901/20, Canada.)

548

3. To this end it is necessary to make the Naval Staff as early as possible a vehicle for the consideration in common of the naval aspects of Imperial policy, and the most practical and urgently necessary steps to be taken are (a) the training of Naval Officers from the Dominions and India in Staff work and (b) the attachment to the Naval Staff at the Admiralty of officers from the Dominions and India, so far as suitable officers are already available.

4. The object of the first step is to provide a gradually increasing body of Dominion officers qualified for Staff appointments, both in their squadrons and headquarters and at the Admiralty, and by associating United Kingdom and Dominion officers in their earliest training and study in Staff work, to give them a common outlook and ensure their sympathetic co-operation.

The second step, viz., the attachment of Dominion officers to the Naval Staff, is designed to ensure that the views of the Dominions are represented in full detail when the problems of Imperial Naval Defence are under discussion by the Admiralty. Some of these problems are urgent and cannot wait the evolution of a homogeneous staff.

5. These proposals will, no doubt, in the first instance present difficulty to the Governments of India and of some of the Dominions. So far as My Lords are aware, it is only to Canada and Australia that an invitation to nominate such officers could profitably be addressed at the present time. They would wish, however, the invitation to be made known to all the Dominions and to India, as it is most desirable that all should have in view the training, and the attachment to the Naval Staff, of suitable officers as soon as they become available.

6. It is therefore proposed, as a commencement, that the Dominion of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia should each be invited to nominate one or two officers to join the next course for Staff officers which commences at the Naval Staff College, Greenwich, in September next. The officers nominated should be of Commander's rank, or below. Further, it is desired that one officer from each of these two Dominions should be attached to the Naval Staff as early as practicable. These latter officers would be familiarized with Admiralty procedure and plans for future naval development, and would be consulted as to the functions of their own forces in the general strategical plan. They would be responsible to their own Chiefs of Staff, and would in the first instance be in the nature of liaison officers; but it is hoped that later they, or their successors, and other Dominion officers hereafter appointed, will take their place as an integral portion of the Naval Staff. These officers should also, for the present, be of Commander's rank, or below.

7. Both the officers appointed to the Staff Course, and those attached to the Naval Staff, would receive their pay and allowances from their respective services. The duration of the Staff Course is about twelve months. The period of an officer's attachment to the Naval Staff would be during the pleasure of his own Government, subject to any representations which the Admiralty may, from time to time, make with the object of adjusting the work of the Naval Staff in the most effective way.

8. I am to request that these proposals may be made known to the Governments of all the Dominions, and that the purport of them may be telegraphed to the Governments of Canada and Australia in order that there may be no avoidable delay in inaugurating the new scheme.

9. A similar letter has been addressed to the India Office.

15TH MARCH. Admiralty anxious to arrange for representation of Naval Forces of Dominions on Naval Staff at Admiralty with a view to creating machinery as early as possible which will facilitate consideration in common of naval aspects of Imperial policy.

Admiralty think that first practical steps are:—

Admiralty accordingly propose that one or two officers of Commander's rank, or below, should be nominated by Government of Dominion of Canada and Government of Commonwealth to join next course for Staff Officers, which commences at Greenwich next September. MY LORD DUKE, Downing Street, 7th December, 1917.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Admiralty have received from the Director of the Naval Service of Canada a letter, of which a copy is enclosed, suggesting that Article 191A of the King's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions should be extended so as to include the Royal Canadian Navy.

* No. 197.

2. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty ask me to explain that Article 191A, which runs: "Royal Australian Navy.—Officers of the Royal Australian Navy shall rank and command with officers of the Royal Navy according to their rank and seniority in the Royal Australian Navy"—was inserted in the Regulations as a natural corollary to the Order in Council of the 9th February, 1914, whereby the commissions of officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy are issued for service in "His Majesty's Fleet." A copy of this Order in Council was enclosed in Mr. (now Viscount) Harcourt's despatch, Confidential (2), of the 20th February, 1914.*

3. In order that effect may be given to the proposal of the Director of the Naval Service of Canada it would appear to be necessary that your Ministers should first make provision for the Naval Discipline (Dominion Naval Forces) Act, 1911, to come into operation in relation to the forces and ships raised by the Dominion; and also accept the principle of a common form of commission for service in "His Majesty's Fleet." In this connexion I would invite attention to Mr. Harcourt's despatch, Confidential, of the 17th August, 1912.†

4. I should be glad if your Ministers would give this matter their consideration, as the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty consider it very desirable that the position of the Royal Canadian Navy, in relation to the Royal Navy, should be placed on a sound basis.

I have, &c.,

WALTER H. LONG.

WITH reference to Admiralty Monthly Order 2759, of the 1st August, 1917, I have the honour to submit that Article 191 (a) of the King's Regulations may be further amended to include Royal Canadian naval officers, it having been already agreed that officers of the Royal Canadian Navy take rank and command with officers of the Royal Navy according to their rank and seniority in the Royal Canadian Navy. In view of the fact that the Regulations have been amended to that the Article in the King's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions should also include the Royal Canadian Navy.

 WITH reference to your Confidential despatch of the 7th December* regarding the suggestion of the Director of the Naval Service of Canada that Article 191A of the King's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions should be made applicable to the Royal Canadian Navy, I have the honour to inform you that the Minister of the Naval Service notes that it will be necessary that action be taken to make provision for the Naval Discipline (Dominion Naval Forces) Act, 1911, to come into operation in relation to the forces and ships raised by the Dominion before this regulation can apply to them. Action is at present under consideration in the Department of the Naval Service to have the Dominion naval forces, etc., placed under the Naval Discipline (Dominion Naval Forces) Act, 1911.

As soon as the necessary legislation has been enacted the question will be taken up further.

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 7th March, 1918.
 WITH reference to your Confidential despatch of the 22nd January,† regarding the position of the Royal Canadian Navy in relation to the Royal Navy, I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers represent that, in view of the decision that owing to legal difficulties it is not at present possible for a Courts Martial Commission to be issued by the Minister of the Naval Service of Canada to the Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies, authorizing that officer to convene a court for the trial of Canadian offenders, it would appear that Canadian officers should not be summoned to attend courts martial convened by the Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies.

In the past it has been customary for the Commander-in-Chief, when convening courts martial at Halifax, to summon Canadian officers who, by their seniority, were eligible to attend such courts martial. It would appear that if the Commander-in-Chief may not legally convene courts martial for the trial of Canadian offenders, Canadian officers cannot legally be summoned to attend the trial of Imperial offenders.

The Minister of the Naval Service would be grateful for a decision in regard to this matter at as early a date as possible.

REFERRING to your despatch No. 484, dated 31st July, 1914,‡ forwarding copies of additions to the King's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, in connexion with the application of the Naval Discipline Act to the naval forces of the Commonwealth of Australia, and also enclosing a commission authorizing the Vice-

Admiral Commanding His Majesty's Australian Fleet to convene courts martial for the trial of officers and men of the Royal Navy, my Government recommend, for the consideration of the Admiralty, that a similar commission be issued in my favour with a view to my deputing such authority to the Naval Board.

It is pointed out that the Naval Board is authorized by the Governor-General, under the Naval Discipline Act, as amended, to adapt it to the Royal Australian Navy under the Commonwealth Naval Defence Act, to convene courts martial, and the Vice-Admiral Commanding His Majesty's Australian Fleet similarly holds deputed authority to convene such courts for the trial of members of the Commonwealth Naval Forces. It would therefore seem proper that the Naval Board, as well as the Vice-Admiral Commanding His Majesty's Australian Fleet, should be furnished with the necessary authority under the Naval Discipline Act to convene courts martial for the trial of officers and men of the Royal Navy (whether on loan to the Royal Australian Navy or not).

Moreover, circumstances are very likely to occur wherein one of His Majesty's ships might be in a position to apply more readily to the Commonwealth Naval Board for the holding of a court martial than to any other authority holding an Admiralty warrant. Such a position has, in fact, existed when H.M.S. "Pyramus" was at Melbourne, and also when other of His Majesty's ships have been at Australian ports (refitting at Sydney, etc.). There are also sometimes persons belonging to the Royal Navy borne as care and maintenance parties of His Majesty's ships paid off at Sydney, and others undergoing detention in Australia.

In connexion with this matter I enclose herewith copy of the opinion of the Law Officers on this matter.

I have, &c.,

OPINION.—CROWN SOLICITOR.

PROPOSED REQUEST FOR AUTHORITY FROM ADMIRALTY TO NAVAL BOARD WITH RESPECT TO ROYAL NAVAL OFFICERS.

THE SECRETARY,

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

It has been proposed that a letter in the following terms be sent to the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

"With reference to your despatch No. 484, of 31st July, 1914, forwarding copies of additions to the King's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions, in connexion with the application of the Naval Discipline Act to the naval forces of the Commonwealth, and also enclosing a commission authorizing the Vice-Admiral Commanding His Majesty's Australian Fleet to convene courts martial for the trial of officers and men of the Royal Navy, my Government recommend, for the consideration of the Admiralty, that a similar commission be issued in favour of the Naval Board.

"It is pointed out that the Naval Board is authorized by the Governor-General, under the Naval Discipline Act, as amended in its adaptation to the Royal Australian Navy, to convene courts martial, and the Vice-Admiral Commanding holds a commission from the Governor-General to similarly convene such courts.

"It would therefore seem proper that the Naval Board, as well as the Vice-Admiral Commanding, should be furnished with the Admiralty warrant.

"Moreover, circumstances are very likely to arise wherein one of His Majesty's ships might be in a position to apply readily to the Naval Board for the holding of a court martial when a similar application to the Vice-Admiral Commanding would be out of the question. Such a position has in fact existed recently during the presence of H.M.S. 'Pyramus' at Melbourne, and also during the visits of H.M.S. 'Minotaur' and other of His Majesty's ships to Albany and Hobart. There are also at present Royal Navy ratings forming care and maintenance parties of H.M.S. 'Fantome' and 'Psyche' at Sydney."

The Minister for Defence has placed the following minute on the papers:—

"For opinion of Crown Solicitor.

"I am not satisfied that the procedure recommended in the attached proposed letter is the right one.

"I wish to be advised as to whether, in accordance with the spirit of the Naval Defence Act and Naval Discipline Act, the request should not be made for authority for the Governor-General or the Minister to authorize the Naval Board.

"In other words, should the Admiralty be asked to authorize the Naval Board to convene courts martial on Royal Naval Officers, or should the Admiralty be asked to confer such authority on the Governor-General or the Minister, who could by Order in Council delegate his powers to the Naval Board."

The Naval Board is constituted under section 7 of the Naval Defence Act, and its powers and functions, as a Commonwealth authority, are limited to those conferred on it by the Regulations in force under the Act. It is no part of the functions of the Board, as such Commonwealth authority, to have delegated powers from an Imperial authority conferred upon it.

It is, in my opinion, undesirable for a Commonwealth authority (other than the Governor-General) to hold a direct authority from the Imperial Government, or any authority directly under the Imperial Government, because the Imperial Government or authority would then become the direct principal of the Commonwealth authority.

The questions asked in the last paragraph of the Minister's minute appear to me to involve the consideration of matters of policy and constitutional propriety, and it might be more desirable if the questions were considered by the Attorney-General or the Secretary to the Department than by me.

PROPOSED REQUEST FOR AUTHORITY FROM ADMIRALTY TO NAVAL BOARD WITH RESPECT TO ROYAL NAVAL OFFICERS.

THE ACTING ATTORNEY-GENERAL,

SUBMITTED.

The Admiralty has recently issued a commission authorizing the Rear-Admiral Commanding His Majesty's Australian Fleet to convene courts martial for the trial of offences under the Naval Discipline Act committed by officers and men of the Royal Navy when the Royal Navy and the Royal Australian Navy are acting together.

It has been suggested that, as the Governor-General has, under the Naval Discipline Act, as amended in its adaptation to the Royal Australian Navy, authorized both the Naval Board and the Vice-Admiral to convene courts martial, a commission similar in effect to that issued to the Rear-Admiral be issued by the Admiralty to the Naval Board.

The Minister desires advice as to whether the proper course is for the Admiralty to be asked—

(a) to authorize the Naval Board to convene courts martial on Royal Naval officers; or

(b) to confer such authority on the Governor-General or the Minister, who could by Order in Council delegate his powers to the Naval Board.

I submit that the second course proposed by the Minister of Defence is the correct one. I agree with the Crown Solicitor that, as a general rule, it would be inadvisable for a Commonwealth authority (other than the Governor-General) to hold a direct authority from the Imperial Government.

I recommend that the Minister for Defence be informed accordingly.

R. R. GARRAN,
Secretary.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 218.]

(No. 852.)

SIR, Downing Street, 31st August, 1916.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty your despatch No. 152, of 10th May last,* relative to the desire of your Government that you should receive a commission to enable you to depute to the Naval Board authority to convene courts martial for the trial of officers and men of the Royal Navy.

2. The Lords Commissioners fully appreciate the desirability of authorizing an officer in Australian waters to convene courts martial from time to time as necessary, and they would have been glad if they could have met the wishes of your Ministers in the matter, but they are advised that, having regard to the terms of section 58 (9) of the Naval Discipline Act, it is not within their power to issue the desired warrant.

3. Their Lordships observe, however, that this technical difficulty need not give rise to any practical inconvenience, since an Admiralty warrant to convene courts martial can be issued to any officer of the Royal Navy or Royal Australian Navy of suitable seniority and on full pay, and they accordingly suggest that such a warrant should be issued to them, either to one of the naval officers on the Naval Board, provided that he is on full pay, or to the Commodore in charge of the naval establishments at Sydney, he being also on full pay.

4. I shall be glad to learn the views of your Ministers on this suggestion, and, if it meets with their approval, to be informed to which of the above-mentioned officers they would desire to have the Admiralty warrant issued.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 28th August, 1917.
REFERRING to your despatch No. 852, dated 31st August last,* on the subject of naval courts martial for the trial of officers or men of the Royal Navy should any of His Majesty's ships be within the limits of the Australian station, I have the honour to transmit herewith copy of despatch which has been addressed to me by my Prime Minister on this subject.

I have, &c.,
R. M. FERGUSON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 218.

(17/2034/5.)

SIR,

Prime Minister, Melbourne, 22nd August, 1917.

WITH reference to the Secretary of State for the Colonies' despatch of the 31st August, 1916, No. 852, on the subject of naval courts martial for the trial of officers or men of the Royal Navy should any of His Majesty's ships be within the limits of the Australian station, I have the honour to invite Your Excellency to be so good as to inform the Secretary of State that it is considered that it would be most convenient if an Admiralty warrant for that purpose could be issued to the first and second members of the Commonwealth Naval Board. It is doubtful, however, whether the power to do this exists, in view of the fact that these officers hold no "naval appointment," are not borne on the books of one of His Majesty's ships, and do not exercise their office by virtue of their naval rank and seniority, but under the authority of an appointment by the Governor-General in Council under section 7 of the Commonwealth Naval Defence Act and the Regulations made thereunder. It is, therefore, submitted for the decision of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty whether these officers are "on full pay" within the meaning of section 58 (9) of the Naval Discipline Act.

The proposal that the Captain in charge at Garden Island, Sydney, should be granted the Admiralty warrant is not considered desirable, except as a last resort, in view of the difficulties which might arise owing to an officer subject to the Naval Board being in possession of authority which cannot be exercised by the Board which is constituted by Commonwealth Legislature for the administration of the whole of the naval forces of the Commonwealth.

I have, &c.,

2. I am to add that the position is recognized by Their Lordships to be anomalous, but, in the circumstances, it is the only alternative which will permit of officers and men of the Royal Navy being tried by court martial on the Australian station.

YOUR Secret despatch, 18th February, 1920;* meetings of Admirals of the China, East Indies, and Australian stations. Commonwealth Government suggests that the first meeting be held about March next, in Melbourne, and invites the Commanders-in-Chief of East Indies and China stations to be guests of the Commonwealth for that meeting. It is considered that the business to be discussed will deal largely with resources of Australia, and it would be better if first-hand particulars were obtained in Australia; further, during the last few years, much information regarding the Pacific, which would be of great use to conference, has been collected by Navy Office, Melbourne.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

WITH reference to your telegram, 8th October,* with regard to cordite, Lords Commissioners of Admiralty state that development of new type propellant is strongly recommended by Moulton's Committee, and that research in this direction is being pressed with a view to obtaining one without latent instability which appears inherent in nitro-cellulose and nitro-glycerine propellants. It is hoped that within the next few years successful results will be achieved. Therefore Admiralty consider that in view of possible complete change in manufacture of propellants it would be waste of effort to take extreme measures in order at once to start production of cordite in Australia for naval purposes. They recommend that actual manufacture should be deferred, and that suitable persons should be selected by Navy Board, e.g., officers with artillery training, to form inspection staff, and that arrangements should be made for their training in England. Admiralty will give all assistance in training officers and testing competence.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 5th November, 1920.

In confirmation of my telegram of the 3rd November, 1920,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before Your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a letter from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth of Australia, on the subject of the manufacture of naval cordite in Australia.

Enclosure in No. 226.

(M./G. 8908.)

(Secret.)

SIR,

Admiralty, 19th October, 1920.

WITH reference to your letter N. 73, of the 1st June, I am commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you that they have had under consideration the request of the Navy Board for Admiralty assistance in the institution of a qualified inspection staff to supervise the manufacture of cordite for naval purposes in Australia.

2. The Admiralty find considerable difficulty in meeting the request of the Navy Board.

3. As you will be aware, during the War several explosions occurred in the magazines of His Majesty's ships which resulted in the total destruction of the vessels concerned.

4. As a result extensive research was made into the stability of cordite under conditions of naval service.

5. As a result, a large number of additional complications have necessarily been introduced into the manufacture of cordite, and additional tests have been imposed. None of these can be dispensed with without endangering the safety of the vessels in which the cordite is embarked.

The whole matter was recently discussed by a Committee under the chairmanship of Lord Moulton.

6. The minimum staff for inspection purposes would consist of (a) an Inspector with a thorough knowledge of manufacture of cordite and of the manufacture and purification of the constituents employed. This officer must also be familiar with all forms of test, and be able to direct the work of the laboratory staff employed in connexion therewith. In addition, he must be able to deal with questions relating to the ballistics of the cordite, the proof and adjustment of the charges, make up, storage, the periodical testing of charges, etc.

(b) An Assistant Inspector to understudy (a). This officer must be of the standard of education sufficient to enable him to acquire the knowledge to understudy the Inspector and ultimately to succeed him.

(c) A staff of research chemists for elucidating points which will frequently arise in connexion with inspection. The chemists employed in the Admiralty Laboratory Inspection Staff at Holton Heath have only to carry out routine tests and investigations, since abstruse questions are referred to the Chief Superintendent of Research, Woolwich, who has a large and highly qualified staff of physicists and chemists working continuously under him. If reference to such a laboratory is not possible in Australia, the Laboratory Inspection Staff must themselves be highly qualified.

7. The Admiralty Inspection Staff is already below the numbers required, and it will therefore not be possible to lend any officers from this staff.

8. My Lords are keenly alive to the desirability of the Commonwealth becoming self-supporting, as far as is practicable, in every branch of naval development, and they desire that you will communicate to the Navy Board the following suggestions as to the way in which the difficulty may be met.

* No. 225.

9. Lord Moulton's Committee, mentioned above, strongly recommend the development of a new type of propellant, and research in this direction is being pressed on with a view to obtaining one without the latent instability which appears to be inherent in nitro-glycerine and nitro-cellulose propellants. It is hoped that successful results will be achieved in the course of the next few years.

10. In view therefore of the possibility of a complete change in the manufacture of the propellants, My Lords consider it would be a waste of effort to take extreme measures in order to start the production of cordite for naval purposes in Australia at once. They would recommend:—

(1) That the actual manufacture of cordite for naval purposes in Australia should be deferred.

(2) That the Navy Board should select suitable persons, e.g., officers with artillery training, to form the inspection staff, and should arrange for them to undergo the necessary training in England.

The Admiralty will give all assistance in training the officers and testing their competence.

11. It would then be possible for the manufacture of propellants for naval use to be started, with confidence that they can be safely carried in His Majesty's ships—a project which may be of the greatest importance in the future in the maintenance of ammunition supplies to a Fleet working in Eastern waters.

It is observed, however, that even with the trained staff obtained as suggested above, it will still be necessary, unless the risk of instability in the propellants has by then been removed, to keep in close touch with the Admiralty at home in order to ensure that modifications in manufacture are introduced as their necessity becomes apparent.

12. I am to add that it would be too much to expect of an officer that he should be qualified to carry out the duties of Inspector of Naval Ordnance Stores, Torpedoes and Mines, as well as those of Inspector of Cordite.

I am, &c.,

O. MURRAY.

No. 227.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 23rd December, 1920.)

(Confidential.)

My LORD, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 3rd November, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Lordship that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the position with regard to the manufacture of ammunition in Australia is as follows:—

The Department of Ammunition Supply is turning out in the Maribyrnong factory sufficient gun and rifle cordite to meet the needs of the Military (Defence Department). In another portion of the Maribyrnong factory plant has been erected to manufacture one type of fuze (No. 80) for the Defence Department. This is the extent to which the Government manufacture has advanced at present.

The policy of the Department is to build up gradually an establishment having two distinct sides:—

- (a) A manufacturing side which shall in time be able to produce a certain quantity of the various items under the general head of ammunition (required by the Defence Department), i.e., projectiles, tubes, fuzes, etc.
- (b) A laboratory or examination side which shall be equipped to carry out the prescribed acceptance tests of any ammunition or other war material which may be made by the Government factory or by private firms in Australia.

The Commonwealth Government has realized that the first step towards manufacturing ammunition in Australia must be to set the standard of accurate measurement and high quality of materials required, holding the view that when these standards are known and can be dealt with by the Government, private firms will come forward and equip their factories to satisfy them.

To carry its policy into effect the Government is erecting laboratories on a considerable scale at Maribyrnong. The general equipment and machines which are to be installed are on up-to-date lines, and have already arrived in Australia. The laboratory is divided into three sections, one dealing with chemistry, one particularly with metallurgy, and the third is a more general physical department. The whole forms an establishment designed particularly to deal with explosives and ammunition, but in addition to serve as a well-equipped physical laboratory, which will be available to undertake work for the armed forces of the Commonwealth.

When the laboratory has been completed it is proposed gradually to extend the plant for the manufacture of ammunition to meet the requirements of the Military, and it is here that the question arises as to what should be the policy with regard to the manufacture of ammunition for the Navy. Is it in fact desirable that advantage should be taken of the facilities which are beginning to exist for acceptance of ammunition into the service and the ability to manufacture consequent upon the existence of such facilities, for the manufacture of ammunition for the Navy, and, if so, to what extent?

The Naval Board consider that, so far as the needs of the Royal Australian Navy are concerned, it would be wise to encourage the manufacture of war material within the Commonwealth in strict accordance with Admiralty practice, in view of the necessity of reducing dependence on sea transit in time of war, but the general policy to be pursued will be influenced largely by the value attached by His Majesty's Naval advisers to the ability to manufacture munitions of war in Australia from the point of view of replenishing supplies of His Majesty's ships which may operate in Australian waters in the event of war.

Ministers desire therefore that the views of His Majesty's Government on this subject may be communicated for their information. Should these views show that the ability to manufacture in Australia would be a distinct advantage to the Royal Navy, the Government would be glad if an indication of the most useful line of development could be given, together with information as to whether, as a matter of general policy, His Majesty's Government would be disposed to lend to the Commonwealth Government, from time to time, one or more qualified members of the Admiralty Inspection Staff to ensure that manufacture and development are proceeding on the approved lines.

SECRET. With reference to your telegram of 1st September,* Government of New Zealand, after consulting with, and acting on the advice of, Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, desires to have as a temporary measure a coal-burning light cruiser in place of H.M.S. "Canterbury," which is an oil-burner. My Government, however, now desires a light cruiser carrying 6-inch gun-armament, and not a vessel of the "Bristol" class. The Government further desires to take over with the vessel the whole complement of officers and men, and in this connexion it is understood that in the complement should be included any officers and men of New Zealand birth who volunteer for this service. The Government desire that the other conditions should stand as expressed in the correspondence between my Prime Minister and the Admiralty during the former's visit to England and Paris in connexion with Peace Conference, to the effect that it is intended that New Zealanders shall, as opportunity offers, replace the crew. With regard to your telegram of 20th September,† relative to the reduction of the fleet my Prime Minister is in communication with Lord Jellicoe, and the latter states that when he receives further information from the Admiralty he will communicate on the subject with my Prime Minister.—LIVERPOOL.

Your telegram 4th October, your telegram 4th November.§ Admiralty desirous of meeting to utmost possible extent wishes of your Government according offer H.M.S. "Chatham." Proposed that ship shall be handed over with complete permanent equipment as a free gift. Manned at expense of your Government whole cost of maintenance to be borne by New Zealand Government from date of her commissioning at port in United Kingdom for service under your Government, including expense of fuel and consumable stores required for consumption during voyage from England.

* No. 228.

† See No. 245.

§ Nos. 229 and 230.

Position as to British naval personnel considerably changed since spring when Massey was in correspondence with Admiralty. Then suggested by Massey that ship should be manned in first instance by Admiralty, and British crew should be withdrawn gradually and places taken by New Zealanders as latter became available. As a result of reduction to peace basis now in progress there will be surplus British naval officers and men over naval requirements. This necessitates reduction in number of personnel, to facilitate which free discharge for classes and ratings in which there is surplus, and, within certain limits, of men wishing to leave Navy now in progress. Accordingly Admiralty will be unable to lend or second ratings for short period service with New Zealand naval force. Proposed, therefore, that complement of men for "Chatham" consist of men volunteering to be permanently transferred from British Navy and enrolled in New Zealand naval service, preference being given to men of New Zealand birth or connexion.

Same arrangement preferable regarding officers, but it may not be altogether impracticable to lend some officers for limited period.

On receipt of views of your Government Admiralty will call for volunteers for transfer at once, but it will be necessary to state rates of pay. Therefore requested that rates of pay, including allowances and conditions regarding pension or bonus to officers and men, may be communicated. Suggested for consideration volunteers, officers and men, might be more easily obtained in present circumstances if invited to volunteer for service on a short engagement, e.g., for period of three years at same rates of active pay and allowances, including separation allowances, as are granted in Royal Navy or Royal Australian Navy, whichever higher, plus deferred pay.

Necessary to call for volunteers at once, as surplus ratings at present existing, many of whom of best type, will disappear very soon in view of free discharges offered.

Admiralty therefore wish to state something definite in time to obtain volunteers from surplus.

Fully realized that New Zealand rates when finally settled must to some extent run parallel to Australian rates.

Recommended that Admiralty be authorized to inform men that if Australian rates raised, New Zealand rates when fixed will not be less. Unless your Government willing to make these promises cannot expect men to volunteer, as naturally men will go where paid most, and probably undesirable that Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments should be competing for services of men at different rates.

Considered that any officers whilst lent should receive as much as in New Zealand permanent naval force. Owing to recent increase in pensions of Imperial Navy, it is contemplated increasing annual sums payable to Admiralty by Dominion Governments in respect of ultimate pensions and position now being investigated.

Admiralty desire to learn at the earliest possible date whether above proposals acceptable to your Government. If, however, New Zealand Government unable to adopt proposals at once, as an alternative H.M.S. "Chatham" could be sent out to New Zealand waters as part of British Navy, being manned by Imperial officers and men, annual contribution based on estimate of cost of maintenance, paid by New Zealand Government, and actual movements and employment subject to wishes of New Zealand Government: cost of maintenance "Chatham" estimated at £172,000 a year.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

Service, to what extent they would be responsible for pensions of the ratings within a short period of completing time for pension. The Admiralty, it is presumed, would continue to be responsible for them, my Government contributing towards the cost.

(2) Would officers and men invited to volunteer for three years' service be discharged finally from Royal Navy before the transfer to the New Zealand Naval Service with the consequent option of discharge by the New Zealand Government to the shore either in Great Britain or New Zealand at the expiration of such term, or would they continue to be held by their Admiralty agreements and be required afterwards to return to the Royal Navy? The statement that the Admiralty will be unable to lend or second ratings for short periods of service is viewed with some concern by my Government, as this appears to be in conflict with Lord Jellicoe's proposals for a New Zealand division of the Royal Navy, vide paragraphs 2 and 3 of chapter 3 of Volume 1 of His Lordship's report, and paragraph 15 of his covering letter (No. P.187, of 3rd October, 1919), and seems to preclude the suggested policy from being adopted.—LIVERPOOL.

Volunteers for Naval Reserve under Government of New Zealand cannot be called for until terms to be offered are known. There are two categories under which officers and men would volunteer: (1) Those who join permanently and are permanently transferred from British Navy. They would sign undertaking that they understand they forfeit all claim to British pension or gratuity but must know New Zealand alternative terms; (2) Those who are lent for a period of, say, three to five years, and for whom Government of New Zealand would pay certain pension liabilities to the British Government. Both these categories are allowed for in Commonwealth terms. As regards category (2) men will, on completion of period, either return to Navy or be discharged to shore as their engagements with British Navy require. In order to adjust the Imperial Naval Estimates the Admiralty would be obliged if the Government of New Zealand would let them know whether they propose to accept the number of officers and men required to man "Chatham" on New Zealand votes. May it be presumed it is preferred that ship should be known as H.M.S. "Chatham" rather than H.M.N.Z.S. "Chatham"? Latter alternative involves inter alia legislation which will take time. Ends.

Am desired by Prime Minister to send following reply for information of His Majesty's Government, and to ask you to forward a copy of same to the High Commissioner for New Zealand. Begins: In reply to telegram of 1st March from High Commissioner for New Zealand, volunteers for "Chatham" should be offered same terms as those offered by Government of Commonwealth of Australia. Ratings permanently transferred from British Navy will be required to volunteer for a period of three years and paid deferred pay at Commonwealth rates and passages under same conditions as Commonwealth are offering. Ranks and ratings lent to serve Government of New Zealand for three years with passages out and home if required, and this Government will pay pension liabilities. Government will accept officers and men required to man "Chatham" on New Zealand votes from date ship commissions. In this connexion please see telegram to Secretary of State for the Colonies dated 20th February.* Ranks and ratings would be required for "Philomel," numbers as yet uncertain, and it is desired as many as possible of these should take passage in "Chatham." Prefer ship should be styled H.M.S. "Chatham" for the present but eventually to be H.M.N.Z.S. 3. You will have under your command H.M.S. "Veronica," which is a vessel under the orders of the Admiralty.

"Veronica." You will be informed as soon as possible of the decision on this question.

5. A copy of the Standing Orders (M.41272 of 16th April, 1920), which were issued to H.M.S. "Veronica," is attached for your information.

6. Commander T. A. 7. The District Intelligence Officer, Wellington, will be under your orders, but will remain on the books of H.M.S. "Tamar."

PLEASE inform your Ministers as follows: Steps are now being initiated by Admiralty to complete reduction of Fleet to peace basis and consequent reduction of personnel and disposal of surplus vessels. Question how many vessels will be required by Dominions is involved. Vessels concerned include battle cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, minesweepers, sloops, patrol gunboats, motor launches, coastal motor boats, drifters, and trawlers. Decision as to total numbers required must, it is realized, wait decision on Lord Jellicoe's recommendations. But it would greatly assist Admiralty if such requirements as can be foreseen could be communicated at early date. It is anticipated that if the Dominions so desire both officers and men of the Royal Navy would volunteer in considerable numbers to man these vessels. Such notification is desired, specially as regards minesweepers, sloops, patrol gunboats, motor launches, drifters, and trawlers, since, owing to their rapid deterioration and the depreciation of the present market value whilst awaiting disposal, it is a matter of urgency that vessels of these classes surplus to Imperial requirements should be sold for commercial use.—MILNER.

SIR,

Admiralty, 1st December, 1919.

WITH reference to your letter of the 20th June, N.413, I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you, for the information of the High Commissioner, that the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury have approved of H.M.S. "Encounter" being transferred as a free gift to the Commonwealth of Australia.

It is desired that the guns and mountings and armament stores (other than torpedoes and paravanes) may be landed and taken on "Imperial" charge by the Naval Ordnance Officer, Sydney, pending decision as to their disposal. With regard to torpedoes and paravanes it is suggested that they should be landed and placed in charge of the Torpedo Engineer Officer, Sydney, for the time being. MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 24th December, 1919.

WITH reference to your telegram of the 5th December,‡ communicating an offer to the Dominion Government of surplus war vessels, if needed, to assist in the development of their naval forces, I have the honour to transmit the accompanying copy of a minute from my Ministers.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 283.

(Minute 1769.)

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 18th December, 1919.

MINISTERS have the honour to state with reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's minute 2/1927, of 8th December, 1919, that it will be quite impracticable for the Union Government to consider the question of availing itself of the generous offer of His Majesty's Government contained in the Secretary of State's telegram of 5th December, 1919, until Ministers have had the opportunity of consulting Admiral Lord Jellicoe.

His Majesty's Government is, no doubt, aware that the Union Government possess no war vessels of any description at present, and the question of acquiring any such vessels is therefore one which involves, so far as concerns the Union of South Africa, the whole and difficult problem of naval defences and cannot be dealt with until that problem has been fully considered in consultation with His Majesty's Government.

29TH JUNE. Ministers are considering questions of increasing strength of South African Division R.N.V.R. by four companies. In this connexion they refer to minute enclosed with my despatch 24th December last, No. 931,* and consider that pending opportunity of obtaining Admiralty views on naval defence of South African waters something might be done to provide for mine-sweeping. They inquire whether Admiralty could place at their disposal from two up to twelve vessels which could be used when required for mine-sweeping, but normally could be used for trawling or whaling, or for investigation and research in connexion with development of fishing industries. MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Capetown, 29th June, 1920.

IN confirmation of my telegram of the 29th June,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship the accompanying copy of a minute from my Ministers regarding a proposed increase in the strength of the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve and provision for mine-sweeping in South African waters.

2. The South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve was established under the provisions of section 22 of the South Africa Defence Act, 1912, to which effect was given by an Order of His Majesty in Council dated the 7th March, 1913, of which copies accompanied Mr. (now Viscount) Harcourt's despatch No. 125 of the 20th March, 1913.‡ I understand that the Division did very excellent work during the War.

3. The minute of the 18th December, 1919, regarding surplus war vessels, to which my Ministers refer, was communicated to Your Lordship with my despatch No. 931 of the 24th December.*

4. In regard to research work in connexion with the development of fishing industries, I may refer to the correspondence on the subject of the loan of the whaler "Pickle" for this work—my despatch No. 16 of the 16th January, 1920,§ and connected correspondence. It is stated that the investigations carried out by the aid of this vessel have already yielded notable results.

Enclosure in No. 304.

MINUTE 632.

Prime Minister's Office, Capetown, 18th June, 1920.

MINISTERS have the honour to inform His Excellency the Governor-General that they have had under consideration the question of increasing the strength of the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, and contemplate the addition of one company each to the existing two companies at Capetown and one at Durban, and further the establishment of two new companies, one at Port Elizabeth and one at East London. Ministers would be glad to have the views of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty on this suggestion. It commends itself to them as likely to be useful in view of the proof of the utility of the Division at its present strength, which has been demonstrated so signally since the Division was established in July, 1913.

2. As a further step towards the development of naval assistance and co-operation as the resources of the Union permit, Ministers contemplate that provision might be made for mine-sweeping in South African waters.

In their minute 1769 of 18th December, 1919, Ministers stated that they were not in a position to consider the question of availing themselves of the generous offer of His Majesty's Government to place surplus war vessels at the disposal of the Union for naval purposes until they had had the opportunity of consulting Admiral Lord Jellicoe, but seeing that further delay is likely to occur before the Union Government can obtain a considered statement of the Admiralty's views on the subject of local naval defence in South African waters, Ministers consider that something might advantageously be done in the meantime to provide for mine-sweeping.

3. Ministers would be glad therefore to know whether the Admiralty could place at their disposal from two up to twelve vessels which could be used when required for mine-sweeping, but normally could be used for trawling or whaling, or for investigation and research work in connexion with the development of fishing industries. Two vessels could almost certainly be used continuously to great advantage for the last-named purpose. Were such vessels available, Ministers would be glad to consider and in conjunction with the Admiral Commanding Africa Station prepare a scheme for obtaining and training crews for mine-sweeping. This might possibly be done as a further extension and development of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve organization, but in any case it would necessarily have to be carried out in the closest co-operation with the Africa Squadron of the Royal Navy based on Simonstown.

No. 305.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE ACTING GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Confidential)

SIR,

Downing Street, 28th October, 1920.

WITH reference to Viscount Buxton's telegram of the 29th June, and to his despatch No. 420 of the same date,* transmitting a copy of a minute from Ministers regarding the proposed increase in the strength of the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, and provision for minesweeping in South African waters, I have the honour to state, for the information of Your Excellency's Ministers, that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty consider it to be a matter of high importance to the Empire that all steps should be taken to develop the reserve forces in the Dominions, and they therefore welcome the proposed increase in the South African Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. The future peace training and development of the Reserves generally are now engaging their Lordships' attention, and it is hoped shortly to forward a copy of the approved scheme, so that the South African Royal Naval Reserve may be developed and trained on similar lines to those which experience has shown to be most suitable and necessary.

2. Their Lordships are at present considering various schemes for the control of mercantile traffic in time of war, the establishment of temporary bases in time of war, the arming and commissioning of vessels for convoy protection, and the organization of mine-sweeping and boom defence services, which they hope in due course to communicate to the Dominion Governments.

* Nos. 303 and 304.

3. The proposed increase in the strength of the South African Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve will much facilitate the completion of these schemes, which the experience of the late War has shown to be a necessary part of the Imperial Naval War organization. In view of the varied requirements specified in the foregoing paragraph, their Lordships would be glad to learn, in due course, what classes of officers and men it is proposed to include in the increased South African Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, and also the extent of their proposed training and availability for rapid mobilization.

4. With regard to the request of the Union Government for certain vessels in connexion with the development of the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty state that they are not authorized to transfer vessels having a commercial value as a free gift for use for commercial purposes. They are, however, prepared to offer to the Union Government vessels of the following classes, as and where they lie, at the prices stated, subject to the ships being available for disposal at any given date:—

- (a) Sloops (Flower Class), £20,000 each.
- (b) Sloops ("24" Class), £20,000 each.
- (c) Paddle Minesweepers (Ascot Class), £20,000 each.
- (d) Twin Screw Minesweepers (Hunt Class), £20,000 each.
- (e) Trawlers (steel), 125 feet, Canadian built; not fitted with fishholds, etc., £10,000 each.
- (f) Drifters (wood), 84 feet, Canadian built, not fitted with fishholds, etc., £4,000 each.

5. The prices quoted for trawlers and drifters are for sale where they lie in Canada, and would be subject to revision if the vessels have been brought to England, by the addition of an amount to cover the cost of voyage and of any work done on the vessels. Steps are being taken to remove them to England before the coming winter.

6. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty add that they have power to transfer war vessels, including vessels of the types mentioned above, free of charge if they can be employed entirely for Naval purposes. For example, should the Union Government desire vessels of convenient type to form a permanent mine-sweeping school for any fleet of commercial trawlers which they may acquire, they will be glad to advise on the best type available, and to hand over the vessels chosen.

I have, &c.,

SIR, Downing Street, 11th April, 1919.

WITH reference to the letter from this Department of the 10th of March,* I am directed by Viscount Milner to transmit to you, to be laid before the Local Government Board, the accompanying copies of letters from the Local Government Board for Scotland,† the Local Government Board for Ireland,‡ and the Home Office,§ on the subject of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, together with a copy of a further letter|| which has been addressed to the Local Government Board for Scotland. A copy of the despatch which was sent to the Governments of the Dominions and the Australian States on the 17th of December, 1914,¶ forwarding copies of the revised Bill, is also enclosed.

2. I am to observe that, although the Bill arose out of a resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1911, it is nevertheless a technical one, providing the necessary legal machinery in the United Kingdom to carry out the proposed objects, and leaving any Dominion or Colony which may wish to participate in the scheme to provide corresponding machinery of its own by local legislation.

3. Now that the principles of the Bill have been settled and the necessary communications made to the oversea Governments concerned, the Secretary of State feels that the details of the measure can best be dealt with by the Minister who has at his disposal expert knowledge of the legal procedure connected with maintenance orders in this country.

4. Lord Milner will, accordingly, be glad if the Board will take steps to have the Bill introduced into Parliament, and will take charge of it. Dr. Addison will no doubt take into consideration the question whether one of the Law Officers of the Crown should be asked to assist with the Bill in the House of Commons.

5. I am to ask that the references to Cyprus in clause 12 (2) may be omitted before the Bill is introduced.

I AM directed by the President of the Local Government Board to advert to your letter of the 11th ultimo,* with reference to the draft Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill.

Dr. Addison desires me to point out with reference to paragraph 4 of your letter, that the Board are concerned with the Bill only to a very limited extent, viz., only in so far as it would apply to cases of maintenance orders where the person in whose favour the order is made is chargeable to the rates in England and Wales. As the Bill deals with the enforcement of maintenance orders generally, and moreover would apply to the whole of the United Kingdom, Dr. Addison considers that the Bill is not one which should be introduced by him. He suggests that the Home Secretary might advantageously be asked to introduce and take charge of the Bill.

SCOTTISH OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 24th July, 1919.)

[Answered by No. 17.]

SIR, Scottish Office, Whitehall, S.W.1, 23rd July, 1919.

I AM directed by the Secretary for Scotland to refer to the draft Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, and to state, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that he desires to offer the following observations thereon:—

Clause 3.—Under this clause the taking of evidence in an undefended cause would appear to be contemplated. It is understood that the present practice in Scotland is for a decree to be granted in such a case without any hearing and without the taking of any evidence, and it is suggested that, if it is intended that evidence should be taken in undefended causes of the nature referred to in the clause, this should be specifically prescribed.

In subsection 5 of the same clause it is provided that the confirmation of a provisional order shall not affect any power of a Court of Summary Jurisdiction to vary or rescind that order: in view, however, of the fact that Courts have no power apart from the provisions of the clause to issue provisional orders, it would appear safer that power to vary or rescind such orders should be specifically conferred.

* No. 6.

† No. 7.

Clause 4 (1).—This clause provides for the issue of a summons by the Court. In Scotland, however, it does not issue a summons, the practice being for a law agent to prepare a summons and to obtain a warrant from the Court for its service, which is effected either by post or by a Sheriff Officer. Presumably, under clause 11 (b) the law agent for the poor could take the necessary steps in accordance with the usual practice to secure the service of the summons, but he would inevitably incur some expenses in so doing. It would appear necessary that some provision should be made for payment of such expenses. Similarly, though witnesses would not often be called on behalf of the pursuer, it might occasionally be necessary so to do to rebut any evidence tendered by the defender, and provision for the expense thereby incurred would appear desirable.

Clause 6 (1).—The enforcement of an order would require the employment of a Sheriff Officer or a Messenger-at-Arms: such officials are paid not by salary but by fees received from the person employing them, and seeing that the cost of such employment might not be recovered from the defender, or, if recovered, might be so only after a long delay, it is suggested that the payment of an officer employed to enforce an order would require to be provided for.

Enclosure in No. 11.

SIR,

Government House, Halifax, Nova Scotia, 19th June, 1919.

REFERRING to your despatch of the 6th May last, inviting my attention to previous correspondence regarding the draft Bill of the Imperial Parliament for the reciprocal enforcement of maintenance orders, I have now the honour to enclose copy of a letter from the Deputy Attorney-General, which embodies the views of my Ministers on the subject.

I have, etc.,

McCALLUM GRANT,

Lieutenant-Governor.

The Under-Secretary of State, Ottawa.

DEAR SIR,

Halifax, Nova Scotia, 17th June, 1919.

REFERRING to previous correspondence respecting the draft Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa, and inquiring whether, in the event of this legislation being passed by the Imperial Parliament, it would be advisable for the Nova Scotia Government to enact reciprocal provisions, I beg to inform you that I have considered the matter and it seems to me that if the Bill is enacted by

* No. 47 in Dominions No. 51.

† See note to No. 27 in Dominions No. 59.

the Imperial Parliament it would be of very little service to this Province. - Its application would, I think, be confined to the enforcement in the United Kingdom of affiliation orders and judgments or decrees for alimony made in this Province.

The maximum amount of an affiliation order is only $150.00, and the costs of enforcing such an order in the United Kingdom would be prohibitive. Judgments, or decrees, for alimony are comparatively rare, and it would, probably, be as easy, and not more expensive, to bring an action in the United Kingdom on the judgment, or decree, as to proceed under the provisions of the proposed legislation.

If the Province were to agree to an Act with reciprocal provisions, I think it would be necessary to make some alterations in the Act that this Province would pass, particularly in the case of maintenance orders made in the United Kingdom by a court of summary jurisdiction, as I do not think that the procedure prescribed by the proposed Act in such cases would be applicable to this Province.

Justices of the Peace in Nova Scotia have summary jurisdiction in certain cases, but they are not Courts in the strict sense of the term, or Courts that could register a maintenance order made in Great Britain. I am quite sure that a large majority of the Justices of the Peace in Nova Scotia would not understand the procedure to be followed, and the assistance of a lawyer would be necessary, which would add to the expense, and, probably, render the costs as large as the amount sought to be recovered under the maintenance order. The object sought to be obtained by the legislation is desirable, but it seems to me that, to make it effective, the procedure prescribed ought to be as simple as possible, and should not entail any expense out of proportion to the amount involved.

Yours truly,

F. F. MATHERS,

Deputy Attorney-General.

To the Deputy Provincial Secretary.

Government House, Charlottetown,

Prince Edward Island, 17th June, 1919.

SIR,

IN reply to a despatch of 19th December last from the Acting Under-Secretary of State, enclosing a draft of a Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, I beg to state that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor (owing to his illness) has instructed me to say for him that his Ministers have not as yet given the matter of the aforesaid Bill any consideration, and the only information that His Honour has to give in reply to the said despatch is that the Premier and Attorney-General of this Province assert that there seems no necessity for any legislation in this Province securing the enactment of reciprocal provisions.

I have, etc.,

A. E. MACDONALD,

Private Secretary.

The Honourable the Secretary of State, Ottawa.

SIR,

Government House, Toronto, 29th May, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch of the 19th December last regarding a draft Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa, and subsequent despatches relating thereto.

As was stated in the preliminary reply to the said despatch, dated the 18th day of January last, my Government sent a copy of the said Bill to the Chairman of the Commission regarding the Uniformity of Provincial Laws for submission to the said Commission.

My Government has received from the said Commission a report to the effect that the said Commissioners had discussed the matter of the proposed Bill, from which report the following is quoted:—

"The Conference of Commissioners would gladly welcome a proposal from the Imperial Authorities to join in adopting reciprocal legislation in the Imperial Parliament and in the Ontario Legislature and in the Legislatures of the other Provinces of Canada, and even throughout the British Dominions, whereby the judgments in any of the various Courts throughout the Empire might be enforced in all the Dominions, or countries being parts of the Empire, other than the place in which the judgments are given. All of such judgments should, in the opinion of the Conference, be obtained after personal service (or what would be equivalent thereto) upon the party condemned; but the members of the Conference are practically unanimous that it would be unwise and inexpedient to adopt the legislation proposed for introduction into the Imperial Parliament, because that legislation is so limited in its application, and is, in their opinion, so liable to create hardship, that the result would be that the acceptance by Ontario, or another Province, of the proposed Bill for the enforcement of judgments would, instead of leading to a general Act for reciprocal enforcement of judgments, tend in the opposite direction, and we would be less likely to get the general Act by reason of our having one such as that proposed to be introduced into the Imperial Parliament.

"As the claims under the proposed Act would probably be small, and the defendants impecunious in the majority of cases, it would not be fair to a defendant here to compel him to defend himself in England, or to go without a defence in this country.

"We, therefore, cannot advise the Government of Ontario to accept, or act upon, this proposed legislation, or to enact reciprocal legislation limited so much as that suggested, but at the same time we would welcome legislation in general terms for reciprocal enforcement of judgments generally throughout the Empire, or as between Great Britain and Ontario."

My Government considers the conclusion arrived at by the Commissioners to be correct, and does not think, in view of the report of the said Commission, that it should take steps to secure the enactment by the Legislature of this Province of reciprocal provisions of the limited character set out in the draft Bill above mentioned.

I have, etc.,
JOHN S. HENDRIE,
Lieutenant-Governor.

The Honourable the Secretary of State, Ottawa, Ontario.

SIR, Government House, Regina, 8th April, 1919.
I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch of 19th December, 1919, enclosing, to be laid before my Ministers, a draft of a Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa, and requesting to be informed whether, in the event of legislation being passed by the Imperial Parliament on the lines of this measure, my Ministers, upon consideration of the Bill, would be prepared to take steps to secure the enactment of reciprocal provisions in the Legislature of this Province, and informing me that the Bill was then before the Imperial Parliament, and has been accepted in principle by the Governments of all the other Dominions throughout the Empire.

I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Ministers that they would be prepared to take steps to secure the enactment of reciprocal provisions in the Legislature of this Province.

I have, &c.,
R. S. LAKE,
Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan.

The Honourable the Secretary of State, Ottawa, Ontario.

SIR, Government House, Victoria, British Columbia, 12th May, 1919.
IN reply to your despatch of the 9th ultimo, on the subject of a draft Bill of the Imperial Parliament for the enforcement of maintenance orders, I have the honour to inform you that my Attorney-General expresses himself as follows:—

"I am prepared to recommend that legislation be enacted, making such orders, secured in any of His Majesty's dominions, outside of British Columbia, against a person residing in this Province, and forwarded here for enforcement, provisional only, and of no effect unless and until confirmed by a competent Court of this Province, on due notice to the defendant, and on production of the depositions upon which such order was obtained, and the hearing of such evidence as the defendant may adduce in opposition thereto."

I have, &c.,
F. S. BARNARD,
Lieutenant-Governor.

The Under-Secretary of State, Ottawa.

DEAR SIR, Government House, Winnipeg, 15th March, 1919.
REVERTING to your Department's despatch of the 19th December last, transmitting draft of a Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa, I now enclose herewith copy of a letter received from the Department of the Provincial Secretary, also the letter therein referred to from the Attorney-General.

Yours truly,
J. A. M. AIKINS,
Lieutenant-Governor.

The Honourable the Secretary of State, Ottawa.

MADAM, Winnipeg, Manitoba, 14th March, 1919.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 3rd instant, calling attention to your previous communication of the 31st December last, enclosing draft Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of the Dominions, and vice versa.

In this connexion, I now have the honour to enclose herewith, for the information of the Secretary of State, the view of His Honour's Ministers on this question, as expressed by the Honourable the Attorney-General for Manitoba.

I have, &c.,
B. L. BALDWINSON,
Deputy Provincial Secretary.

Miss C. M. Laing,
Acting Private Secretary,
Government House, Winnipeg.

SIR, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Re Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1914.

I HAVE your letter of the 3rd instant, enclosing draft Bill herein.
It is difficult for the Government of the Province to answer with much certainty as to whether or not such legislation would work out satisfactorily if the Legislature of Manitoba saw fit to enact the necessary legislation to carry out the desired ends.

Our legislation at present would not enable such a scheme as is proposed to be carried out. Hence, new legislation would have to be enacted by our Legislature.

Before the scheme of the draft Bill can be carried out it would be advisable that the substantive law, which leads to the orders, or judgments, referred to in the draft Bill, be uniform, otherwise our Courts would be really enforcing orders, or judgments, under laws which our Legislature has not approved of, and similarly with the Courts of the United Kingdom.

It is desirable, also, that the substantive law on such a matter be uniform, not only as between the United Kingdom and Manitoba, but as between Manitoba and the other Provinces of Canada. In a new country like Manitoba the laws as to maintenance do not, as I understand it, go so far as the laws in an old country like England, Ireland, or Scotland. Similarly, there are at present differences between the maintenance laws of Manitoba and the laws which prevail in the other Provinces of Canada.

At present there is a Commission for all Canada, which has to do with the promotion of the uniformity of laws for Canada. This Commission is taking steps to have the laws throughout Canada made uniform in all important matters. I have referred this draft Bill to this Commission, so as to get its view of this proposed legislation, as it seems eminently proper that it should first pass on such matter before any sort of a final answer is given in regard to what legislation might be enacted by the Legislature of Manitoba. When an answer is received from this Commission I can again write you in this matter.

Yours very truly,
THOS. H. JOHNSON,
Attorney General.

B. L. Baldwinson, Esq.,
Deputy Provincial Secretary,
Buildings.

THE PROVINCIAL SECRETARY-TREASURER, FREDERICTON.

DEAR SIR, Chatham, New Brunswick, 24th January, 1919.

YOUR communication of the 19th December last to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor was, together with the draft of a proposed Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders, etc., laid before the Executive at a meeting held in the forepart of this month, and was referred to me for reply thereto.

I have much pleasure in informing you that whenever the Executive of this Province is informed of legislation having been passed by the Imperial Parliament, on the lines of said proposed Bill, the Executive shall be prepared to take steps to secure the enactment of reciprocal provisions in the Legislature of this Province.

Yours very sincerely,
ROBT. MURRAY,
Provincial Secretary-Treasurer.

F. Colson, Esq.,
Acting Under-Secretary of State,
Ottawa, Ontario.

SIR, Government House, Edmonton, 9th January, 1919.
WITH further reference to your despatch, 3588 S/BG, dated 19th December, 1918, I have the honour to forward you herewith a memorandum from the Attorney-General on a draft Bill to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa.

I have, &c.,
RICHARD T. STAFFORD, Major,
Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Thos. Mulvey, Esq.,
Under-Secretary of State,
Ottawa.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL, ALBERTA.

Edmonton, 6th January, 1919.

Memorandum for Provincial Secretary.

THE Executive Council has had under consideration the Bill intituled an Act to facilitate the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's dominions, and vice versa, and has decided that, as the Province of Alberta has no Poor Laws such as exist in the United Kingdom and Ireland, and as conditions here are not such that we expect to require similar legislation, the reciprocal provisions in this Bill would not be of any advantage to this Province. It has further been decided that to undertake to enforce maintenance orders against English immigrants in the Province of Alberta would likely have the effect of driving such immigrants across the border into the United States, and therefore it has been decided not to introduce legislation providing for reciprocity in the matter of maintenance orders.

J. R. BOYLE,
Attorney-General.

(1631/18.)

Province de Québec.

MONSIEUR, Hotel du Gouvernement, Québec, 1^{er} avril, 1919.
J'ai l'honneur, pour faire suite à votre dépêche, No. 3588, en date du 19 décembre, 1918, de vous transmettre le rapport de l'assistant procureur-général de la province de Québec, aux conclusions duquel mon gouvernement adhère entièrement.

J'ai l'honneur, etc.,
C. FITZPATRICK,
Lieutenant-Gouverneur.

L'honorable Secrétaire d'Etat,
Ottawa.

Québec, ce 26 mars, 1919.

RAPPORT SUR UNE RÉFÉRENCE DE L'HONORABLE SECRÉTAIRE DE LA PROVINCE, RELATIVE À UN PROJET DE LOI IMPÉRIALE INTITULÉ: "BILL TO FACILITATE THE ENFORCEMENT IN THE UNITED KINGDOM OF MAINTENANCE ORDERS MADE IN OTHER PARTS OF HIS MAJESTY'S DOMINIONS, AND VICE VERSA."

Le soussigné a l'honneur d'exprimer l'avis qu'une dépêche, basée sur les considérations suivantes, soit transmise au Secrétaire d'Etat du Canada, relativement au projet de loi ci-dessus mentionné:—

La question qui est soumise pour examen est celle de savoir si, advenant le cas où la législation prévue par le projet de loi dont il s'agit, serait adoptée par le Parlement Impérial, le gouvernement prendra les mesures nécessaires pour faire adopter une législation réciproque par notre législature.

Le soussigné, après avoir pris connaissance des documents ne voit pas d'objection au principe du Bill, qui d'ailleurs existe déjà dans notre Code de procédure civile, articles 210, 211, et 212.

Le projet de loi tend à rendre exécutoire dans le Royaume-Uni, sur simple enregistrement, les jugements pour pension alimentaire rendus dans les Dominions contre un défendeur dûment assigné. Une législation réciproque rendrait exécutoire dans la province de Québec de semblables jugements rendus dans le Royaume-Uni.

Une semblable législation existe en Angleterre, en Russie et en Irlande, et les jugements rendus dans une partie du Royaume-Uni, deviennent exécutoires dans l'autre sur simple enregistrement.

L'article 212 du Code de procédure civile va déjà très loin quant à ce qui concerne les jugements rendus dans les autres provinces, et il y a très peu de différence entre empêcher de produire une défense à l'encontre d'une action basée sur un jugement dans certain cas, et décréter qu'un tel jugement pourrait être exécuté après simple enregistrement.

Pour rencontrer l'esprit du projet de loi pour ce qui regarde l'exécution dans la province des jugements rendus contre certains défendeurs dans le Royaume-Uni, il suffira d'ajouter l'article suivant dans le titre des Jugements et de mentionner cette exception dans l'article 210.

"Art. . . Un jugement rendu dans le Royaume-Uni contre un défendeur assigné personnellement, ou qui a comparu, ordonnant le paiement d'une pension alimentaire pourra être entré dans les registres de la cour supérieure ou de la cour circuit, selon le cas; et un tel jugement ainsi enregistré pourra être exécuté dans cette province comme s'il avait été rendu par le tribunal de la cour où il a été enregistré."

Il reste le cas d'un jugement pour pension alimentaire rendu dans le Royaume-Uni contre un défendeur qui n'a pas été assigné personnellement ou qui n'a pas comparu et qui est transmis à une cour de cette province pour confirmation.

Ce cas tombe actuellement sous l'article 210 du Code de procédure civile, et il suffirait de l'assimiler au cas prévu par l'article 211, soit les jugements rendus dans les autres provinces du Canada, pour rencontrer l'esprit du projet de loi.

Le projet de loi procède cependant ensuite à indiquer la procédure à suivre depuis la réception de tel jugement jusqu'à la transmission de sa confirmation à la Cour qui a rendu le jugement principal. (Voir art. 3 du projet de loi.)

Si la procédure proposée tendait à améliorer notre mode de procéder, il y aurait lieu de tirer profit de la suggestion, mais il n'en est pas ainsi.

L'article 1,220 du Code civil déclare authentiques les copies des jugements rendus hors du Bas-Canada, lorsqu'elles sont revêtues du sceau de la Cour ou de la signature de l'officier ayant la garde légale du dossier de tel jugement.

L'article 552 du Code de procédure civile déclare en outre qu'un jugement par défaut peut être rendu sans preuve dans une action fondée sur un acte authentique. Donc, pas de nécessité de nous transmettre tout un dossier et pas de nécessité non plus de modifier notre procédure.

Dans le cas de contestation, on a oublié de nous dire quoi faire, à moins que l'on ne veuille nous faire procéder comme on se propose de le faire dans le Royaume-Uni, quant il s'agira de jugements rendus dans la province de Québec, Art. 4, sections 3, 4, et 5; voir aussi art. 3, section 3; c'est-à-dire que, au lieu de laisser nos tribunaux libres d'appliquer l'art. 211 ou autres semblables, on les forcerait, ainsi que le défendeur, à accepter le certificat d'un officier quelconque comme contenant tous les points de la défense qui auraient pu être soulevée si une défense avait été produite.

Je crois qu'il vaut mieux conserver intactes nos règles sur la contestation et l'enquête que d'accepter celles que l'on semble indiquer.

Les mêmes remarques s'appliqueraient aux jugements pour pension alimentaire rendus dans la province de Québec et transmis pour confirmation à une cour quelconque dans le Royaume-Uni.

Si le défendeur fait défaut après signification d'une action basée sur un tel jugement, ce dernier devrait être admis comme authentique et jugement devrait intervenir sans preuve et sans qu'il soit nécessaire de transmettre tout un dossier. Si le défendeur juge à propos de produire une défense, il nous faudra accepter le mode de procéder proposé par le projet de loi qui est, je suppose, le meilleur que l'on ait trouvé pour faciliter la confirmation de ces jugements.

Il y a un autre point sur lequel je désire attirer l'attention, savoir; que les jugements et documents les accompagnant devront être transmis d'une cour à une autre par l'entremise du lieutenant-gouverneur, du gouverneur général, du Secrétaire d'Etat et vice versa, ce qui a donné à l'auteur du projet de loi en question l'occasion de dire que le Secrétaire d'Etat pourra établir des règles pour faciliter les communications entre les différentes cours. Art. 5.

Il est bon de conserver notre autonomie et par suite nous ne pouvons consentir à ce que l'on donne au Secrétaire d'Etat la faculté de faire des règles concernant la procédure devant nos tribunaux.

Le moyen le plus simple serait de laisser l'initiative aux intéressés, et l'on continuera à voir un procureur ici communiquer avec son correspondant à Londres et ailleurs et vice versa.

Pour toutes ces considérations, le soussigné ne voit pas d'objection à ce qu'une loi soit adoptée par la législature ayant pour objet:—

10.—De rendre exécutoire après enregistrement au greffe de la cour supérieure ou de la cour de circuit, selon le cas, les jugements pour pension alimentaire rendu dans le Royaume-Uni;

20.—D'amender l'article 211 du Code de procédure civile de manière à assimiler les jugements pour pension alimentaire rendus dans le Royaume-Uni aux jugements rendus dans les autres provinces du Canada, et, à permettre la production d'une défense à l'encontre d'une action basée sur un tel jugement si le défendeur n'a pas été assigné personnellement ou n'a pas comparu.

L'assistant-procureur-général,
CHARLES LANCTOT.

I AM directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Sir H. J. Read's letter of the 13th instant,* with reference to the draft Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, and to state that, as intimated in the letter of the Local Government Board of the 5th May last,† this Department are concerned with the Bill only in so far as it would apply to cases of maintenance orders where the person in whose favour the order is made is chargeable to the rates.

The Department had, therefore, not considered the provisions of the draft Bill from the point of view of their adequacy as affecting courts of summary jurisdiction, which they regard as a matter within the cognizance of the Home Secretary. The question referred to in Sir H. J. Read's letter has been looked into by officers of the Department, and it would seem to them that some provision as to expense may be required, but the question appears to be one on which the Home Office should be consulted.

SIR,

Home Office, Whitehall, 3rd October, 1919.

HAVING laid before Mr. Secretary Shortt your letter of the 17th ultimo,* on the subject of the proposed Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, I am directed by him to say that, in his opinion, it would be difficult to justify the expenditure of public moneys for the purpose of enforcing private claims such as those with which the Bill deals, made by persons living outside England, and he fears that any machinery created for such a purpose could only be put effectively in motion by persons able to employ solicitors in this country to enforce their rights. There are great difficulties in the way of making any exception to the general rule that, while the Courts are open to all British subjects for the recovery of moneys due to them, and that, when such proceedings succeed, the costs incurred are ordinarily payable by the defendant, such costs must in the first instance be paid by the complainant. If, however, Viscount Milner considers it important to proceed with the Bill, Mr. Shortt does not think it necessary, so far as the English Courts of Summary Jurisdiction are concerned, to make special provision for costs under clause 4 (1) or 6 (1). A summons issued under clause 4 (1) on a requisition from the Secretary of State would be served by the police in the ordinary course of duty. Mr. Shortt feels doubtful what manner of rules will be found desirable for prescribing procedure under clause 6 (1), but he sees no reason to suppose that, if such rules are made, any difficulty will arise in respect of costs in executing the necessary process.

He presumes that the Bill is not intended to apply to affiliation orders, but thinks some doubt might arise on this point which might be precluded by an amendment of clause 10.

H. B. SIMPSON.

SIR,

Downing Street, 30th October, 1919.

I AM directed by Viscount Milner to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3rd of October,† regarding the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, and to request you to inform Mr. Secretary Shortt that he is advised that, in view of the definitions of "maintenance order" and "dependents," the Bill applies to affiliation orders, but not to provisional affiliation orders, since an illegitimate child whom the alleged father has not yet been made liable to maintain is not one of his "dependents," and consequently not a person in respect of whom a maintenance order could be applied for under clause 3 of the Bill in the United Kingdom.

2. If, however, there is any Colony to which the Act may be extended in which, under the local law, an illegitimate child is the "dependent" of the putative father without any order having been made against him, it is clear that, under the local equivalent to clause 3 which will have to be passed in that Colony, a provisional affiliation order might be made in the Colony against a man in the United Kingdom and sent to this country for confirmation and enforcement under clause 4, etc., of the Imperial Act. Lord Milner is, however, not aware of the existence of any Colonial law of the kind in question.

3. If Mr. Shortt concurs in the above construction (which represents a policy which, it was thought, had been accepted by his predecessors), but now desires to exclude affiliation orders, as well as provisional affiliation orders, Lord Milner will offer no opposition to an amendment of clause 10.

[Answered by No. 19.]

SIR,

Home Office, Whitehall, 18th November, 1919.

IN reply to your letter of the 30th ultimo,‡ I am directed by Mr. Secretary Shortt to say, for the information of Secretary Viscount Milner, that, in view of Mr. Burns's speech at page 210 of the Minutes of Proceedings of the Imperial Conference, 1911 [Cd. 5745], that "We are under the impression that injustice might be done, or at least we did think injustice might be done, if it was intended to apply this to putative fathers and to bastardy and maintenance orders for illegitimate children, and I am very pleased to see that Dr. Findlay applies it only to desertion of wives and children by their husbands and fathers," the wording of the resolution at page 211, "That, in order to secure justice and protection for wives and children who have been deserted by their legal guardians, either in the United Kingdom or any of the Dominions, reciprocal legal provisions should be adopted in the constituent parts of the Empire in the interests of such destitute and deserted persons," and, in view of the definition in the draft of the Bill of the word "dependants," it has always been assumed that the Bill was not intended to apply either to the obtaining or to the enforcement of affiliation orders. Mr. Shortt is advised that a child in respect of whom such an order has been obtained is not a "dependant" of the man against whom the order is made, nor is the man, according to our law, "liable to maintain" that child. As the Bill stands, therefore, clause 1 would not apply to the enforcement of affiliation orders, nor would clause 3 apply to the obtaining of provisional affiliation orders. As doubt has arisen on the point, and as Mr. Shortt notices that the Government of Nova Scotia are under the impression that the Bill applies to the enforcement of affiliation orders, he thinks words should be introduced to make it quite clear that such orders are not within the scope of the Bill.

(Received 10th December, 1919.)

[Answered by No. 22.]

SIR,

Scottish Office, Whitehall, S.W., 9th December, 1919.

WITH reference to your letter of 19th ultimo,|| and to previous correspondence regarding the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Bill, I am directed by the Secretary for Scotland to say that he has, in consultation with the Lord Advocate, given further consideration to this draft Bill with a view of arriving, if possible, at some method whereby the provisions of the Bill might be made workable in Scotland.

The main difficulty in the way is that indicated in the last two paragraphs of the letter from this Office of 23rd July last,¶ and unless some provision is made for the employment of solicitors to conduct the necessary proceedings before courts, and to defray the expenses involved, Mr. Munro fears that the scheme of the Bill could not be made effective in Scotland. At the same time he feels the force of the objections taken in the Home Office letter of 3rd October last to the expenditure of public moneys for the purpose of enforcing private claims in civil courts.

In these circumstances Mr. Munro is reluctantly inclined to the conclusion that the Bill should not apply to Scotland, but before arriving at a definite decision on the matter he would suggest that the position might with advantage be discussed at an interdepartmental conference representative of the various departments concerned.

MONSIEUR,

J'ai l'honneur, pour faire suite à votre dépêche, No. 3263, en date du 4 novembre, 1920, de vous informer que mon gouvernement, après un nouvel examen des amendements à apporter à la loi aux fins de faciliter l'exécution des jugements extra-territoriaux relatifs à certaines matières et après avoir considéré la loi sanctionnée en Angleterre le 16 août, 1920, est d'opinion qu'il n'y a pas lieu de modifier la procédure de cette province sur cette matière.

Referring to your despatch of the 4th ultimo, relative to the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to inform you that my Government see no reason for departing from the attitude expressed in June, 1919, and further that it does not appear to be practicable, in this Province, to pass such an Act as would be workable.

DEAR SIR,

The Executive Council, Fredericton, 5th March, 1921.

At a meeting of the Executive Council, held on the 9th day of November, 1920, departmental despatches on the subject of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, were considered and ordered filed.

SIR, Government House, Victoria, British Columbia, 27th November, 1920.

In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, relative to the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to state that my Deputy Attorney-General informs me that his department has nothing to say with regard to proposed legislation in this connexion further than what was expressed in a letter from my predecessor in office dated the 12th of May, 1919.

I have, &c.,

E. J. L. PRIOR,
Lientenant-Governor.

The Under Secretary of State,
Ottawa.

Enclosure 5 in No. 28.

SIR, Government House, Regina, 6th May, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch of 18th March last, No. 3263, and previous despatches in relation to the subject of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920.

I am advised that both this subject and the subject of reciprocal enforcement of judgments generally has received a great deal of consideration at the hands of my Ministers, and while they are favourably disposed towards enacting reciprocal legislation as to the enforcement of judgments, including maintenance orders, it is their opinion that before such legislation is enacted the matter should be considered very carefully by the Canadian Bar Association through its Committee or by the Commissioners on Uniformity of Laws. To this end my Ministers are taking the necessary steps immediately.

I have, &c.,

H. W. NEWLANDS,
Lientenant-Governor of Saskatchewan.

The Honourable
The Secretary of State,
Ottawa.

Enclosure 6 in No. 28.

SIR, Edmonton, 1st February, 1921.

I have, &c.,

DEAR SIR,

REFERRING to the communication of Mr. Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, enclosing despatch from Downing Street, and again suggesting that legislation should be passed by this Province as contemplated by 10 and 11 Geo. V., Chap. 33 English Statutes, I beg to say that this matter has been fully considered by the Executive Council of this Province, and it has been decided that it would not be in the public interest that the legislation suggested by Downing Street should be passed by the Legislature of this Province.

DEAR SIR, Winnipeg, 2nd August, 1921.
 REVERTING to departmental despatch of the 10th June on the subject of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, of the Imperial Government, I am advised by my Attorney-General that the above legislation has been considered informally by the Board of Commissioners for the Promotion of Uniformity of Legislation in Canada, but that no recommendation has yet been made by the Board in regard thereto, and that until such time as the Board does make a recommendation it would not appear advisable for this province to take any action by itself.

In the meantime, the matter is to be further considered by my Government and by its law officers, so that any necessary action can be taken when the Board of Commissioners above-mentioned has made its recommendation.

2. It had been gathered, however, from the despatch from Sir R. Munro Ferguson (now Viscount Novar), No. 43, of the 24th February, 1915,* that the Commonwealth Government would be willing to introduce the necessary reciprocal legislation in respect of the Northern Territory, Papua, and Norfolk Island; and it was to these territories that Lord Milner's despatch No. 440, of the 20th October, 1920,† and my despatch No. 225, of the 6th June,‡ were intended to refer.

Secretariat Note.—The position disclosed in the correspondence following on the Secretary of State's despatches of 20th October, 1920 (Nos. 24-27), to the end of 1921 (with the exception of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia, for which see above) was as follows:—

A Bill was introduced into the New Zealand Parliament in November, 1921 (see Governor-General's despatch No. 277, 5th November, 1921, 1077/21/22). The Governor-General of the Union of South Africa stated in March, 1921 (No. 130, of 14th March, 16396/21), that Ministers hoped to introduce legislation, but that it might have to be postponed until 1922.

The following Governments intimated their intention of introducing legislation during 1921, or later:—

Newfoundland (Governor's despatch No. 22, of 4th February, 1921, 9154/21).

New South Wales (Governor's despatch No. 80, of 24th November, 1921, 1451/21/22).

South Australia (Governor's despatch No. 21, of 8th August, 1921, 48580/21).

Western Australia (Governor's despatch No. 31, of 15th August, 1921, 48539/21).

Tasmania (Governor's despatch No. 22, of 10th August, 1921, 48475/21).

The "Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act" (No. 24, of 1921), was passed by the Parliament of Queensland, and the provisions of the Imperial Act were extended to that State by Order-in-Council of the 6th February, 1922.

No reply was received from Victoria.

SIR,

Toronto, Ontario, 17th March, 1917.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch of the 28th ultimo asking whether my Ministers are desirous that the provisions of the Judgments Extension Bill should extend to this Province, and to advise that my Attorney-General states that it is considered it would not be wise to depart from the rule laid down by the Privy Council that a judgment should not be given any extra-territorial recognition unless the defendant was domiciled or resident in the country in which the judgment was obtained at the time of service or voluntarily attorned to the jurisdiction of the Court by appearing to its process.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

Halifax, 31st August, 1917.

REFERRING to your despatch of the 8th instant, and to previous correspondence on the subject of the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, orders, and awards in the United Kingdom and other parts of His Majesty's Dominions, I have the honour to inform you that, in the opinion of my Attorney-General, it is not desirable that the Bill in its present form should extend to this Province, that from the point of Nova Scotia the principle of the Bill is unobjectionable, but that the operation should be restricted so as not to apply to judgments obtained by default.

I have, &c.,

MC. GRANT,
Lieutenant-Governor.

The Under Secretary of State,

Enclosure 3 in No. 35.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., 19th March, 1918.

MY DEAR SIR ROBERT,

Re Judgments Extension Bill.

REPLYING to your favour of the 12th instant, in the above matter, I regret the delay in the premises.

In August last, I submitted the Bill for the approval of the Bar Society here, and also to the Judges of the Supreme Court. I received a reply from the Secretary of the Bar Society approving of the draft Bill, and received a reply about the same date from the Chief Justice informing me that he would submit the Bill for the consideration of his colleagues, but up to the present time have had no reply. I again took up the matter with the Chief Justice, and he now informs me that they are agreeable to such legislation being passed.

I therefore see no reason why there should be any objection on the part of this Province, and therefore give consent to the proposed Bill.

Yours faithfully,

A. E. ARSENAULT.

The Right Honourable
Sir Robert Borden, G.C.M.G.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa.

* No. 95 in Dominions No. 61.

Enclosure 4 in No. 35.

DEAR SIR, Government House, Winnipeg, 3rd September, 1919.
 REVERTING to departmental despatch of 8th May, concerning the subject of the Judgments Extension Bill of the Imperial Parliament, after consideration, the conclusion reached by my Ministers is that no considerable amount of interest in the Bill in its present shape would be likely to be forthcoming; that, on the other hand, if the principles underlying the Bill were extended in such a way as to make reciprocal the enforcement of judgments throughout the Empire, there would be very little likelihood of a single dissenting voice to a proposal to pass legislation in this Province to carry out that object.

The subject of a Judgments Extension Act in Canada is being considered by the Canadian Bar Association in conjunction with the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Laws.

Yours, &c.,
 J. A. M. ATKINS,
 Lieutenant-Governor.

The Honourable the Secretary of State,
 Ottawa.

THE Executive Council has had under consideration a report from the Attorney-General, dated 11th June, 1918, stating that he has had under consideration a despatch from the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies of His Royal Highness the Governor-General, dated the twenty-sixth day of April, 1916, relative to a proposed Bill to be introduced in the Imperial Parliament to facilitate the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, orders, and awards of the United Kingdom and other parts of the British Empire.

Upon consideration of the foregoing report, and on the recommendation of the Attorney-General, the Executive Council advises that approval be given to the said legislation proposed by the Imperial Conference, and more particularly to section 5 thereof, which refers to reciprocal legislation and the application of the proposed Bill above mentioned by Order in Council to His Majesty's Dominions, and that such approval be communicated through the usual channels to the Secretary of State for Canada.

Enclosure 7 in No. 35.

SIR, Government House, Victoria, B.C., 3rd February, 1919.
 WITH further reference to correspondence on the subject of a draft Bill to facilitate the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, orders, and awards, I have the honour to inform you that my Attorney-General has carefully considered the proposed Act, and states that so far as this Province is concerned, the objections to a Bill having the same object in view, forwarded with a letter from my predecessor in office, on the 27th October, 1913, apply equally to this Bill.

I have, &c.,
 F. S. BARNARD,
 Lieutenant-Governor.

The Under Secretary of State,
 Ottawa.

SIR, Government House, Victoria, B.C., 27th October, 1913.
 WITH reference to correspondence on the subject of the Mutual Enforcement of Judgments and Awards of Courts of Justice, I have the honour to transmit to you, herewith, a communication from the Honourable the Attorney-General giving the views of my Ministers upon this subject.

I have, &c.,
 THOS. W. PATERSON,
 Lieutenant-Governor.

The Under Secretary of State,
 Ottawa.

(No. 3208-17-13.)

Attorney-General's Office, Victoria, 25th October, 1913.

Sir,

re Mutual Enforcement of Judgments.

THE despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the subject of the mutual enforcement of Judgments and Orders of the Courts of the United Kingdom and the Self-governing Dominions received my careful consideration when a copy of the despatch was first received, but as the proposed legislation involved a radical departure from the established law and procedure in this Province, I deemed it my duty to endeavour to obtain an expression of the views of the leading members of the British Columbia bar on the subject before advising you of my own views and those of my colleagues of the Executive Council. Although it has taken considerable time to get the opinions of the leading counsel and practitioners of the Province, yet it is a sort of compensation for the delay to know that their attitude confirms me in my own opinion, which is endorsed by the Government.

It may be well to point out at the outset that the occasions on which it becomes necessary to enforce British judgments in British Columbia and British Columbia judgments in England are few and far between, and when it is sought to make a change in the existing law with the view of making it easy to compel a dishonest debtor to pay his just debts, care should be taken to avoid the danger of thereby leaving the door open for a dishonest creditor to cause loss and injury or inconvenience to an honest person living perhaps in a remote part of the Empire at a great distance from the place in which proceedings are taken and judgment recovered.

As the law now stands, where a defendant has not subjected himself to the jurisdiction of the Court where the judgment is obtained, he is entitled to raise in his defence to an action on a foreign judgment all issues which he would have been entitled to have raised in the original action had he submitted to the jurisdiction. A defendant sued in our Courts is entitled to raise the defence that the judgment obtained in the foreign Court was obtained by fraud. If, therefore, the judgment obtained in the foreign Court is enforceable by certificate in this Province, and the certificate is conclusive as against the defendant, the defence that the judgment was obtained by fraud is taken away from him. Similarly, he may raise the defence of lack of jurisdiction in the Court in which judgment was obtained. Further, if a defendant has not submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court in which judgment was obtained, he may now raise a defence on the merits. I am of the opinion that the practical effect of the proposed legislation will be to deprive the defendant of any recourse in our Courts once judgment has been obtained against him in England and the certificate of judgment has been registered in this Province. It will, moreover, tend to impair the usefulness of our Fraudulent Preferences Act and our Statute of Limitations. Creditors resident in British Columbia might be forced to divide up assets with non-resident creditors who could come to British Columbia and register judgments which, if obtained in this Province, would be bad as against creditors by reason of our Fraudulent Preferences Act.

An action on a foreign judgment is not at the present time an expensive one, nor does it mean the taking of a very great amount of evidence, and it is not well to depart from established law when the practical effect of the alteration is merely to save the creditor the costs of enforcing his claim by bringing an action on the judgment.

Another most serious objection to the proposed legislation, so far as this Province is concerned, is this: When the law is changed and made uniform throughout Great Britain and the Self-governing Dominions, it will be a difficult matter to alter it without the consent of all parties, even if it is shown that the new law in its application and working is no improvement on the law now existing, but quite the reverse. In this Province the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has the power to make rules relating to the practice and procedure in the Supreme Court, and the rules so made have the force of law. Only last year the following rule respecting foreign judgments was made:—

"In any action on a foreign judgment, order, or decree, brought in any Court of British Columbia, the defendant, upon proof to the satisfaction of the Court or Judge that he has taken, or caused to be taken, an appeal or other proceeding in the nature thereof in respect of such judgment, order, or decree, shall be entitled, pending the determination of such appeal or other proceedings upon such terms (if any) as the Court or Judge may see fit to impose, to stay proceedings, and the application for such stay may be made in a summary way in Chambers at any stage of the action."

Rules of a similar nature may be made from time to time, as may be required, and such rules may be made to apply to judgments obtained in the United Kingdom or in any or all of the Provinces of the Dominion or in any foreign country, as the circumstances in each case warrant. The extension of the provisions of any Imperial statute to British Columbia would necessarily curtail the power of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to make rules which he might consider would be of benefit to the residents of this Province, and would substitute hard and fast legislation for the present elastic method of procedure.

Judgments recovered in England are now enforced in this Province in precisely the same way as judgments obtained in the neighbouring Province of Alberta and in the other Provinces of the Dominion, namely, by suit brought in the Courts of British Columbia. It would appear to be a wise precaution on the part of this Province to insist that any reciprocal arrangement for the enforcement of judgments should first be made between this Province and one or some or all of the other Provinces of the Dominion, and the advantages of such an arrangement be made manifest before any attempt is made to pass legislation binding British Columbia for all time to a scheme which may work well enough in England and other parts of the Empire, but may be unsuited to present conditions here.

In view of the foregoing, it is clear that British Columbia cannot consent, for the present at least, to become a party to the legislation suggested in the despatch above referred to.

I have, &c.,

W. J. BOWSER,
Attorney-General.To His Honour
The Lieutenant-Governor.

[MY LORD DUKE.] [MY LORD.] [SIR.] Downing Street, 24th January, 1921.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 648, of the 13th of August, 1919,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Royal Highness.] [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920 (10 and 11, Geo. 5. Ch. 81), and to request you to invite the attention of your Ministers to Part II of the Act, which deals with reciprocal enforcement of judgments in the United Kingdom and in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions.

2. As a result of the report of the Committee appointed by the Lord Chancellor to consider the conduct of legal proceedings between parties in this country and parties abroad and the enforcement of judgments and awards, copies of which accompanied the above despatch, the provisions of the Judgments Extension Bill previously submitted to your Ministers have been considerably modified in Part II of the present Act, the amendments being generally directed to impose safeguards securing that judgments obtained in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions shall only be registered for execution in the United Kingdom in cases where such registration is just and convenient.

CORRESPONDENCE ARISING OUT OF THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1917.

RESOLUTION I.: DEMOBILIZATION.

It was agreed that all Dominion contingents in France should start as soon as possible with their equipment from a French or Belgian port, but arrangements will be made to give individual soldiers desiring to visit this country furlough for that purpose.

RESOLUTION II.: UNIFORMITY OF EQUIPMENT.

That this Conference, recognizing the importance of assimilating as far as possible the military stores and equipment of the Imperial forces throughout the Empire, recommends that an expert Committee representative of the military authorities of the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India be appointed as early as possible to consider the various patterns in use with a view to selecting standard patterns for general adoption as far as the special circumstances of each country admit.

RESOLUTION III.: TRAINING OF ORDNANCE PERSONNEL.

This Conference is of opinion that it is desirable that the ordnance personnel of the military organizations of the Empire should, as far as possible, be trained on the same methods and according to the same principles, and that to secure this end selected officers of the ordnance service from all parts of the Empire should be attached for adequate periods to the Imperial Ordnance Department.

RESOLUTION IV.: NAVAL DEFENCE.

That the Admiralty be requested to work out immediately after the conclusion of the War what they consider the most effective scheme of Naval Defence for the Empire for the consideration of the several Governments summoned to this Conference, with such recommendations as the Admiralty consider necessary in that respect for the Empire's future security.

Secretariat Note.—The correspondence arising out of the above Resolutions is printed with other correspondence as to Naval and Military Defence in Dominions No. 72.

RESOLUTION V.: TRADE COMMISSIONER SERVICE.

That the Imperial War Conference welcomes the proposed increase of the Board of Trade service of Trade Commissioners and its extension throughout the British Empire in accordance with the recommendations of the Dominions Royal Commission, and recommends that the Governments concerned should co-operate so as to make that service as useful as possible to the Empire as a whole, especially for the promotion of Inter-Imperial Trade.

Enclosure in No. 43A.

(P.C. 3475.)

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 21ST SEPTEMBER, 1921.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 15th September, 1921, from the Minister of Trade and Commerce, submitting, with reference to the circular forwarded by His Majesty's Government to all British Consuls under date of 9th November, 1912, Commercial No. 47033-12, that pursuant thereto the Department of Trade and Commerce has been publishing from time to time a list of the more important British Consuls-General and Consuls in those countries where Canadian Trade Commissioners' offices were not established, so that the Canadian business public could make inquiry of such Consulates.

The Minister observes that it has developed from time to time that in various foreign countries the British Government has attached to its Embassies and Legations Commercial Counsellors and Commercial Secretaries, and it has been brought to the attention of the Department indirectly that some of the British Consulates listed in the publications issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce have suggested that commercial inquiries from Canada should more properly be addressed to such Commercial Counsellors or Commercial Secretaries as the case may be.

* No. 129 in Dominions No. 61. † No. 123 in Dominions No. 61. ‡ 30890; not printed. (It forwarded [with other correspondence] the circular referred to in the enclosure to No. 43A.)

The Minister therefore desires to suggest that His Majesty's Government will address a communication to its various Commercial Counsellors and Commercial Secretaries in the same sense as that of the circular referred to above of 9th November, 1912, so that Canadian exporters may feel free to address communications to such officers if they so desire rather than to the Consulate; the Minister being led to believe that it would be more desirable that such communications should be addressed to Commercial Counsellors or Commercial Secretaries rather than to British Consuls in cities where both officers are maintained by His Majesty's Government.

The Committee, concurring, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy of this Minute, if approved, to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for consideration.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

My Lord,

With reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 578 of the 28th September requesting that certain amendments be made in the Foreign Office circular of the 9th November, 1912, to His Majesty's Consuls on the subject of more intimate relations between His Majesty's Consular Service and the Dominion of Canada, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has pleasure in agreeing that the terms of the circular should be extended to apply to Commercial Diplomatic Officers, and that he will take steps to issue the necessary instructions to such officers.

* No. 43. † No. 43a.

2. Under this arrangement Canadian exporters and Canadian Trade Commissioners will in future be at liberty to apply to Commercial Diplomatic Officers for the same assistance and advice which they have hitherto been entitled to receive from Consular Officers. So far, however, as office accommodation is concerned, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs explains that Commercial Diplomatic Officers are, as a rule, stationed in the Embassy or Legation, and that in their case there is not likely to be the same opportunity of affording office accommodation for Canadian Government Commercial representatives as in the case of His Majesty's Consulates.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 10th January, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have been approached by various Patent Agents for advice as regards the bearing of Articles 307 and 308 of the Peace Treaty with Germany on patent arrangements between the various parts of the British Empire.

2. Under Article 307 a minimum of one year after the coming into force of the Treaty must be accorded to the nationals of the High Contracting Parties without extension fees or other penalty to enable such persons to accomplish any act, fulfil any formality, pay any fees, and generally satisfy any obligation prescribed by the laws or regulations of the respective States relating to the obtaining, preserving, or opposing rights to or in respect of industrial property either acquired before 1st August, 1914, or which, except for the War, might have been acquired since that date as a result of an application made before the War or during its continuance.

3. The interpretation placed upon this Article by His Majesty's Government is that it is incumbent on the signatory States to accord such extension of time to their own nationals, as well as to foreigners, who may be subjects or citizens of the other High Contracting Parties, and, so far as British subjects in the United Kingdom are concerned, the Comptroller General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks will grant such extension accordingly. It is assumed that the Dominion Governments will take similar action.

4. The wording of Article 308 is slightly different. It provides that the rights of priority provided by Article 4 of the International Convention, of 1883, for the Protection of Industrial Property revised at Washington in 1911, or by any other Convention or Statute, for the filing or registration of applications for patents or models of utility, and for the registration of trade marks, designs and models which had not expired on August 1st, 1914, and those which have arisen during the War, or would have arisen but for the War, shall be extended by each of the High Contracting Parties in favour of all nationals of the other High Contracting Parties for a period of six months after the coming into force of the Treaty.

5. In the opinion of His Majesty's Government it would be clearly inequitable that similar privileges to those given in the United Kingdom to foreigners under the Treaty should not be extended to persons resident in those parts of the Oversea Dominions where action has been taken under the laws in force corresponding to that provided for under the International Conventions. Accordingly the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks proposes to exercise the power given to him by the Patents, Designs and Trade Marks (Temporary) Rules, 1914, and to extend the times within which persons residing in those parts of the British Empire in respect of which Orders in Council have been issued under section 91 of the Imperial Patents Act, 1907, or under section 103 of the Act of 1883, may apply in the United Kingdom for priority in respect of their patent rights. In considering such applications no demand will be made for evidence as regards the circumstances under which the persons concerned failed to apply within the prescribed period.

6. His Majesty's Government hope that, in the British oversea countries concerned, similar privileges will be accorded to persons residing in the United Kingdom. If such privileges are granted they will no doubt be extended to persons residing in other parts of the Empire which grant reciprocal patent privileges.

MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 12th March, 1920.

WITH reference to Your Lordship's despatch Dominions No. 17, of the 10th January, 1920,* regarding the bearing of Articles 307 and 308 of the Peace Treaty with Germany on patent arrangements between the various parts of the British Empire, I have the honour to transmit the accompanying copy of a minute from my Ministers on the subject.

I have, &c.,

BUNTON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 46.

MINUTE No. 207.

Prime Minister's Office, 2nd March, 1920.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency's minute No. 57/31, of the 12th ultimo, transmitting for their consideration a copy of a despatch, Dominions No. 17, dated 10th January last, on the subject of the bearing of Section VII of Part X of the Peace Treaty with Germany on patent arrangements between the various parts of the British Empire.

Ministers have been disposed to the view that Articles 306 and 307 of the Treaty are not in the nature of a Convention between the various Powers who were signatories thereto, but that they are provisions creating rights in favour of, and imposing obligations upon, the principal Allied and Associated Powers on the one hand, and Germany on the other. They observe that where, as in Article 308, a provision of the Treaty was intended to operate as a convention between all the individual parties to the Treaty, this intention appears to have been made clear.

Ministers, however, recognize that arguments do exist in favour of the adoption of the contrary interpretation placed upon these Articles by His Majesty's Government, and subject to the reservation that rights or privileges within the Union will not be extended under those Articles in favour of those of the principal Allied and Associated Powers who do not place a similar interpretation upon them, they are prepared in so far as concerns the nationals of the principal Allied or Associated Powers, to adopt the interpretation placed upon these Articles by His Majesty's Government.

Ministers find themselves unable to agree that the Articles in question must be interpreted so as to affect the relations between a signatory State and its own subjects. In view, however, of the powers given by Section 3 of the Public Welfare and Moratorium Acts Extension and Further Amendment Act, 1919, Ministers do not anticipate that the extension to nationals of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers of rights and privileges under Articles 306 and 307 of the Treaty will result in such nationals being placed in any favoured position in relation to British subjects resident within the Union.

Upon receipt of advice that any State concerned, including, of course, any British Dominion, will extend rights and privileges under Articles 306 and 307 of the Treaty to the people of the Union of South Africa, Ministers will take such steps as may be necessary for according similar treatment within the Union to the people of that State.

(No. 292.)

MY LORD,

Ottawa, 1st May, 1920.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 17 of the 10th January, 1920,* on the bearing of Articles 307 and 308 of the Peace Treaty with Germany on patent arrangements between the various parts of the British Empire, I have the honour to inform you that, at the instance of the Enemy Debts Committee, an Order in Council was passed on the 14th April entitled "The Treaty of Peace, Germany, Order 1920," from which it appears that Canada has given even broader interpretation to Article 307 than that given by the British authorities, but the rights conferred by Article 308 have not been extended to British subjects as was done in the United Kingdom, there being no power in Canada to do so by Order in Council. However, under Chapter 26 of 10 George V., these rights will be extended to any British subject on his application.

I enclose a copy of the Order in Council of the 14th April, 1920,† together with two copies of the Act of the Parliament of Canada 10 George V. chapter 26, "An Act respecting Patents of Invention."

I have, &c.,

† P.C. 755, 1920. Paragraph 81 of this Order was as follows:—

At any time before the eleventh day of January, 1921, any British subject or any national of a Power allied or associated during the War with His Majesty or any German national may without extension fees or other penalty accomplish any act, fulfil any formality, pay any fees, and generally satisfy any obligation prescribed by the laws or regulations of Canada relating to the obtaining, preserving, or opposing rights to or in respect of industrial property either acquired before the first day of August, 1914, or which, except for the War, might have been acquired since that date as a result of an application made before or during the War.

(2) All rights to, or in respect of, such property which may have lapsed by reason of any failure to accomplish any act, fulfil any formality, or make any payment, shall revive, but subject in the case of patents and designs, to the imposition of such conditions as the Governor in Council may deem reasonably necessary for the protection of persons who have manufactured or made use of the subject matter of such property while the rights have lapsed. Further, where rights to patents or designs belonging to German nationals are revived under this Order, they shall be subject in respect of the grant of licences to the same provisions as would have been applicable to them during the War, as well as to all the provisions of this Order.

MY LORD,

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 23rd June, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a copy of Union Proclamation No. 101, of 1920, as published in the Government Gazette of the 18th June, giving effect within the Union to such portions of Section VII of Part X of the Treaty of Peace with Germany as are capable of application in this country.

I have, &c.,

BUXTON,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 49.

PROCLAMATION No. 101, 1920.

WHEREAS by Section VII (Articles 306 to 311) of Part X of the Treaty of Peace between the Allied and Associated Powers and Germany signed at Versailles on the 20th day of June, 1919, and ratified at Paris on the 10th day of January, 1920, provision is made in respect of the re-establishment, restoration, or recognition in the Territories of the High Contracting Parties of certain rights of industrial, literary, and artistic property acquired or which, except for the War, would have been acquired;

And whereas by the Treaty of Peace and South-West Africa Mandate Act, 1919, of the Union Parliament, power has been conferred upon me inter alia to issue such instructions and do such things as appear to me to be necessary for giving effect, so far as concerns the Union, to any of the provisions of the Treaty, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in any law contained;

And whereas, subject to certain conditions, it is desirable that Articles 306, 307, 309, and 310 of the Treaty of Peace should have the force of law within the Union;

Now, therefore, under and by virtue of the powers conferred upon me, I do hereby proclaim, declare, and make known as follows:—

(1) Subject to the provision contained in paragraph 2 of this Proclamation, Articles 306, 307, 309, and 310 (which articles are set forth in the Schedule to this Proclamation) shall have the force of the law within the Union.

(2) Whenever any right in, or in respect of, any industrial property which may have lapsed by reason of any failure to accomplish any act, fulfil any formality, or make any payment, shall under Article 307 of the Treaty of Peace be revived, such revival shall in the case of patents and designs, in addition to any condition in respect of the grant of licences which may be imposed in terms of the said article, be made subject to the special condition that no rights acquired by any person who has in good faith manufactured or made use of the subject matter of such property while the rights therein had lapsed shall, in any way or at any time, be prejudiced by such revival, and subject to such further special conditions as the Governor-General may in any case deem it reasonably necessary to impose for the protection of any such person.

(3) The period which shall, under Article 307 of the Treaty, be accorded to the Nationals of the High Contracting Parties for accomplishing any such Act, fulfilling any such formality, paying any such fees, and generally satisfying any such obligation as is referred to in the said article, shall extend to and include the 15th day of June, 1921.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

My Lord Duke,

Downing Street, 28th August, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Sir W. H. Davies's despatch No. 292 of the 1st of May* relating to the bearing of Articles 307 and 308 of the Treaty of Peace with Germany on Patent arrangements between the various parts of the British Empire.

2. I enclose for the information of Your Excellency's Ministers copies of despatches† on the subject from the Governor-General of New Zealand (with Rule 24 of the New Zealand Treaty of Peace Order), the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, and the Governor of Newfoundland.

3. As regards the concluding paragraph of the Minute of Ministers enclosed in the despatch from the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa of 12th March, the Board of Trade have now given formal intimation to the Union Government that the extension of time accorded by Article 307 of the Treaty (referred to in paragraph 3 of Colonel Amery's despatch Dominions No. 17 of the 10th of January‡) will be given to all British subjects who apply in the United Kingdom.

Similarly as regards Article 308 the power given to the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks by the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks (Temporary) Rules, 1914, will be extended to all British subjects who have applied for patents, etc., in those parts of the British Empire in respect of which Orders in Council have been issued under section 91 of the Imperial Patents Act, 1907, or section 103 of the Act of 1883.

4. In this connexion I am informed that, under the War Emergency Laws (Continuance) Act, 1920, the operation of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks (Temporary) Rules, 1914, has been extended until the 10th of January, 1921.

5. Attention has been called to a possible ambiguity in the wording of paragraphs 3, 5 and 6 of the above-mentioned despatch of the 10th January. The phrase in paragraph 3, "British subjects residing in the United Kingdom," was meant to cover all British subjects who apply in the United Kingdom for the extension of time dealt with in that paragraph. Similarly in paragraph 5 the phrase used should have been "British subjects who have applied for patents, etc., in those parts of the British Empire in respect of which Orders in Council have been issued . . ." and the wording of paragraph 6 should have been similarly framed, i.e., the words "who have applied" should have been substituted in both sentences for the word "residing."

MY LORD, Downing Street, 17th March, 1920.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 285, of the 15th of July, 1918,† and connected correspondence, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the attention of the Board of Trade has been called to certain differences which appear to exist between the rights accorded to applicants for patents in the United Kingdom under the Order in Council of 25th June, 1918, and those accorded to applicants for patents in the Union of South Africa under the Governor-General's Proclamation of 26th June, 1918.

2. Section 91 of the Imperial Patents Act, 1907, provides that if the Legislature of any British Possession has made satisfactory provision for the protection there of inventions patented in the United Kingdom, persons who have applied for protection in that British Possession shall, on the issue of the necessary Order in Council, be entitled in the United Kingdom to patents for their inventions in priority to other applicants, provided that application is made within twelve months of the application for protection in the British Possession concerned. Accordingly, in the case of applications made in the United Kingdom where rights are claimed under the Order in Council of 25th June, 1918, the date given to the application and patent would be the date of the application by the inventor in the Union of South Africa, and the latter would have all the rights of a patentee from such date as against any later application.

* Nos. 51, 52, 54, and 55. † No. 55. ‡ No. 154 in Dominions No. 61.

3. Section 41 (2) of the Union Act No. 9, of 1916, makes, however, no express mention of priority. It simply contemplates that, on completion of the necessary formalities under section 191 of that Act, the grant of a patent in a country outside the Union, whether a British Possession or not, shall not be a bar to the grant of a patent for the same invention in the Union, provided that the application for the grant of a Union patent shall be made within twelve months of the date of the lodging of the application for a patent in the other country concerned. The effect of the Governor-General's Proclamation of 26th June, 1918, read in conjunction with section 41 of the 1916 Act is that neither the grant of a patent in the United Kingdom, nor the publication of the invention in print in the Union or elsewhere, for its use in the Union during the twelve months, is to invalidate a patent for the invention granted in the Union on an application made within the time prescribed. Section 41 is silent as to the result of the grant in the Union of a patent on an application preceding the British application in the Union, but subsequent to the application in respect of the same invention in the United Kingdom.

4. The procedure which appears to be adopted in the Union of giving to patents of the kind in question the date of the application in the Union and not the date of the application in the country of origin is one which is adopted by many of the countries which are signatories of the Industrial Property Convention, and it is possible that, as in the case of some of such countries, priority is in fact given in the Courts of Law of the Union. This, however, as already explained, is not apparent from the wording of section 41 of the 1916 Act, and the Board of Trade are anxious to ascertain what rights of priority, if any, are given in the Union of South Africa under section 41 in respect of applications which have been made first in the United Kingdom, and subsequently in the Union. I should be glad to obtain an expression of your Ministers' views on the subject.

Prime Minister's Office at Cape Town, 15th May, 1920.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency's minute No. 7/2361, of the 13th April, with which was transmitted a despatch No. 126, dated the 17th March, 1920, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, relative to the effect of sub-section (2) of section forty-one of Union Act No. 9 of 1916.

2. Ministers are advised that as regards the countries to which that sub-section has been applied under section 191 of the Act (e.g., Great Britain and Australia), the effect of the sub-section is merely to protect the patentee against the consequences of publication outside the Union. Such publication would otherwise be fatal to his application for the grant of a Union patent, owing to the use of the expression "or any country" in the definition of "invention" in section six of the Act.

It was never intended that by section forty-one (2) any rights of priority should be conferred, and it is considered that priority would not in fact be recognized in such cases by Union courts.

3. Ministers would be prepared to consider the introduction at a suitable opportunity of legislation amending section forty-one (2); and suggest that the amendment should entitle the applicant under the sub-section to a patent for his invention in priority to other applicants: and should provide that the patent should bear the same date as the date of the application in the country outside the Union. But it should also be provided that the patentee should not be entitled to recover damages for infringements which took place prior to the actual date when the patentee's complete specifications were accepted in the Union.

RESOLUTION VIII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

The Conference, having considered the Minute addressed to the Prime Minister on the 15th March, 1917, by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, concurs in the proposals made therein, and humbly prays His Majesty to constitute by Royal Charter an Imperial War Graves Commission for the purposes stated by His Royal Highness, and along the lines therein set forth as embodied in the draft charter submitted to the Conference. The Conference places on record its very deep appreciation of the generous action of the French Government in allotting in perpetuity the land in that country where our men are buried, and urges that similar arrangements should be made, if possible, in the terms of peace with all Governments—Ally, Enemy, or Neutral—for a similar concession in Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, Africa, and all other theatres of war. The Conference desires to record its grateful appreciation of the work already done by the Prince of Wales and his Committee in caring for the graves of those who have fallen in the common cause of the Empire, and its satisfaction that His Royal Highness has consented to become the President of the permanent Commission.

RESOLUTION XII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

That the Imperial War Graves Commission be requested as soon as possible after their appointment and organization to prepare an estimate of the probable cost of carrying on the work entrusted to them and to submit the same to the Governments of the United Kingdom and Oversea Dominions with their recommendation as to the proportion that should be borne by each.

(See pages 110 and following of Dominions No. 61.)

Secretariat Note.—Correspondence, which is not printed, took place with the Dominion Governments as to the location of war graves and details of administration.

The general question was further discussed at the Imperial War Conference, 1918, see pages 28-33, and 226-228 of [Cd. 9177], and Resolution No. I; also pages 1-2 of Dominions No. 69.

For further correspondence see under Resolution I of the 1918 Conference (pages 74-75 of this volume).

RESOLUTION IX: CONSTITUTION OF THE EMPIRE.

The Imperial War Conference are of opinion that the readjustment of the constitutional relations of the component parts of the Empire is too important and intricate a subject to be dealt with during the War, and that it should form the subject of a special Imperial Conference to be summoned as soon as possible after the cessation of hostilities.

They deem it their duty, however, to place on record their view that any such readjustment, while thoroughly preserving all existing powers of self-government and complete control of domestic affairs, should be based upon a full recognition of the Dominions as autonomous nations of an Imperial Commonwealth and of India as an important portion of the same; should recognize the right of the Dominions and India to an adequate voice in foreign policy and in foreign relations; and should provide effective arrangements for continuous consultation in all important matters of common Imperial concern, and for such necessary concerted action, founded on consultation, as the several Governments may determine.

Secretariat Note.—This question is alluded to in the correspondence as to the preliminary arrangements for the Imperial Meetings, 1921 (see pages 205 and following of this volume), and was further discussed at those Meetings (see page 9 of [Cmd. 1474]). It was decided that having regard to the constitutional developments since 1917, no advantage was to be gained by holding a Constitutional Conference. Correspondence on various Constitutional questions is contained in Dominions No. 66.

RESOLUTION X: NATURALIZATION.

The Conference recognizes the desirability and importance of securing uniformity of policy and action throughout the Empire with regard to naturalization.

It is resolved that the proposals set forth in the Memorandum submitted by the Home Office be commended to the consideration of the respective Governments summoned to the Conference.

Secretariat Note.—For correspondence as to Naturalization, subsequent to that printed in Dominions No. 61, see under Resolutions XIX and XX of the Imperial War Conference, 1918 (pages 185 and following of this volume).

RESOLUTION XIII.: IMPERIAL MINERAL RESOURCES BUREAU.

That it is desirable to establish in London an Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, upon which should be represented Great Britain, the Dominions, India, and other parts of the Empire.

The Bureau should be charged with the duties of collection of information from the appropriate Departments of the Governments concerned and other sources regarding the mineral resources and the metal requirements of the Empire, and of advising from time to time what action, if any, may appear desirable to enable such resources to be developed and made available to meet the metal requirements of the Empire.

That the Conference recommends that His Majesty's Government should, while having due regard to existing institutions, take immediate action for the purpose of establishing such a Bureau, and should as soon as possible submit a scheme for the consideration of the other Governments summoned to the Conference.

(See pages 137 and following and page 235 of Dominions No. 61.)

Secretariat Note.—Further discussion as to the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau took place at the Imperial War Conference, 1918, and another Resolution (No. XVI.) was passed. See the discussion printed on pages 87-92, 115-123, and 167-168 of [Cd. 9177], page 194 of Dominions No. 69, and page 160 of this volume.

RESOLUTION XIV.: PRODUCTION OF NAVAL AND MILITARY MATERIAL. MUNITIONS, AND SUPPLIES.

That this Conference in view of the experience of the present War, calls attention to the importance of developing an adequate capacity of production of naval and military material, munitions, and supplies in all important parts of the Empire (including the countries bordering on the Pacific and Indian Oceans) where such facilities do not presently exist and affirms the importance of close co-operation between India, the Dominions, and the United Kingdom with this object in view.

Secretariat Note.—The correspondence arising out of this Resolution is printed with other correspondence as to Military and Naval Defence in Dominions No. 72.

RESOLUTION XV.: DOUBLE INCOME TAX.

The present system of Double Income Taxation within the Empire calls for review in relation—

- (i) to firms in the United Kingdom doing business with the Oversea Dominions, India, and the Colonies;
- (ii) to private individuals resident in the United Kingdom who have capital invested elsewhere in the Empire, or who depend upon remittances from elsewhere within the Empire, and
- (iii) to its influence on the investment of capital in the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India, and to the effect of any change on the position of British capital invested abroad.

The Conference, therefore, urges that this matter should be taken in hand immediately after the conclusion of the War, and that an amendment of the law should be made which will remedy the present unsatisfactory position.

With reference to discussions in 1917 and 1918 at Imperial War Conference, with regard to double income tax. Royal Commission is about to be appointed by His Majesty's Government, terms of reference to which are as follows:—

Begins.—To inquire into income tax (including super-tax) of United Kingdom in all its aspects, including scope, rates, and incidence of tax, allowances and reliefs, administration, assessment, appeal, and collection, and prevention of evasion, and to report what alterations of law and practice are necessary or desirable in their opinion, and what effect they would have on rates of tax if it were necessary to maintain total yield.—Ends.

Question of double income tax will necessarily come up before Commission, and it is proposed to arrange that Commission should confer on this question with financial representatives selected by Dominion Governments, such conference to take place at some stage during inquiry and before Commission arrives at its final conclusions.

As larger portion of Commission's work will necessarily relate to points of purely United Kingdom interest, and often of highly technical character, this course is thought preferable to inclusion of Dominion representatives on personnel of Commission.

Announcement of appointment of Royal Commission will be made in House of Commons shortly, and reference to this subject will be made, but, until announcement is made, it is requested that the matter may be treated as strictly confidential. I should be glad to know in due course whom your Government selects as its representative for Conference in question.—MILNER.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 8th April, 1919.

WITH reference to previous correspondence on the subject of double income tax, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying extract from the official report of the proceedings of the House of Commons, containing a statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the 27th of March, as to the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the income tax, together with an extract* from The Times newspaper, of the 28th March, containing a public announcement of the appointment of the Royal Commission.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 62.

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (VOLUME 114, No. 36, PAGE 585).—HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, 27TH MARCH, 1919.

Income Tax: Royal Commission: Constitution and Terms of Reference.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ASSHETON POWNALL asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Royal Commission on the income tax has yet been appointed; and if not, if he can state when it will be appointed?

MR. CHAMBERLAIN: The consent of His Majesty has been obtained to the appointment of a Royal Commission with the following terms of reference:—

"To inquire into the income tax (including super-tax) of the United Kingdom in all its aspects, including the scope, rates, and incidence of the tax, allowances and reliefs, administration, assessment, appeal and collection, and prevention of evasion, and to report what alterations of law and practice are in their opinion necessary or desirable, and what effect they would have on rates of tax if it were necessary to maintain the total yield."

I think honourable Members will desire to know the constitution of the Commission.

HONOURABLE MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN: It will be as follows:—

Lord Colwyn (Chairman).
The Right Honourable Sir T. Whittaker, M.P.
The Right Honourable Charles William Bowerman, M.P.
The Right Honourable William Brace, M.P.
The Right Honourable Ernest Pretymann, M.P.
Sir Edmund Nott-Bower, K.C.B.
Sir J. Harwood-Banner, M.P.
Sir Walter Trower.
Mr. Holland Martin, C.B.
Mr. N. F. Warren Fisher, C.B.
Mr. S. Armitage Smith, C.B.
Mr. Philip Birley.
Mr. William Graham, M.P.
Mr. Arthur Hill.
Mr. D. M. Kerley, K.C.
Mrs. Lilian Knowles.
Mr. H. J. Mackinder, M.P.
Mr. W. McLintock.

* Not printed.

Mr. Edward Manville, M.P.
Mr. Geoffrey Marks.
Mr. Henry J. May.
Professor A. C. Pigou.
Mr. Nicholas J. Synnott.

The Secretary of the Commission will be Mr. Ernest Clark, of the Inland Revenue Department.

Honourable Members will no doubt remember that it was recently stated by my honourable friend the Financial Secretary, that I was in communication with the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the subject of the representation of the Dominions on the Commission. I have since had the opportunity of discussing the question with my right honourable friend, and we have decided that, as the work of the Commission will for the most part necessarily relate to points of purely United Kingdom interest, and often of a very highly technical character, it would not be desirable to invite representatives of the Dominions to sit on the Commission. It has, however, been arranged that the Commission shall confer with financial representatives of the Dominion Governments in regard to the question of double income tax before any financial conclusions are reached on that subject.

Your telegram 30th September,* Budget double income tax. Board of Inland Revenue represent United Kingdom law regarding relief in respect of Dominion income tax very complicated, and in view of fact that relief allowable by Dominion depends on relief in United Kingdom, Dominions provisions must necessarily be framed with reference to United Kingdom provisions. As relief based on comparison of rates, desirable that method of determining respective rates for purpose of Dominion relief should accord with United Kingdom method. It will be necessary also, before, or as soon as, Commonwealth provisions operate, to make arrangements as regards certificates of United Kingdom rate of relief to be furnished to tax-payer claiming complementary relief in Commonwealth, also Commonwealth and United Kingdom taxation years corresponding for purposes of relief. Board feel that in intricate matter mutual co-operation from the first would minimize administrative difficulties and friction with tax-payers. Suggested that Board should be supplied in advance with proposed Commonwealth provisions, or if there is representative of Commonwealth Government in this country conversant with question he should discuss with Board in order that liaison should exist from the first. RESOLUTION XVII.: CONTROL OF IMPORTS AFTER THE WAR
FROM PRESENT ENEMY COUNTRIES.

The Imperial War Conference consider it desirable, with a view to prevent dumping or any other mode of unfair competition from present enemy countries during the transition period after the War, that the several Governments of the Empire, while reserving to themselves freedom of action in any particular respect, take power to control the importation of goods originating in such countries into the Empire for a period of twelve months after the War.

Secretariat Note.—A Bill to provide for the temporary control of exports and imports (No. 161 of 1918) was introduced in the Canadian House of Commons and read for the first time on 21st March, 1918, but was not proceeded with. No legislation on the subject was passed in Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa in 1918. Further discussion as to the policy involved took place at the Imperial War Conference, 1918 (see pages 30-31, 45-6, and 53-8, of Dominions No. 69). Ultimately it was decided not to introduce the Imports and Exports (Temporary Control) Bill into the Imperial Parliament.

Copies of the Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921, were sent to Dominion Governments in despatch Dominions No. 391 of the 13th of September, 1921, and copies of the Safeguarding of Industries (No. 1) Order, 1922, of the 8th of August, 1922, in despatch Dominions No. 311 of the 26th of August, 1922.

RESOLUTION XIX: CONTROL OF ORES AND METALS.

(1) That it is desirable that the exports to foreign countries of important ores and metals (the produce of the British Empire) should be controlled for a period after the War.

(2) That the Conference would welcome appropriate measures for the purpose of freeing the Empire and the Allied Countries from any previous dependence on German-controlled organizations with respect of non-ferrous metals and ores.

(3) That the Governments of the Empire should consider the desirability of imposing restrictions on the acquisition of mineral rights within the Empire by or on behalf of subjects of present enemy States.

(See pages 152-156 of Dominions No. 61.)

Secretariat Note.—The subject was further discussed at the Imperial War Conference, 1918: see discussion on pages 47-60, 62-3, and memorandum on pages 229-231 of [Cd. 9177], discussions on pages 31 and 34 of Dominions No. 69, and Resolution No. II.

For further correspondence see under Resolution II of the 1918 Conference (page 76 of this volume).

RESOLUTION XX.: CONTROL OF MEAT SUPPLIES.

In view of the extent to which the United Kingdom and certain other parts of the Empire are dependent on oversea supplies for meat, and of the desirability of freeing British markets from excessive dependence on foreign organizations which control important sources of supply, this Conference is of opinion that there should be co-operation between the Governments of the Empire to ensure that the Empire should become as far as possible self-sufficing in the matter of meat supplies, and that the Governments concerned should prepare detailed plans with this object.

(See pages 157-159 of Dominions No. 61.)

Secretariat Note.—The Conference duly met and appointed a Committee to draw up a detailed scheme. The report of this Committee was considered by the Conference and subsequently considered by the Imperial War Conference, 1918. See discussions on pages 31, etc., of Dominions No. 69 and Resolution No. V.

For further correspondence on the subject see under Resolution No. V. of the 1918 Conference. (Page 82 of this volume.)

RESOLUTION XXI.: IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

The time has arrived when all possible encouragement should be given to the development of Imperial resources, and especially to making the Empire independent of other countries in respect of food supplies, raw materials and essential industries. With these objects in view this Conference expresses itself in favour of:—

- (1) The principle that each part of the Empire, having due regard to the interests of our Allies, shall give specially favourable treatment and facilities to the produce and manufactures of other parts of the Empire.
- (2) Arrangements by which intending emigrants from the United Kingdom may be induced to settle in countries under the British flag.

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 11th July, 1921.

WITH reference to the question of the maintenance and care of the graves of prisoners of war and interned civilians who were buried within the limits of Australia, I have the honour, at the instance of my Acting Prime Minister, to forward the attached complete list‡ of those who have died, together with all information useful for their identification, which has been prepared in accordance with the provisions of Article 226 of the Treaty of Peace with Germany.

It will be observed that in every case where the body has been recovered, the deceased prisoner of war or interned civilian, with the exception of burials at Trial Bay, has been interred in a recognized cemetery, and as the cemetery authorities are responsible for the general upkeep of their respective cemeteries, it is considered by the Commonwealth Government that the requirements of the Peace Treaty with respect to the care and maintenance of the graves are being sufficiently met. I shall be glad to be enabled to inform my Ministers whether this view is concurred in by His Majesty's Government.

As regards the graves at Trial Bay, proposals for their suitable maintenance are at present being considered.

In pursuance of the policy of freeing the Empire from dependence on German-controlled organizations in respect of non-ferrous metals and ores, the Conference endorses the principle of the Non-Ferrous Metal Industry Act of the United Kingdom and recommends the Governments of the Empire to adopt effective measures, in so far as these may be necessary and have not already been taken, to carry out this policy.

RESOLUTION III.:—CONTROL OF RAW MATERIALS.

(1) The Conference agrees that it is necessary to secure for the British Empire and the belligerent Allies the command of certain essential raw materials in order to enable them to repair the effects of the War as soon as possible and to safeguard their industrial requirements.

(2) The Conference is of opinion that the Governments of the British Empire should make such arrangements amongst themselves as will ensure that essential raw materials produced within the Empire shall be available for the above purposes, and should arrange with the Allied Countries to utilize for the same purposes essential raw materials produced in those countries.

(3) Amongst the raw materials which should be considered for the purpose of this policy, the Conference recommends the following:—

Asbestos.	Lead and its ores.
Cotton.	Manganese ores.
Jute.	Nickel, refined and matte.
Wool.	Spelter and zinc concentrates.
Hides and skins.	Tin and its ores.
Leather.	Tungsten ores.
Rubber.	Mica.
Oleaginous products.	Molybdenum.
Petroleum.	Steam coal.
Copper.

RESOLUTION IV.:—CONTROL OF RAW MATERIALS.

That this Conference has considered the provisions of the Imports and Exports (Temporary Control) Bill now before the Imperial Parliament, and is of opinion that, whilst the circumstances of the different parts of the Empire differ widely as regards the extent to which it may prove desirable to pass similar legislation, the respective Governments should nevertheless take such action as may be deemed expedient to enable the objects of Resolution III. to be fully carried out.

To assist the Governments in determining their action in this respect, the Conference recommends:—

(1) that a Committee of its members should first consider the possible methods in each part of the Empire of obtaining command of each of the essential Raw Materials specified in Resolution III. (3).

(2) that the Governments represented at the Conference should, in the light of the information collected by their representatives on this Committee, consult with the representatives of the producers and trades concerned as to the method of obtaining command best suited to each individual commodity.

RESOLUTION XXIII.: CONTROL OF RAW MATERIALS.

(1) The Conference, having considered the Report of the Committee on Raw Materials, requests His Majesty's Government to communicate this Report forthwith to the Governments of the Dominions and India and to ascertain their views on the appropriate action to be taken.

(2) The Conference further agrees that steps should be taken to ascertain the needs and the resources of the Allies in respect of the raw materials specified in the Report.

(3) The Conference considers that the figures given in the Report as to the raw material requirements of the Empire might with advantage be used by the British Delegates at any forthcoming Inter-Allied Conference, subject to any corrections that may be made necessary by later and fuller information.

Dominions No. 25. Confidential.)

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 11th January, 1919.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 455, Confidential, of the 21st August,* I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers of the action taken by His Majesty's Government towards carrying out Resolutions III., IV., and XXIII. of the Imperial War Conference, 1918, on the subject of the control of raw materials.

2. In October last it was decided to appoint a Raw Materials Board, under my chairmanship, to consider with the Departments directly concerned with the supply during the War of each of the raw materials referred to in the resolutions of the Imperial War Conference what action was necessary in order to provide that the necessary supplies should in fact be available for the United Kingdom after the War, and to arrange for such administrative action, beyond what had already taken place, as was necessary to secure such supplies. It was thought that the existence of such a Board would not only enable His Majesty's Government to deal effectively with the current problems affecting the supply of raw materials to the United Kingdom, but would also later on be of great assistance in any arrangements for the post-War allocation of raw materials amongst the Allies.

3. The Raw Materials Board since its appointment has been actively at work, and has considered seriatim the various raw materials dealt with by the Imperial War Conference. On investigation it appeared that, in certain cases, supplies were fully assured, or that all possible steps to secure them were already being taken. Consequently, no immediate action on the part of the Board was needed. The materials falling within this category were: Petroleum (as to which I would invite reference to my despatch Dominions No. 653, Confidential, of the 15th November†), Nickel (refined and matte), Tungsten Ores, Molybdenum, Coal, Aluminium Ores.

4. With regard to other of the raw materials, the action taken by the Board may be summarized as follows:—

Asbestos.—The Board asked the Admiralty, who are at present responsible for the control of asbestos imported into the United Kingdom:—

(a) to induce the Asbestos Pool Board (which is referred to in the report of the Committee on Raw Materials of the Imperial War Conference, 1918‡) to increase the stocks in this country so as to ensure supplies for four to six months ahead;

(b) after this step had been taken, to advise the members of the Pool Board to proceed at once with their own arrangements for covering their further post-War requirements by private purchases.

The Board further requested the Shipping Controller to grant the necessary facilities to the Asbestos Pool Board for increasing stocks in this country in accordance with the Board's wishes.

Cotton.—The Board endorsed certain proposals of the Board of Trade for continuing, in case of necessity, the present control of the Egyptian cotton crop; and also approved a recommendation that special facilities should be given in this country for delivering the machinery required for further development of the Northern Delta cotton area.

Jute.—The Board approved in principle a scheme which had been agreed upon between the Secretary of State for India and the Government of India for the rationing of the exportable surplus of Indian jute, subject to further consideration of the question by the authority to be charged with rationing the several countries which would participate in the exportable surplus. The Board also agreed that the arrangements for distributing the jute reserved for consumers in the United Kingdom should be made by the appropriate trade organization under the supervision of the Board of Trade.

* No. 257 in Dominions No. 61.

† No. 300 in Dominions No. 61.

‡ See page 224 of Dominions No. 60.

Wool.—The Board resolved that, having regard to the purchases already effected by the War Office Raw Materials Department in Australia and New Zealand, and the negotiations then proceeding with regard to the purchase of South African wool, the position as to wool was, generally speaking, satisfactory and called for no action on their part; but they directed that certain points arising as to the control of prices of East Indian wool, and the purchase of the Falkland Islands clip, should be satisfactorily settled by the War Office with the India Office and the Colonial Office respectively.

Hides, Skins, and Leather.—The Board resolved:—

(1) That the War Office Raw Materials Department should approach the Treasury and ask sanction for continuing the importations of hides, tanning materials, and leather, on the basis of the present approved programme, until the United Kingdom requirements for at least the next six months were covered.

(2) That the War Office Raw Materials Department should, without delay, settle their policy in regard to the purchase and sale of East Indian hides, in consultation with the India Office.

Rubber.—The Board resolved that in any future arrangements for the control of exportation of rubber from the Straits Settlements, it would be desirable that the Governor should be instructed that a definite proportion of the exports in each month should be for ports in the United Kingdom, both to secure an adequate supply of rubber for this country and to assist in keeping the market for rubber in London.

Copper.—The Board has requested the Ministry of Munitions to consider with the Ministry of Reconstruction and the Board of Trade the possibility of obtaining the necessary capital to establish a large refinery in the United Kingdom, this refinery to be more particularly concerned with the treatment of ores of Empire origin. The Board has also been consulted with regard to the negotiations proceeding for the purchase by His Majesty's Government of the exportable surplus of Australian copper for a term of years.

Lead and its Ores.—The Board resolved that the Ministry of Munitions should dispose of its surplus stocks of lead for civilian consumption in the United Kingdom; and that the prohibition of the exportation of lead should be continued for the present. The Board was consulted with regard to the current negotiations for the purchase by His Majesty's Government of the exportable surplus of Australian lead for a term of years.

Spelter and Zinc Concentrates.—The Board approved an importation programme presented by the Board of Trade intended to cover the requirements of the British smelting industry. They also approved the proposals of the Board of Trade as regards the supply to the Belgian industry of a portion of the zinc concentrates from Australia which have been purchased by His Majesty's Government. These proposals included one that the supply of zinc concentrates to the Belgian industry should be contingent on the elimination of German control.

Tin and its Ores.—The Board resolved:—

(1) That the existing control of the exports of tin and tin ore from the Straits Settlements and Hong Kong should be continued for a time.

(2) That the prohibition of the export of tin and tin ore from the United Kingdom should also be continued temporarily.

(3) That the powers vested in the Rubber and Tin Exports Committee should be continued temporarily, so far as tin is concerned.

Mica.—The Board approved the following recommendations presented by the Ministry of Munitions:—

(1) That the Mica Control Order of April, 1918, should remain in force for the present.

(2) That the Government of India should put into force certain proposals drafted by the Ministry of Munitions in conjunction with an official of the Government of India for the development of Indian mica supplies.

(3) That licences to export from Calcutta to ports other than London should only be given for a certain amount of splittings and inferior block.

5. The Board has still under consideration the question of Oleaginous products and Manganese.

6. The Board has also considered the question of Timber Supplies.

The Timber Controller submitted a scheme which had been drawn up in agreement with the Shipping Controller and with the Treasury for the purchase from various sources both of soft timber and hard woods for the industrial requirements of the United Kingdom in the reconstruction period. The Board agreed to the principle of centralized purchase for timber and approved the scheme submitted by the Timber Controller; they further decided that the Canadian Government should be consulted as regards the financing of purchases in the Dominion of Canada, and this decision was duly carried out. The Government of Canada replied by offering to finance purchases up to a fixed limit upon condition that the Dominion Government should not be drawn upon by the Treasury of the United Kingdom except in the event of exchange being unfavourable to the United Kingdom at the times when payments should fall due.

7. The Board also proposes to take up the question of supplies of Phosphate Rock.

8. The Board has asked the Board of Trade and the Ministry of Munitions to arrange for the issue of a Hoarding Order (with a schedule of non-ferrous metals to which it applies) to prevent metal being withheld from the market with the object of forcing up prices.

9. The Board, in considering the question of the removal of restrictions on the exportation or importation of raw materials, agreed that, in principle, it was desirable that relaxation should first be accorded to goods going to, or coming from, places within the Empire, unless circumstances should permit of a more general relaxation forthwith.

MY LORD,

Government House, Wellington, 23rd July, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to express my regret that I have been unable, as yet, to communicate to Your Lordship the views of my Ministers on the questions raised in your predecessor's Confidential despatch Dominions No. 455, of the 21st August, 1918,* on the subject of the control of raw materials after the War.

2. In view of the very important nature of the proposals, and the absence from the Dominion of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance (who represented New Zealand at the Imperial War Conference), it is felt that action in regard to this matter should be deferred until their return to the Dominion. Cabinet will then have the advantage of hearing the opinion of its representatives at the Conference, and will be in a better position to decide on the most appropriate action to be taken.

3. The same comment applies in the case of Mr. Long's Confidential despatch Dominions No. 697, of the 6th December, 1918,† relative to the control of oleaginous produce after the War.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 8th November, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that, since the date of my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 25, Confidential, of the 11th January, 1919,* regarding the work of the Raw Materials Board, other bodies, particularly the Supreme Economic Council in Paris, have been set up and are dealing with the wider aspects of the question of the control of raw materials which it was contemplated should be referred to the Raw Materials Board when the Board had dealt with the question of the supply of essential raw materials for the United Kingdom.

2. In these circumstances His Majesty's Government have now decided to dissolve the Raw Materials Board, since it has already dealt with the work for which it was primarily appointed, and it is desirable to avoid the multiplication of overlapping boards and committees.

3. As regards the work of the Board I have nothing to add to my predecessor's despatch except that, as a result of further examination of the problems involved, it was found practicable to leave the question of the supply of oleaginous produce, manganese, and phosphate rock, referred to in paragraphs 5 and 7, to be dealt with by the departments concerned.

4. It will be remembered that the principle of first according relaxation from import restrictions to goods reaching the United Kingdom from other parts of the Empire was duly accepted by His Majesty's Government and carried into effect.

Correspondence took place in 1921 and 1922 with the Commonwealth of Australia as to measures to assist Australian meat producers, but His Majesty's Government were unable to take action which would have involved a licensing scheme and re-establishment of State control (see 21526/22). (a) Legislation necessary to give effect to the recommendations of the Committee in the event of the same being adopted in whole or in part by arrangements with the enemy Governments made in the Treaty of Peace.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 6TH JANUARY, 1919.

(P.C. 22.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 31st December, 1918, from the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, stating that he has had under consideration a despatch from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies to Your Excellency, dated 14th November, 1918, relative to a scheme for the establishment of an Imperial Bureau of Mycology, the funds for the maintenance of which it is proposed should be contributed by His Majesty's Government, the Governments of the Dominions and India, and of the other overseas possessions. In accordance with a resolution on the subject adopted by the Imperial War Conference on the 8th July, 1918, the proposed contribution from Canada is to be two hundred and fifty pounds a year for a period of three years.

The Minister is of opinion that the organization of such a Bureau as is contemplated cannot but be of value to the Empire and the Dominion. He, therefore, with the concurrence of the Minister of Agriculture, recommends that a grant for three years of two hundred and fifty pounds a year towards the Bureau of Mycology be paid, in due course, to the Crown Agents for the Colonies, the first payment to be made on the receipt by the Department of Agriculture of notification that the Bureau has been established and organized along the lines indicated in the resolution above referred to and the memorandum laid before the Imperial War Conference.

The Minister further submits that the question of the selection of a Canadian representative to act on the Committee of the Imperial Bureau of Mycology is still under consideration.

* No. 267 in Dominions No. 61.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency be pleased to cause a copy hereof to be forwarded to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the information of His Majesty's Government.

All of which is respectfully submitted for approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

2. As regards the question of representation of the Self-governing Dominions on the Committee, it will be appreciated that, with a view to ensuring its efficient working, it is not desirable to add unduly to the number of members. It is accordingly suggested that the most convenient plan might be for each of the Dominion Governments to invite one of the existing scientific members of the Committee to represent that Dominion, and, in addition, that the Government

* No. 267 in Dominions No. 61.

Mycologist of the Dominion (if one has been appointed) or some officer performing similar duties, should be nominated as an ex officio member of the Committee. It will be recollected that a somewhat similar plan was adopted in the case of the Imperial Bureau of Entomology.

3. I should be glad to learn whether this suggestion commends itself to your Government, and, if so, which of the members of the Committee they would wish to represent them.

I have, &c.,
MILNER.

The more important correspondence arising from Lord Milner's despatch of the 1st August, 1919 (44789/19 printed as No. 104 above), may be conveniently summarized under the following heads:—

(a) Representation of the self-governing Dominions on the Committee.

Existing scientific members of the Committee of the Bureau were nominated by the Dominion Governments as their representatives as follows:—

Canada (68702/19):—Professor Vernon H. Blackman, F.R.S., Sc.D.

Commonwealth of Australia (26843/20):—Professor Vernon H. Blackman, F.R.S., Sc.D.

New Zealand (285/19/20):—Sir David Prain, C.M.G., C.I.E., F.R.S.

Union of South Africa (65036/19):—Sir David Prain, C.M.G., C.I.E., F.R.S.

The Government of Newfoundland (16017/20) did not desire to be represented, but it was suggested that reference might be made to the High Commissioner for Newfoundland in London, in any case where the assistance of the Newfoundland Government might be desired by the Bureau.

(b) Dominion ex-officio members of the Committee.

Ex-officio members of the Committee were nominated by the Dominion Governments as follows:—

Canada (68702/19):—The Dominion Botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Commonwealth of Australia (26843/20):—Ewen Mackinnon, Esq., B.A., B.Sc., Science Abstractor, Commonwealth Institute of Science and Industry.

New Zealand (285/19/20):—A. H. Cockayne, Esq., Biologist of the Department of Agriculture, Industries and Commerce.

Union of South Africa (65036/19):—Dr. I. B. Pole Evans, M.A., D.Sc., F.L.S., Chief of Division of Botany and Plant Pathology.

Newfoundland:—See under (a) above.

(c) Funds of the Bureau.

A despatch (62057/20) was addressed to the Governments of the Dominions on the 20th December, 1920, notifying them that the services of Mr. E. J. Butler, M.B., F.L.S., Imperial Mycologist to the Government of India, had been lent to the Imperial Bureau, and that Mr. Butler had taken up the duties of Director with effect from the 22nd September, 1920. At the same time it was represented that an income from all sources of not less than £5,000 per annum was required to maintain the Bureau in efficient working order, and to provide for the issue of an abstracting journal. It was pointed out that the original estimate made in the Secretary of State's despatch of the 14th November, 1918 (No. 267 in Doms. No. 61), had been made on a purely provisional and war-time basis, and that the cost of running such an institution in this country had since then greatly increased. The Dominion Governments were asked whether they could see their way to contribute increased amounts as enumerated below, for three years from the 1st January, 1921, provision being made for reconsideration of the matter at the end of that period, in the light of experience gained:—

Canada, £600 per annum.

Commonwealth of Australia, £375 per annum.

New Zealand, £250 per annum.

Union of South Africa, £375 per annum.

The Government of New Zealand agreed (12262/21) to increase their contribution as requested, but replies (26275/21) (7158/21) were received from the Governments of Canada and the Union of South Africa regretting that they could not see their way to increase their contribution. The Government of the Commonwealth of Australia replied (24837/21) that they did not consider that the value of services received by Australia merited an increase of subsidy. The contribution of £150 originally asked for (see No. 267 in Doms. No. 61) was, however, made.

RESOLUTION VIII.: IMPERIAL STATISTICS.

The Imperial War Conference having considered the correspondence as to the improvement of Imperial Statistics arising out of the recommendations of the Dominions Royal Commission, is in favour of the proposal to hold a Conference of Statisticians after the War, and that such Conference consider the establishment of an Imperial Statistical Bureau under the supervision of an Inter-Imperial Committee.

Earliest date possible for Conference seems to be November, 1919, but thought that this may be inconvenient owing to pressure of work on principal Statistical Officers in connexion with demobilization and reconstruction work, and if so, one of early months 1920 may be preferred.

Should be glad to know by telegraph what date thought most suitable for Dominions representatives.—MILNER.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, ON THE 25TH AUGUST, 1920.

(P.C. 1732.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 13th July, 1920, from the Minister of Trade and Commerce, submitting that he has had before him the report and resolutions adopted by the Conference of Government Officers engaged in dealing with statistics in the British Empire, held at the Board of Trade, London, 20th January-26th February, 1920.

The report recommends the establishment in London at the earliest possible moment of a Bureau of Statistics for the British Empire, adequately equipped and staffed, for the purpose of obtaining, collating, and publishing statistics which bear upon the conditions and resources of the Empire, the common interests of its members and their relations with the rest of the world. It is proposed that the Bureau shall be under the control of a Council, to be incorporated by Royal Charter, consisting of members nominated in due proportions by the several Governments assenting, and to be under the immediate charge of a Director, assisted by an Advisory Committee, appointed by the Council, the Director to be appointed after consultation with the several Governments assenting. The remaining resolutions of the Conference deal with the principles and methods desirable in various sections of the statistical field for the purpose of promoting uniformity and co-ordination, and are such as may be adopted in essential features by the Government of Canada.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, advise that the proposals made by the Conference be approved in principle, and that the Honourable Sir George E. Perley, K.C.M.G., High Commissioner for Canada, be appointed to represent the Government of Canada in the discussion of details in connexion with the preparation of the proposed Royal Charter.

The Committee, on the same recommendation, further advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy hereof to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the information of His Majesty's Government.

All of which is respectfully submitted for approval.

MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 9th August, 1920.

REFERRING to your despatch dated 26th April, 1920, Dominions No. 173,* covering copies of a Parliamentary Paper containing the report of the British Empire Statistical Conference, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform Your Lordship that the Commonwealth Government believes that it would be desirable, at the appropriate time, that a conspectus of the statistics and organization of the Empire should be readily available for the use of the Governments and publicists of all parts of the Empire, and that, as recommended by the Conference, a Bureau of Statistics for the British Empire should be created.

As to the appropriate time for creating such a Bureau, the Commonwealth Government takes this opportunity of pointing out that several of the self-governing Dominions, viz., Canada, New Zealand, South Africa, and Australia, have, at considerable expense, already organized bureaux to deal systematically with the matters of census and statistics for their particular parts of the Empire; but the United Kingdom has not as yet organized a similar body to assemble what may be called the statistical products of various departmental activities, and my Ministers suggest that the creation of such a Bureau in the United Kingdom appears to be a desirable, if not, indeed, a necessary, preliminary to the establishment of an Empire Bureau. When the Bureau for the United Kingdom has been established, the aggregation of the material collected for the purposes of the Empire as a whole could be better and more expeditiously effected. Unless such an organization were first created, a large part of the work of the proposed Empire Bureau of Statistics would necessarily consist of formulating the statistical conspectus of the United Kingdom itself, a labour with which the Empire Bureau ought not to be charged.

* No. 117.

With the purely technical and other aspects of the proposals, the Commonwealth Government is in substantial agreement.

2. The Dominion Government entirely approve of the development and co-ordination of the statistics of the Empire on the lines suggested in the other resolutions of the Conference. We have, however, considered the Resolution regarding the establishment of a Statistical Bureau for the British Empire. We approve of this proposal, and we accept generally the views of the Conference regarding the functions and constitution of the Bureau. We note that it is proposed that the funds necessary for the maintenance of the Bureau should be obtained by joint contributions from the various Governments of the Empire which adhere to the Bureau and that the fixation of these contributions is to be left for settlement by a further meeting of representatives of those Governments in London. We have no objection to this proposal and presume that you will select our representative at this meeting.

RESOLUTION IX: IMPERIAL NEWS SERVICE.

The Imperial War Conference is impressed with the importance of securing, (a) that an adequate news service should be available in all parts of the British Empire, and (b) that this service should be supplied through British sources. The Conference requests His Majesty's Government to formulate a scheme, with these objects in view, on the lines indicated in the Memorandum* prepared by the Minister of Information, and to submit this scheme for the consideration of the Governments represented at the Conference.

12TH AUGUST. As your Ministers are aware no news service on any considerable scale supplied to Canada from British sources before the War. See Fifth Interim Report Dominions Royal Commission [Cd. 8457], pages 38 to 40, and discussions on Imperial News Service, Imperial War Conference, 1918.†

Since 1917 arrangements have been in force whereby Reuters have instituted general news service from London to Canada. This service sent to Reuters' agent, Ottawa, who supplies newspapers throughout Dominion free of subscription and also re-transmits messages to Newfoundland.

Recently negotiations have been proceeding with a view to continuance of this service for one year from 1st October, 1919, on similar lines to those in force since 1917, and Reuters have now proposed a scheme whereby general news service of 25,000 words per month would be sent to Canada on Government account at estimated cost £598 19s. 2d. per month, plus £120 per month for editorial expenses London and Canada.

Former charge based upon cost of press messages. Reason for latter charge is that as there has been no regular Reuters' service to Canada like that to other British Oversea Dominions, special editorial arrangements have to be made for composing, editing, and despatching service to Canada and for landing it there. Selection of news would be left to Reuters' discretion subject to any instructions which may be given in special circumstances and subject to general condition that no sporting news or news not of national importance may be sent on Government account.

His Majesty's Government prepared to pay half cost of proposed service, including editorial expenses, for one year from 1st October.

Would your Ministers be ready to pay other half of expenditure? Please reply by telegraph.—MILNER.

Oversea Dominions by a special service on Government account. Latter service designed to convey news of events of Imperial interest in all parts of the Empire, and ministerial statements on matters of public importance which in ordinary circumstances would not have been transmitted at all or would have been sent only in a very condensed form.

His Majesty's Government felt that it was of much importance that during the War information of this kind should be given widest publicity possible, and it was thought that as Reuters already supplied general news service to most parts of the Empire their organization was best fitted for distribution of additional news of the kind in question.

Recently negotiations have been proceeding with a view to continuance of this special service for a period of one year from 1st October, 1919, on similar lines to those in force during War, and Reuters have now put forward scheme whereby special news service would be sent on Government account

(a) to the Mediterranean and the Eastern Colonies,

(b) to South and East Africa and to West Africa in a condensed form,

(c) to Australia and New Zealand.

This special service would be supplied to newspapers free of cost, and would be not in substitution for but additional to regular Reuters' service. It would be arranged by the Editors who conduct regular service, and selection of news would be left to Reuters' discretion subject to any instructions which may be given in special circumstances and subject to general condition that no sporting news or news not of national importance may be sent on Government account.

Total cost of proposed services on three routes above mentioned about £9,300 per annum, and His Majesty's Government prepared to pay part of this cost, but they wish to ascertain whether the other Governments interested willing to contribute to the cost of the special service on the particular route with which they are specially concerned.

[To Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand: On route to Australia and New Zealand total cost for service of 12,000 words per month estimated at about £375 per month. His Majesty's Government willing to contribute £175* per month. Would your Ministers be prepared to make contribution of similar amount for one year from 1st October? Please reply by telegraph.]

[To the Union of South Africa: On route to South, East, and West Africa total cost for service of 12,000 words a month, estimated at about £2,100 per annum.

His Majesty's Government willing to contribute £700 per annum, and they suggest that Union Government should contribute similar amount, remainder being met by contributions from East and West African Colonies and Protectorates.

Please telegraph whether your Ministers agree to make contribution suggested for one year from 1st October.]—MILNER.

REUTERS' AGENCY.

MR. HURD asked the Secretary to the Treasury what sum was paid to Reuters' Agency in the last financial year, and what sum is due in the current financial year in respect of Press cablegrams to Canada and other parts of the Empire, respectively; what are the exact services for which these payments are made; and what is the term of the contract with this Agency?

Lieut.-Colonel Amery: I understand that in the last financial year a sum of £30,697 was paid to Reuters' Agency by the Ministry of Information in respect of Press cablegrams to Canada and other parts of the Empire, and that this payment was made in consideration for the despatch of special items of news of Imperial interest which would not have been cabled under ordinary commercial conditions. The services to Canada and other parts of the British Empire are being carried on until 1st October, 1919, on a reduced scale; the estimated cost of these services for a whole year, on the present lines, is approximately £18,000. The question of the arrangements to be made after 1st October, 1919, is now under consideration.

* £175 should read £125. The mistake occurred in coding and was rectified later by telegraph.

At present Canadian Press, Limited, control operations of another association known as Canadian Associated Press, which has an office in London and supplies British news to Canadian papers. Both organizations are to some extent subsidized by Government of Canada. Canadian Press, Limited, propose to discuss extension of their cable service at their annual meeting in October, but in the meantime they decline to enter into any arrangements for carrying or distributing news unless they have entire responsibility for selection of news to be carried (out). Since, however, this Association has, it is understood, no organization for collection of news of Imperial interest all over the world, His Majesty's Government could only consider question of subsidizing it if it first made some arrangement with such an organization as Reuters' as would ensure to their satisfaction and that of Canadian Government Imperial character of news sent and its adequacy for purpose in view.

From inquiries made here find that Post Office would undertake to carry such a service by the Imperial cable, but must charge full press rate, 5d. per word.

Difference between this rate and any amount which Canadian Press and Reuters would be prepared to contribute would accordingly have to be made up either by Canadian Government or from special vote on Estimates here.

If Canadian Press does not object to this form of subvention His Majesty's Government prepared as temporary measure for five months from 1st November to contribute half difference between ordinary rate of 5d. and say 1d. rate (which Canadian Press would be required to pay) for service of 30,000 words per month, provided that Canadian Government would contribute remaining half. Contribution involved on this basis would be £250 per month each by His Majesty's Government and Canadian Government. subsidized news to Canada and other parts of the Empire; and, if so, what is the character of the news to be subsidized, the amount of British public money involved, and of contributions by other Governments of the Empire, and the term of the arrangement?

Lieut.-Colonel Amery: I have been asked to reply to this question. I would refer my hon. friend to Class V, 2, page 36, of the Estimate for Foreign and Colonial Services for 1920-21. The only news service at present in operation to which His Majesty's Government contributes is one to the Union of South Africa, the Colonies and Protectorates in East Africa, Malaya, and Hong Kong, which has been approved up to 31st December, 1920. The cost of the telegrams on this service is made up as to approximately two-thirds by the Oversea Governments concerned and as to one-third by His Majesty's Government. The news sent relates to events of Imperial interest in all parts of the Empire and Ministerial statements on matters of public importance which, in ordinary circumstances, would not be sent at all, or sent only in a very condensed form. The question of continuing this service after 31st December will come up for review next month. As regards Canada His Majesty's Government would be glad to see the news service from the United Kingdom improved, and there is reason to think that the Canadian Government take a similar view. Various discussions have taken place, but no arrangements have yet been arrived at.

IMPERIAL NEWS SERVICES.

MR. HURD asked the Prime Minister whether His Majesty's Government is taking any steps in pursuance of the desire generally expressed at recent Imperial Conferences for improved news services between this country and other parts of the Empire; and whether, in any such services, it is intended to institute any form of Government control or supervision of the news sent or confine the dissemination of subsidized news to any single agency rather than to give equal facilities to all agencies and all authorized newspaper correspondents?

The Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies (Lieut.-Colonel Amery): I have been asked to reply to this question. His Majesty's Government are fully in sympathy with the desire that the news service between the United Kingdom and other parts of the Empire should be improved; the steps already taken in this direction are explained in an answer which I gave to my hon. friend on 22nd November.§ As regards the last part of the question, His Majesty's Government are as a general principle in favour of granting equal facilities to all agencies and recognized newspaper correspondents, without any control or stipulations as to the character of the news sent, subject always to practical difficulties which may, for the time being, make it necessary for such assistance to be limited in its application and directed to special objects.

Mr. Hurd: Can the hon. and gallant Gentleman now give the House an assurance that in any arrangement for bringing down cable rates with the aid of British State money, these lower rates will be available for all news services?

Lieut.-Colonel Amery: I think that the last part of my answer meets that point. From the circumstances of the time we may not be able to carry out the general rule that the lower rates should be given to everyone.

The Conference takes note of the action taken and contemplated by His Majesty's Government with a view to freeing the industry of the United Kingdom from dependence on German dye-stuffs, and recommends the Governments of the Empire to consider immediately what steps can be taken to co-operate with the efforts of the Imperial Government to promote the successful development of the dye industry in the British Empire, and so to avoid enemy domination over our essential industries.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Long's despatch Dominions No. 628, of the 31st October,* on the subject of the dye manufacturing industry, and to convey to you the assurance of my Ministers that, although no dyes are manufactured in Newfoundland, they will take any action tending to the promotion of the industry in the British Empire.

EXTRACT.

" PRIOR to the War we imported aniline dyes from Germany at a cost of about 28-2/5 cents per pound landed at Grand Falls, equivalent to a cost for dyeing of 1-8 cents per ton of paper. In 1916, after experimenting with a great many substitutes which gave very inferior results, at a cost of about $1.50 for dyeing a ton of paper, we finally purchased two lots of dyes in China, through the agency of a firm of bankers in Boston, whose foreign agent had located these dyes. These dyes were said to have been imported into China before the War, and we obtained the necessary licences for importation into Newfoundland. One lot of 2,000 pounds which we bought in January, 1916, cost us $6.50 per pound; the second lot of 2,500 pounds, which we bought in June 1916, cost us $17.50 per pound. The duty charged in Newfoundland is thirty-five per cent, plus ten per cent., so that our average cost for these consignments was $14.30 per pound. This is equivalent to a cost for dyeing of 90 cents. per ton of newsprint. At the present moment we are quoted by American manufacturers $4 per pound for a dye which is not quite so effective as the German dyes were.

"I may say that the cost of dye is one of the few items which seem likely to recede in price, and I shall be glad indeed if any steps can be taken which will enable us to use British dyes in our manufacturing here.

"In regard to what steps the Government can take to co-operate in promoting the successful development of the dye industry in the Empire, I have not been able to give this matter very extensive consideration, but my proposal would be that the Government of Newfoundland should place British dyes when used in manufacturing newsprint on the tariff schedule at a rate, say, one-half of that applied to dyes of American origin, and that German dyes should be excluded until the selling price of British, French, or American dyes exceeded $6 per pound of full strength aniline dye, such as is ordinarily used in the manufacture of newsprint.

"I may say that the German dye which we imported from China was a remarkably fine product, and had evidently been put up specially for the Chinese market; we have never had anything approaching it delivered to us from American manufacturers since the manufacture of aniline dyes was commenced in the United States. . . ."

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 24th February, 1919.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's minute No. 62/1073, of 19th December, 1918, minute Confidential No. 62/1074, of 19th December, 1918, and minute No. 62/1084, of 8th January, 1919, transmitting despatch Dominions No. 628, of 31st October, 1918, with enclosure, Confidential despatch Dominions No. 629, of 31st October, 1918, with enclosure, and despatch Dominions No. 684, of 28th November, 1918, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the subjects of the dye manufacturing industry and State assistance thereto.

With reference to Dominions despatch No. 628, it is noted, from the enclosure accompanying Confidential despatch No. 629, that the Board of Trade anticipates that, as the consumption of dyes in South Africa is very small at present, there should be no special difficulty in supplying, through British sources, the needs of the Union to a large extent.

As regards the future, it may be stated that it is not anticipated that there will be any material increase in the near future in the Union's requirements of dyes.

While Ministers are not aware that there is any intention on the part of industrial undertakings in the Union to engage in the production of dyes, it may be mentioned that plants for the recovery of by-products from coal are now being erected. These plants are the first step towards the recovery of all derivatives from tar, and, while it will depend upon the business prospects as to which and how many of the tar derivatives will be produced, colliery concerns in the Union are fully alive to the value of development of the industry in this direction, and it is to be expected that further by-product plants will be started, in which event there should be considerable prospect of one or other of the concerns turning their attention to the production of dyes.

Ministers have the honour to state that it is recognized that it is of national importance that valuable by-products of coal should not be lost, and effort will be directed towards this end.

MY LORD,

Government House, Wellington, 14th March, 1919.

With reference to your predecessor's despatch, Dominions No. 628, of the 31st October, 1918,* transmitting a copy of Resolution N† on the subject of the dye manufacturing industry, which was passed at the Imperial War Conference, 1918, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that my Ministers have had inquiries made in New Zealand, and are advised that users of dyes in the Dominion are informed that at present British dye manufacturers can only produce twenty-five per cent. of the world's requirements.

2. In America, the manufacture of dyes has been taken up, and the trade is being pushed strongly, and it is stated that, unless Great Britain can increase her present output, woollen manufacturers and others using dyes in New Zealand will have to buy where they can to the best advantage.

3. All woollen mills in New Zealand are anxious to secure British dyes, and several took shares in the British Dyewares Company in the hope of securing preference. It is pointed out that the dyes supplied by the British Dyewares Company are reliable, whereas those prepared in America are not yet standardized, and consequently cannot be bought with confidence. At the same time it is anticipated that the standardization of American dyes will be brought about very quickly.

4. My Government would be glad if you could advise them what allocation of the British output is likely to be made available for New Zealand, as those using dyes here are desirous of supporting British trade, and only wish to be assured of being able to obtain the necessary supplies.

5. Steps are being taken by my Ministers to ascertain, as far as it is possible, what are the normal requirements of dyes in this Dominion.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 320.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 30th August, 1919.

With reference to my telegram of the 25th July,* and previous correspondence, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of correspondence with the United States Ambassador relative to the importation of dyestuffs into Australia.

I have, &c.,
 MILNER.

Enclosure 1 in No. 180.

(No. 441.)

Embassy of the United States of America.

THE American Ambassador presents his compliments to His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and has the honour to inform His Lordship that he is in receipt of a communication from the Acting Secretary of State in Washington in which it is set forth that the Government of the United States has noted, with some concern, the issuance by the Government of Australia, on 27th February last, of a prohibition upon the importation of dyestuffs, except of British origin, without a special permit from the Ministry of Trade and Customs.

* No. 178.

It is further set forth that the Acting Secretary of State in Washington has received reports which would seem to indicate that this prohibition was imposed at the desire of His Majesty's Government, and that its purpose is to provide a non-competitive market in Australia for the products of the British subsidized dyestuff industry.

It would appear that, as this prohibition was only imposed after the signing of the Armistice and under the authority conferred on the Governor-General in Council by section 52 (g) of the Customs Act to Prohibit the Importation of Goods by Proclamation, this prohibition is neither a war measure nor a temporary prohibition intended to meet the difficulties in connection with the exchange situation, and to cover merely the period of rehabilitation of industries, which is evidently the general purpose of the import restrictions imposed by European belligerents. It is understood that the prohibition referred to may, according to Australian laws, be maintained indefinitely without any further legislative action.

Mr. Davis ventures to call to Lord Curzon's attention the fact that, without indulging in any comment on the subject of Imperial Preference, the United States Government feels that there is a distinct difference between a system of Imperial Preference within the British Empire which permits goods from other countries to enter, although at higher tariff rates, and a total prohibition of the character imposed by the Proclamation of the Australian Governor-General; and that it trusts that the latter will not be maintained and thus keep American dyestuffs out of the Australian market.

In view of these circumstances Mr. Davis has the honour to inform Lord Curzon that the United States Government would be glad to be furnished with the early assurances of His Majesty's Government that such a prohibition is not intended, and that licences will be granted for American products, even although they compete with Great Britain in regard to dyestuffs, as well as all available information concerning the purpose of the prohibition and its probable duration.

London, 25th June, 1919.

Enclosure 2 in No. 180.

(No. 112883/C/145.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 21st August, 1919.

In your Note No. 441, of 25th June last, Your Excellency informed me that the United States Government had noted with some concern the issue by the Government of Australia, on 27th February last, of a prohibition upon the importation of dyestuffs, except of British origin, without a special permit from the Ministry of Trade and Customs; and you requested information with regard to the scope and intention of this measure.

2. In reply, I have the honour to recall to Your Excellency that at the Imperial War Conference, 1918, it was resolved that the Governments of the Empire should consider immediately what steps could be taken to co-operate with the efforts of His Majesty's Government to promote the successful development of the dye industry in the British Empire and so avoid enemy domination over this essential industry. The proceedings of the Conference were published in Parliamentary Paper [Cd. 9177] and Your Excellency will find the text of the Resolution on page 5 of that paper, and the discussion leading up thereto on pages 96 to 104. The action taken by the Australian Government is in pursuance of that Resolution and is strictly comparable with that of His Majesty's Government, who have prohibited, except under licence, the importation of all dyestuffs which are not the bona fide produce of the British Empire.

3. I have the honour to add that the question of the conditions under which foreign dyes can be admitted into Australia is now under consideration.

I have, etc.

(FOR EARL CURZON OF KEDLESTON.)

The Honourable

John W. Davis,

etc. etc., etc.

RESOLUTION XI.: SHIPPING.

The Conference accepts in principle the establishment of an Imperial Investigation Board and refers it to a Committee of the Conference to frame a detailed scheme for such a Board.

The Conference agrees that it be also referred to the Committee to consider the best machinery for promoting the development of Imperial communications to the best advantage, with special reference to the probable size of vessels and the consequent demands upon harbour accommodation for the purposes of Imperial requirements, and to the Resolution handed in by the Prime Minister of New Zealand.

RESOLUTION XXIV.: SHIPPING.

(1) That in order to maintain satisfactorily the connexions, and at the same time encourage commercial and industrial relations, between the different countries of the British Empire, this Conference is of opinion that shipping on the principal routes, especially between the heart of the Empire and the Overseas Dominions, including India, should be brought under review by an Inter-Imperial Board on which the United Kingdom and the British Dominions and Dependencies should be represented.

(2) That for this purpose an Imperial Investigation Board, representing the various parts of the Empire, be appointed, with power to inquire into and report on all matters connected with ocean freights and facilities, and on all matters connected with the development and improvement of the sea communications between the different parts of the Empire, with special reference to the size and type of ships, and the capacities of harbours; the Board to include, in addition to representatives of the Governments concerned, persons with expert knowledge of the problems involved, including representatives of the shipping and trading interests.

EXTRACT FROM THE DEBATES OF THE CANADIAN HOUSE OF COMMONS, 11TH JUNE, 1919.

IMPERIAL BOARD OF INVESTIGATION.

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA, ON 11TH JUNE, IN REPLY TO MR. J. E. ARMSTRONG.

ON the orders of the day :

RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR ROBERT BORDEN (Prime Minister): On the 9th of June, the Honourable Member for East Lambton (Mr. Armstrong) asked the following question, which will be found in Hansard of that date:—

MR. J. E. ARMSTRONG (East Lambton): I should like to ask the Government whether it is true that the Imperial Government has appointed an Imperial Board of Investigation for the purpose of inquiring into trade relations between different parts of the British Empire; whether Sir George Perley has been appointed a member of that Board, and when the findings of the Board, if such has been appointed, may be expected. I should also like to know whether the Board will inquire into trade or tariff agreements, and into the tolls or arrangements entered into between the different shipping companies within the Empire.

In answer to this question, I would say that :

(1) No such Board has yet been constituted; but the Government have under consideration certain proposals, submitted by His Majesty's Government, for the constitution of an Imperial Investigation Board, to be set up by the Governments of the Empire, in pursuance of Resolutions XI. and XXIV.* of the Imperial War Conference, 1918. It is proposed that the Board shall have power to inquire into complaints with regard to ocean freights, facilities, and conditions in the inter-Imperial trade, and into similar questions referred to them by the various Governments; to survey the facilities for maritime transport within the Empire, and to make recommendations for the co-ordination and improvement of such facilities.

* Pages xiv. and xvii. in Dominions No. 60.

(2) Such a Board not having been finally constituted, no definite appointment has yet been made.

(3) Answered by paragraph 1.

(4) Since the receipt of the proposals mentioned in paragraph 1 a proposal has been put forward to the Imperial Government, by the Prime Minister of Canada, on behalf of the Government of Canada, that full power as to the control of ocean rates and the disposition of the shipping of the British Empire be conferred by concurrent legislation upon a temporary commission, representative of the United Kingdom and the Dominions; and that a committee, representative of the United Kingdom and the Dominions, shall be immediately set up for the purpose of framing a permanent scheme for the same purpose, and for the general development of ocean transportation within the Empire. The Prime Minister has further suggested that this proposal be considered in connexion with that described in paragraph 1, and has declared that the Government of Canada will be glad to join in the discussion as soon as the Government of the United Kingdom is prepared to consider the matter.

MEMORANDUM AS TO SEA COMMUNICATIONS, BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE W. M. HUGHES, PRIME MINISTER OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

The scattered nature of the Empire and the great distances of the Oversea Dominions from one another and from England make the question of sea communications all important.

This is especially the case at the present moment, when, after four years' disorganization of trade and traffic and the catastrophic changes in Europe, the world's trade has now to be built up again, and the directions of its development will be vitally affected by the shipping facilities which are available.

Apart from questions of trade, rapidity of transit and frequent opportunities of quick access are of immense importance to the development of Imperial sentiment and interests.

The present methods of communication are unsatisfactory and out of date; and the problem as a whole needs to be dealt with, not piecemeal, but systematically.

What we should aim at is a system of services of fast mail and passenger boats, able to keep up a speed of twenty-five knots, along the main Empire routes: from England to Vancouver, from Vancouver to Australia and New Zealand; from Australia, via both Suez and the Cape to England. Such a service would bring the Empire closer together, solidify its interests, and greatly facilitate the growth of Empire trade; besides affording much-needed opportunities for emigration to the roomy Dominions overseas. It would, for instance, bring Fremantle within eighteen days' journey of London, South Africa within eight days of Australia, and Vancouver within twelve days of Sydney.

* No. 271 in Dominions No. 61.

Ships of this class would in time of war be of great value as merchant cruisers. It is clear, however, that the great fleet of up-to-date steamships required for this purpose is not a purely commercial proposition. Its establishment will require substantial subsidies. It is an Imperial project, and the only hope for its inauguration lies in the financial backing of the Empire—each part of the Empire contributing its quota according to a fixed scale. And attention may be directed to the fact that at the Imperial Conference of 1907 the principle of this project received the support of the present Prime Minister of Great Britain.

Supplementary to this, consideration should also be given to the establishment of aerial services, for mails and passengers, for further linking up the remote parts of the Empire; and this, too, can only be introduced on an adequate scale, if strongly backed by Imperial resources.

16TH JULY. I trust that your Government will consent to nominate a representative to a Committee which Mr. Lloyd George desires to set up at once, consisting of representatives of the Home Government and of the Dominions expert in commercial and shipping matters, to consider the whole question of and advise as to the steps necessary to improve Imperial sea communications. Dominion Ministers have repeatedly urged upon us lately the unsatisfactory nature of the present position. It has been raised on several occasions by Sir Robert Borden, and more recently by Mr. Hughes in a memorandum* which he wished the Imperial Cabinet to discuss, but this proved impracticable, as Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Massey had left, and Mr. Lloyd George was obliged to take a rest. The suggestion of a Committee was, however, cordially approved by Mr. Hughes, who has provisionally named Mr. Larkin, the manager of the Commonwealth fleet of merchant ships, as Australian representative. Similar invitations will be addressed to South Africa and New Zealand. It is hoped that at a very early date Committee may begin its labours.—MILNER.

MY LORD,
I AM directed by Mr. Lloyd Harris to transmit to you, and request your consideration of, the enclosed memorandum respecting necessary control of ocean freight rates and the disposition of available shipping, which was prepared by Sir Robert Borden and by him transmitted to, and discussed with, the Prime Minister and the Lord Privy Seal.

I am, &c.,
CHARLES ARMSTRONG,
Captain.

* No. 197.

Enclosure in No. 199.

MEMORANDUM RESPECTING NECESSARY CONTROL OF OCEAN FREIGHT RATES AND THE DISPOSITION OF AVAILABLE SHIPPING.

1. As transportation between different portions of the British Empire must be carried on almost wholly by means of shipping, the control of ocean freight rates and a just disposition of available shipping in the interests of the whole Empire are vitally necessary.

2. Subject to the qualifications hereafter mentioned, there is no such control of rates or satisfactory regulations of the disposition of shipping.

3. Whatever control of rates is presently exercised must be regarded as ineffective; and any such control is wholly under the direction of the British Ministry of Shipping.

4. The disposition and user of available shipping is subject to control, which has been assumed by the British Ministry of Shipping.

5. The Government of Canada is strongly impressed with the view that this condition is not sound; that the policy and methods hitherto pursued have not been characterized in some respects by wise or comprehensive outlook, and that the future relations of the British Empire depend very materially upon the immediate remedy of existing conditions.

6. In its broadest aspects the question thus presented must necessarily demand attentive, and perhaps prolonged, consideration for its permanent solution; but a temporary solution is urgently important, as beyond question the present situation has become critical, and if uncontrolled it will probably lead to unfortunate and perhaps disastrous results. The following proposals, therefore, present suggestions; first, for a temporary solution, and, second, for such consideration of the problem in its larger aspects as may result in a permanent solution.

7. Temporary solution: It is proposed that full power as to the control of ocean rates and as to the disposition and user of British Shipping now available, wherever owned or registered within the Empire, shall be conferred upon a Commission on which the United Kingdom shall have two representatives, and each of the Dominions (including India) shall have one representative. The United Kingdom and each such Dominion shall undertake to enact such legislation as would give to the orders and regulations formulated by the Commission the force of law in all parts of the Empire.

8. Permanent proposal: Attention is called to Resolution XXI. of the Imperial War Conference, 1917, which is as follows: "Imperial Preference: The time has arrived when all possible encouragement should be given to the development of Imperial resources, and especially to making the Empire independent of other countries in respect of food supplies, raw materials, and essential industries. With these objects in view this Conference expresses itself in favour of (1) The principle that each part of the Empire, having due regard to the interests of our Allies, shall give specially favourable treatment and facilities to the produce and manufactures of other parts of the Empire. (2) Arrangements by which intending emigrants from the United Kingdom may be induced to settle in countries under the British flag."

The Report of the Royal Commission on Natural Resources presented to the Parliament of the United Kingdom, in March, 1917, should also be considered in so far as it relates to the operations of steamship companies carrying passengers and freight between different parts of the Empire.

Having regard to the principles upon which the above-mentioned resolution of the Imperial War Conference was based, and to the interpretation which was given to it by the speech of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom shortly after its passage, it is proposed that a Committee composed of representatives of the Government of the United Kingdom and of the Governments of each of the Dominions (including India) should be immediately set up for the purpose of framing a scheme which shall embrace (a) all that is included in the temporary proposals above mentioned, (b) the effective carrying out of the policy upon which Resolution XXI. above mentioned, was based, (c) the establishment of a permanent commission representing all parts of the Empire, which shall be invested with wide powers relative to transportation upon the ocean. Such powers should, as far as possible, be similar or analogous to those which have been conferred in Canada and in other Dominions upon permanent commissions charged with the supervision and control of railway and steamship rates, and of the methods and conditions of operation.

11TH OCTOBER. Referring to my telegram of 16th July, and your telegram of 2nd August,† His Majesty's Government greatly regret that owing to urgent pressure of other public business it was impossible to arrange for establishment of Committee on Imperial Sea Communications before return of MacLean to Canada. They hope, however, to call Committee together in the immediate future, and would like to know whether Canadian Government would wish MacLean to return or would prefer to nominate another representative.

As regards terms of reference, following proposed:—

Begins:

(1) Freights, Facilities and Conditions of Transport.—To inquire into complaints from persons and bodies interested with regard to ocean freights, facilities and conditions in the Inter-Imperial trade or questions of a similar nature referred to them by any of the nominating authorities, and to report their conclusions to the Governments concerned.

(2) Imperial Communications.—To survey the facilities for maritime transport on such routes as appear to them to be necessary for trade within the Empire, and to make recommendations to the proper authority for the co-ordination and improvement of such facilities with regard to the type, size and speed of ships, depth of water in docks or channels, construction of harbour works and similar matters.—Ends.

It will be seen that terms of reference correspond to those proposed for Imperial Investigation Board, see my predecessor's despatch 9th December. Dominions No. 703, and your telegram of 27th May.‡ The Committee will, however, be competent to consider schemes such as that in memorandum§ handed by your Prime Minister to Mr. Lloyd George in May last. It will, no doubt, depend on Committee's report what permanent machinery for Imperial co-operation with regard to Sea Communications will be eventually set up.

Composition of committee would be as contemplated for Imperial Investigation Board, except that proposed to have independent Chairman nominated by Cabinet here, and to increase number of unofficial members from four to five. All appointments would be, of course, solely for duration of committee.

To avoid confusion with an already existing Communications Committee here, which deals with cables and wireless, proposed to call new committee, "Imperial Shipping Committee."

Hoped that your Ministers will agree to above proposals. Please reply by telegraph, and give name of Canadian representative.—MILNER.

Now proposed to slightly vary proposals for Imperial Investigation Board contained in despatch referred to, as follows:—

(1) Body to be called Imperial Shipping Committee.

(2) Composition to be as contemplated for Investigation Board except that proposed to have independent Chairman nominated by Cabinet here and to increase number of unofficial members from four to five. Appointments to be for duration of Committee. Sir Albert Stanley, formerly President of the Board of Trade, has agreed to act as Chairman.

(3) Terms of reference to correspond to those proposed for Investigation Board, but it is intended that establishment of permanent machinery for Imperial co-operation with regard to sea communications should await report of Committee.

INSTRUMENT OF APPOINTMENT OF THE IMPERIAL SHIPPING COMMITTEE.

WHEREAS the Imperial War Conference, 1918, passed on the 26th July, 1918, the following resolution:—

(1) That in order to maintain satisfactorily the connexions, and at the same time encourage commercial and industrial relations, between the different countries of the British Empire, this Conference is of opinion that shipping on the principal routes, especially between the heart of the Empire and the Overseas Dominions, including India, should be brought under review by an Inter-Imperial Board on which the United Kingdom and the British Dominions and Dependencies should be represented.

(2) That for this purpose an Imperial Investigation Board, representing the various parts of the Empire, be appointed, with power to inquire into and report on all matters connected with ocean freights and facilities, and on all matters connected with the development and improvement of the sea communications between the different parts of the Empire, with special reference to the size and type of ships, and the capacities of harbours; the Board to include, in addition to representatives of the Governments concerned, persons with expert knowledge of the problems involved, including representatives of the shipping and trading interests.

And whereas it has been represented to me, The Right Honourable David Lloyd George, Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury, by the Secretary of State for the Colonies after consultation with the Governments of the Dominion of Canada, of the Commonwealth of Australia, of the Dominion of New Zealand, of the Union of South Africa, and of Newfoundland, by the Secretary of State for India and by the President of the Board of Trade that it is now desirable that a Committee should be appointed under the title of the Imperial Shipping Committee with the following functions, viz.:—

(i) To inquire into complaints from persons and bodies interested with regard to ocean freights, facilities, and conditions in the inter-Imperial trade or questions of a similar nature referred to them by any of the nominating authorities, and to report their conclusions to the Governments concerned.

(ii) To survey the facilities for maritime transport on such routes as appear to them to be necessary for trade within the Empire, and to make recommendations to the proper authority for the co-ordination and improvement of such facilities with regard to the type, size, and speed of ships, depth of water in docks and channels, construction of harbour works and similar matters.

Now I, therefore, do hereby appoint the following persons to form the Imperial Shipping Committee and to exercise the functions hereinbefore set forth:—

Sir H. J. Mackinder, M.P. (Chairman)

Sir A. H. D. Ramsay Steel-Maitland, Bart., M.P., nominated by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Sir W. S. Meyer, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., nominated by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith, G.C.B., nominated by the Board of Trade.

Hon. Sir George H. Perley, K.C.M.G., nominated by the Government of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. H. B. G. Larkin, nominated by the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia.

The High Commissioner for New Zealand, nominated by the Government of the Dominion of New Zealand.

Captain G. Bowden, M.C., nominated by the Government of the Union of South Africa.

Hon. Sir Edgar R. Bowring, nominated by the Government of Newfoundland.

Sir Kenneth Anderson, Bart., K.C.M.G.,

Sir Alfred Booth, Bart.,

Mr. W. Lionel Hitchens,

Mr. Kenneth Lee,

Mr. J. W. Murray.

being persons experienced in shipping and commerce.

I further appoint Mr. E. J. Elliot, of the Board of Trade, to be Secretary to the said Committee.

Enclosure in No. 225.

COVERING NOTE TO PROPOSALS FOR AN IMPERIAL HEAVY PARCELS POST SCHEME.

THE Imperial War Conference on the 11th of July, 1918, passed a resolution to the effect that the facilities for inter-Imperial parcels delivery should be enlarged, improved, and co-ordinated, and recommended that the proposals contained in a Board of Trade memorandum which had been submitted to the Conference should be examined by the Governments represented at the Conference with a view to the preparation of a detailed scheme.

The Board of Trade thereupon entered into communication with the Post Office with a view to the formulation of such a detailed scheme. Unfortunately, the uncertainty attending freights and railway rates and conditions has so far made it impossible to draw up any proposals more definite than those contained in the memorandum attached.

The determination of a suitable rate for the inland conveyance of heavy parcels depends on the issue of negotiations with the British railway companies, which are now proceeding, with regard to the rate for the carriage of ordinary inland parcels; and at the present time it is impracticable to pursue the question. Moreover, before a rate for sea conveyance can be settled, negotiations will have to be opened with a considerable number of steamship companies since the existing agreements cover parcels within the ordinary limit of 11 lb. only.

In order, however, to put the General Post Office in a better position to negotiate with the railway and shipping companies, and in pursuance of the resolution of July, 1918, His Majesty's Government desire to submit the matter in the present shape to the Governments of the Dominions and of India. His Majesty's Government will be very glad to consider any modifications of the scheme which the Oversea Governments may desire to propose, but they hope that the main principles, which closely resemble those already set out in the Board of Trade memorandum referred to in the resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1918, will be accepted.

MEMORANDUM.

Imperial Heavy Parcel Scheme.

1. The Postmaster-General is prepared to enter into an agreement with India and the Dominions and Colonies for the establishment of an exchange by post of parcels weighing more than 11 lb., the present maximum, but not more than 28 lb., distinct from and supplementing the existing services up to 11 lb. in weight.

2. It will be necessary, in order to keep down the charges to the users of the proposed service, for the Post Office to impose certain limitations on the facilities offered, as compared with those afforded in the existing service, e.g., the parcels over 11 lb. would not be delivered by the Post Office to the consignee's address, except at an additional charge; and the posting would have to be restricted to the head Post Offices in the largest towns. The sea service might also, in many cases, be performed by slower steamers than the fast mail boats.

3. Charges.—The postage rates on the parcels weighing more than 11 lb. would have to be made up as in the case of the smaller parcels of the amounts (a) paid for the sea conveyance, and (b) claimed by the terminal offices for their land services.

(a) Sea Conveyance.—It will be necessary for the Post Office to make separate arrangements with the steamship companies for the conveyance of such parcels, since the existing parcel post contracts provide only for the conveyance of parcels not exceeding 11 lb. The shipping companies would no doubt expect to be paid at rates which would yield an approximate equivalent of the commercial freight rate for the time being in force. The commercial freight rates (weight or measurement) for fine cargo were, during 1920, 100s. a ton to Canada, 100s. a ton to Bombay, and 125s. per ton to Australia and New Zealand, and in September, 1921, were 100s. a ton to Canada, 75s. a ton to Bombay, 125s. a ton to Australia, and 137s. 6d. a ton to New Zealand; and as parcel rates would be based on measurement, the rates to Australia and New Zealand would probably involve a payment of at least 400s. per ton weight of parcels. In view of the abnormal position of the freight market at the present time it is impossible to assume any freight rates on which could be based a reliable estimate of the future working cost of such a scheme.

Further, while it would be convenient and in accordance with the Board of Trade memorandum referred to in the resolution of the Imperial Conference, in pursuance of which this scheme has been drawn up, to fix a uniform scale of charges for all the Dominions, the above figures show, unfortunately, that there would be serious difficulty in arranging this unless some of the parties concerned can see their way to run the risk of incurring some loss upon the conveyance of these heavy parcels.

(b) Rates for Land Services: (1) United Kingdom.—This rate would have to cover the cost of handling the parcel in the Post Office, together with the cost of conveyance by rail in this country. The cost to the Post Office of handling can probably be fixed at a rate uniform for all parcels weighing between 11 lb. and 28 lb. The rates to be paid to the railway companies cannot be stated at present, but no serious difficulty is anticipated in fixing a suitable charge eventually.

(2) Dominions and Colonies.—The rates would clearly have to be fixed by the Dominions and Colonies themselves. The Imperial triple scale was fixed to accord to each Administration in respect of its territorial service credits of 4d., 8d., and 1s. at the three steps of the scale; but in practice some of the participating Governments required higher land rates and special arrangements, which in present conditions it would not be practicable to make, for any new service had to be made to meet their wishes. Owing, however, to variations in the cost of the sea conveyance of parcel mails to the various destinations within the Empire, the Imperial scale had by the end of 1920 disappeared in all but a few unimportant services. The higher territorial rates recently introduced by Great Britain and a number of the Dominions and Colonies have increased the differences between the postage rates fixed for the various Imperial parcel services; and the varying cost of territorial and sea services within the Empire may be expected to be reflected to an equal degree in the case of parcels weighing over 11 lb.

4. Prepayment of Customs Duty.—An arrangement is in force for the sender of a parcel for the Dominions (except Newfoundland) to undertake the payment of Customs duty charged in the country of destination. Briefly, the arrangement is for the sender to pay at the time of posting a fee of 6d., and a deposit at the rate of fifty per cent. of the declared value of the parcel. The office of destination claims the amount of the duty levied from the British Post Office, which subsequently settles with the sender. The facility is little used; partly, no doubt, because of the large amount of the deposit and the long time which must necessarily elapse before the ultimate settlement; but, mainly, in the Postmaster-General's opinion, because the Customs dues on trade articles naturally fall on the consignee, and it is therefore simpler for him to pay them directly to the Customs authorities who levy them. The existing system could be applied to parcels exceeding 11 lb. in the proposed service.

An alternative arrangement which would admit of pre-payment of Customs dues before despatch (both in the existing and in the proposed service) might be practicable if the Dominions were prepared to provide the necessary officials; they already have Customs investigating officers in this country. In that case the parcels could be examined at the outports for the assessment of duty, and released for despatch abroad when the amount of the duty was received from the senders.

The service could be supplemented by stationing Dominions Customs officers at other towns at which the amount of the traffic would warrant such a step, in order that they might examine the parcels locally and assess and receive the duty on them before the parcels were handed to the Post Office for despatch. (In any case Dominions Customs tariffs could be kept for reference at large offices, if the Dominion Governments would supply them and keep them corrected.)

5. It is understood that in the past considerable opposition to the extension of inter-Imperial parcels post facilities has been met with from oversea traders who feared that this would lead to increased competition from the Home Country. The usual experience, however, is that the provision of better transport facilities leads to a general development of trade; and it is to be borne in mind that the new Heavy Parcels Post would be available equally for the oversea trader to extend his connexions in the Home Country.

RESOLUTION XIII.: CENTRAL EMIGRATION AUTHORITY.

The Imperial War Conference reaffirms the principle laid down by Resolution XXI of the 1917 Conference, in favour of arrangements being made by which intending emigrants from the United Kingdom may be induced to settle in countries under the British Flag. It is of opinion that the representatives of the Oversea Dominions in the United Kingdom should keep in the closest touch with any new Body established by His Majesty's Government to supervise emigration from the United Kingdom. The Conference is of opinion that the appointment of a Consultative Committee, not to exceed ten members, on which representatives of the Oversea Dominions should sit, to advise any such Body, would afford the best means of co-operation.

(See page 69 of this volume.)

Secretariat Note.—Correspondence regarding Oversea Settlement is printed in Dominions No. 60.

RESOLUTION XIV: CABLE COMMUNICATIONS.

That it is in the highest interests of the Empire that the rates for telegraphic communications between the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, South Africa, and India should be further materially reduced as soon as practicable. That in order to ensure generally the cheapest and most secure telegraphic communication between the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand it is desirable that they should co-operate in the provision of a State-owned cable across the Atlantic.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 227.]

(Confidential.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 10th February, 1919.

WITH reference to my predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 31st of December, 1918,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a letter, with its enclosure, addressed by the Secretary of the Post Office to the Postmaster-General of the Union of South Africa, regarding the question of cable communication with South Africa, and the possibility of securing a reduction in cable rates when the existing agreements expire.

I have, &c.,

MILNER.

Enclosure in No. 226.

General Post Office, London, E.C.1.

15th January, 1919.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Postmaster-General to inform you that he duly received, and has read with much interest, your letter of the 20th of May, concerning the question of cable communication with South Africa, and the possibility of securing a reduction in cable rates when the existing agreements in connexion therewith expire on the 31st December, 1919.

2. As you are doubtless aware, the licences for the landing of the Eastern Telegraph Company's cables in the United Kingdom, and also numerous licences for the landing of their cables and those of the Associated Companies in British Dominions Overseas, expire on the 31st December, 1919. The question of the policy to be adopted on the expiration of these licences has recently been under the consideration of a standing Committee on Cable Communications (the Cables (Landing Rights) Committee), who have made certain recommendations on the subject, which are at present under the consideration of His Majesty's Government.

3. The Committee are of opinion that the renewal of the licences affords a suitable opportunity for securing from the Companies a general reduction of their rates; and they also recommend that a clause providing for the control of rates (which already appears in the more recent licences granted to the Companies) should be inserted in all the new licences. A copy of the standard "Control of Rates" clause is enclosed.

* No. 280 in Dominions No. 61.

4. In this connexion it may be mentioned that the Cable Companies generally have made largely increased profits during the War, owing principally to (a) the restriction on the use of code imposed by the censorship authorities, and (b) the large increase in the amount of Government and Press traffic. These increased profits have, however, been largely absorbed in the United Kingdom by the excess profits duty; and in any case the conditions of cable communication are at present so abnormal, and so little likely to afford a criterion of what may be expected after the War, that the Postmaster-General fears that there will be difficulty in pressing the companies for any large immediate reduction in their rates. They would no doubt urge, with some justice, that their current expenditure—including cost of operators, office expenses, maintenance of cable-ships, and cost of cables—has also risen greatly during the War; and that, while their traffic will decrease on the resumption of more normal conditions, their expenditure will not fall proportionately.

5. As regards the cable rates between South Africa and the United Kingdom, the Postmaster-General feels that there is great force in the arguments advanced in your letter for a material reduction. The comparison which you draw between the South African rate of 2s. 6d. and the Australian rate of 3s. would be still more striking if the terminal charges of the South African and Australian Administrations were excluded, the charge being 2s. 5d. to South Africa and only 2d. more—2s. 7d.—to Australia. Further, under the sliding scale arrangement in force in connexion with the Australian service, the rate to Australia is already due for reduction from 3s. to 2s. 6d. a word; though the application of the reduced rate has been postponed by the Australian Government until the cables are less pressed with traffic. When the reduced rate of 2s. 6d. is in operation to Australia it will, the Postmaster-General thinks, be almost impossible for the Companies to maintain the same rate to South Africa. Indeed, he has reason to think that they are already contemplating a reduction to 2s. Their main objection to such a reduction is, he believes, that it would probably be used as an argument for a reduction of the rates between the United Kingdom and the West African Colonies, in much the same way that the comparatively low Australasian rates are used in your letter as an argument for the reduction of the South African rate. The traffic with the West African Colonies is, however, so small that an argument based on mileage alone would be extremely fallacious.

6. Similarly, no doubt, the Company would maintain that a comparison between the Australasian and South African rates, or between the latter rates and those to India, cannot properly be made on a mileage basis alone. The traffic between the United Kingdom, Australasia, and India has of late years grown much more rapidly than that between the United Kingdom and South Africa, and has shown itself more responsive to reductions of rates; and these are no doubt circumstances which would have to be taken into account.

7. In all the circumstances, if the Company do not spontaneously propose a reduction of the South African rate in connexion with the reduction of the Australian rate, the Postmaster-General thinks they should be pressed to do so. Whether they can at present fairly be expected to reduce the rate to less than 2s. is, he thinks, doubtful; but he would, however, propose to pursue the question of a further reduction in connexion with the negotiations for the new licences. If such a reduction cannot be obtained at present the proper alternative will, he thinks, be to rely for further reductions on the Control of Rates clause. For instance, if the traffic proved responsive to the first reduction, so that the revenue at the reduced rate of 2s. equalled or approached the standard revenue under the existing agreement, this fact would undoubtedly be taken into account by the Railway Commission if the matter were referred to them; and the Company, realizing this, would probably be prepared to make a further reduction voluntarily.

8. An effort would also be made in negotiating the new licences to secure a reduction of the rate between South Africa and Australia, as well as any other rates from South Africa which may be unduly high.

9. The Postmaster-General would be glad to know as soon as possible whether these proposals generally commend themselves to you, or, if not, what particular reduction or other modification you would suggest.

I am, &c.,

G. E. P. MURRAY.

The Postmaster-General, Pretoria.

CONTROL OF RATES CLAUSE.

1. The Company will from time to time furnish to the Postmaster-General, at his request, all such information as to their rates of charge for telegrams, the extent and condition of their business, and their income and expenditure and their financial position as the Postmaster-General may from time to time require.

2. The Postmaster-General may at any time, by notice in writing delivered to the Company, object to the rates of charge of the Company, or any of them, on the ground that they are not just and reasonable in the interests of the public whether in the United Kingdom or abroad.

3. If when any such objection has been made the Postmaster-General and the Company are unable to agree as to the rates of charge which are the subject of the objection, the difference shall stand referred to the Railway and Canal Commission, which shall have power to fix such rates of charge as they may think fit, but the Commission shall fix the rates only after giving due and full consideration to the cost of maintenance, operation, and renewals of the cables, together with the capitalization and financial obligations of the Company.

4. The Company may at any time after an interval of twelve calendar months from the determination of such difference by the Railway and Canal Commission, by notice in writing delivered to the Postmaster-General, object to the rates of charge so fixed, or any of them, on the ground that they are unremunerative to the Company, and that a higher rate or rates would be just and reasonable (due regard being had to the interests of the public).

5. If when any such objection as last aforesaid has been made the Postmaster-General and the Company are unable to agree as aforesaid, the difference shall stand referred to the Railway and Canal Commission with the like consequences as aforesaid.

6. The provisions of the Telegraph (Arbitration) Act, 1909, shall apply to the determination of any such difference as is referred to in this clause.

TELEGRAM.

4TH MARCH, 1919. Please represent to Secretary, General Post Office, that Government has given careful consideration to most valuable information contained in his confidential letter, 15th January.* In all circumstances Government regard reduction in tariff as urgently necessary, and that good case exists such reduction being introduced immediately, altogether apart from negotiations in connexion with renewal of existing agreement. Rates between South Africa and Europe should be reduced to 2s. per word, and between South Africa and Australia reduced by 6d. per word, with consequential modification of rates to these countries and places intermediate on main cable route; further, that Government cable and deferred cables should be accepted, as at present, at one-half ordinary rates, and that pro rata reduction be granted in press rates. Union proposal new agreement will be communicated later by post.

SIR, Downing Street, 30th October, 1919.

WITH reference to my predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 31st December, 1918,‡ regarding telegraphic rates for messages between the United Kingdom and other parts of the Empire and the provision of a State-owned Atlantic cable, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Postmaster-General has called attention to the termination last year of the arrangements for the working of the Newfoundland Government cable between Port-aux-Basques and Canso. For convenience of reference a copy is enclosed of a letter from the Newfoundland Department of Militia to the Chief Censor, War Office, regarding the circumstances in which this line was closed.

2. The Postmaster-General has suggested in this connexion that, if the Government of Newfoundland contemplate reopening the cable, they might consider the possible advantage of connecting it with the Imperial cable at Halifax either by a land-line or by an extension of the cable from Canso. It might be possible to arrange for the Halifax end of the cable or land-line to be worked in the same building as the Imperial cable, and the Pacific Cable Board, who undertake the working of the Halifax station on behalf of the Postmaster-General, might be able to make economical provision for the working of the Halifax end of such a line or cable.

* No. 231.

† No. 229.

‡ No. 291 in Dominions No. 61.

3. If the cable were to be extended as suggested, traffic between Newfoundland and Europe could be exchanged conveniently at Halifax with the Imperial cable; and possibly also arrangements could be made with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for the exchange of traffic to and from Newfoundland with their system.

4. About one hundred and forty nautical miles of new cable would be required for the extension from Canso to Halifax, and it is estimated that the cost of providing and laying this section of cable would be from £50,000 to £55,000. A land-line would, of course, cost considerably less, but possibly would not be so satisfactory and reliable an arrangement.

5. The Postmaster-General adds that he has no information as to the amount of traffic which would probably be available for the suggested cable, and it is possible that the traffic likely to be secured would be too small to justify the expenditure involved. I should, however, be glad to learn the views of your Government upon this suggestion. In the event of their being disposed to consider it, consultation with the Canadian Government would, of course, be necessary.

I have, &c.,
MILNER.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 23rd August, inquiring as to the cause of the suspension of the cable service of the Commercial Cable Company with the Newfoundland Government, since the 31st July last. In reply, I beg to forward you herewith a copy of a communication received from the Deputy Colonial Secretary in answer to my application for such authoritative information.

I have, &c.,

Censor.

Colonel Arthur Browne, G.S.,
Chief Censor,
War Office, London.

SIR,

27th September, 1918.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 26th instant, covering communication from Colonel Browne, Chief Censor for the War Office, London, in relation to the termination of the connexion of the postal telegraphs in this Dominion with the Commercial Cable Company's system.

In 1906 the Government of Newfoundland made an agreement with the Commercial Cable Company, whereby certain privileges were accorded to the Company, who gave to the Government certain facilities. Some of these privileges had reference to the landing of cables and the taxing of the same. When the Government endeavoured to collect the taxes on cables from other companies doing business here they refused payment on the ground that they should receive similar treatment to other telegraph companies, meaning the Commercial Cable Company, and the Government have been unable to collect any of these taxes. In order to end the matter, and to take away all grounds in such contention, the Government, under the provisions of the agreement, gave six months' notice to the Commercial Cable Company of the termination of the said agreement, which six months' notice took effect on the 1st of August last, when connexion between Port-aux-Basques and Canso by the Government cable was broken and all connexion severed with the Commercial Cable Company's system. Actions have been instituted through the Courts for the recovery of taxes due in respect of cables landed on this island.

In the meantime all business with the outside world is conducted by the Anglo-American Telegraph Company's lines, with whom the Government have made temporary arrangements.

I return herewith the original communication addressed to you by the Chief Censor, London, under date 23rd August.

I have, &c.,
ARTHUR MEWS,
Deputy Colonial Secretary.

Minister of Militia.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of a Confidential memorandum on proposals for the duplication of the Pacific Cable, which has been submitted by the Pacific Cable Board.

His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive an expression of your Ministers' opinions on the proposals made in this memorandum.

Enclosure in No. 235.

(Confidential.)

THE PACIFIC CABLE BOARD.

Memorandum on Proposals for the Duplication of the Pacific Cable.

DURING the War it was necessary to postpone all questions of duplicating or extending the Pacific Cable; but the time has now come for considering what policy should be pursued. The matter is one of serious interest to all the Governments which are partners in the Pacific Cable. Apart from its bearing on the problems of telegraphic communication, within and without the British Empire, it has an important financial aspect; and in this connexion it may be recalled that the reserve fund of the Pacific Cable Board cannot be used for cable extensions except with the assent of all the contributing Governments (Pacific Cable Act, 1911, 2 (1)).

* No. 233.

The Pacific Cable Board, after consulting their expert advisers, have carefully examined the whole problem, and have arrived at certain preliminary conclusions as to the schemes which should be adopted. Before going further, they think it advisable to lay those conclusions before the contributing Governments, and to ask for an expression of their views.

2. The Pacific Cable has for some years been worked up to its full capacity, but has, nevertheless, been greatly congested. This was due primarily to increased traffic arising from the War; it has continued up to the present time owing to the fact that the Eastern System has been overloaded (in consequence of the interruption of the Indo-European and Great Northern routes to the East), with the result that the Pacific System has received a large amount of traffic which would normally be carried by the Eastern System. It appears certain that the total traffic, and also the Pacific Cable's share, will remain at a higher level than before the War, but if increased facilities become available for communication with the East, the Pacific Cable's traffic will probably fall, for a time at any rate, to an amount that can be handled efficiently on a single cable, and it is impossible to say, with any confidence, how long it will be before the normal growth of traffic will exceed that amount.

3. But traffic capacity is not the only consideration to be taken into account. There is also the question of security against interruption. The Pacific Cable is now nearly twenty years old. It has been singularly fortunate in its freedom from injury, especially on the long stretches. Such faults as have occurred have been mainly in shallow water, near Norfolk Island, and other landing places, and have been easily and rapidly repaired. But it is impossible to count on permanent freedom from trouble; and it is worth while incurring considerable cost as an insurance against complete interruption. The duplication which will answer this purpose will at the same time provide spare capacity for possible expansion of traffic in the future, and will give greatly increased flexibility in the practical working of the cable. Duplication therefore is, in the opinion of the Board, desirable (1) as an insurance against interruptions, (2) for increasing the capacity of the system to meet future expansion of traffic.

4. For considering the methods of duplication, the route across the Pacific may conveniently be divided into two sections:—

- (a) Between Australasia and Fanning.
- (b) Between Fanning and North America.

5. (a) Between Australasia and Fanning.—At present there is a single cable from Fanning to Suva, and from Suva to Norfolk Island. Thence there is a cable to Australia (Southport) and New Zealand (Auckland). These two branches, with the Australia-New Zealand cable, form a triangle, which gives an alternative route for use in case of interruption of any one of the three sides of the triangle.

In duplicating this part of the route, it is desirable to avoid Norfolk Island, since it has been found that the conditions there cause rapid deterioration. It may also be desirable (for administrative and commercial reasons) to make a connexion with Apia (Samoa), which comes under the control of the New Zealand Government.

The best course, therefore, in the opinion of the Board, is to lay cables from Auckland to Suva, from Suva to Samoa, and from Samoa to Fanning. This route would avoid Norfolk Island, and would give connexion with Samoa. When through traffic was being handled, it could be worked direct from Fanning to Suva, through a repeater at Samoa, thus avoiding the necessity of an additional retransmission.

The cost of these connexions is estimated at £940,000. If the connexion were made direct from Suva to Fanning, the cost would be greater; for, though the distance would be less, a more expensive type of cable would be necessary.

6. (b) Between Fanning and North America.—The stretch of cable from Fanning to Bamfield is the longest in the world (3,458 nautical miles). It is consequently slower in working than any other part of the system, and forms the "neck of the bottle." With the exception of the shore-ends it lies in very deep water, and it is therefore very little exposed to interruption; but, on the other hand, if an interruption did occur a long time might be required for its repair.

The provision of a second channel of communication is therefore a matter of importance; but the cost (estimated at £1,400,000) is so high as to be almost prohibitive. Moreover, a cable laid along the same route as the existing cable, from Fanning to Bamfield, would be exposed to the same risks (such as submarine earthquakes, or hostile action in the event of war). The Board are therefore reluctant to recommend it, if any more advantageous alternative can be found.

7. It has been suggested that the second cable might be landed on the Canadian coast at a point north-west of Vancouver Island—for instance at Prince Rupert, the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This, however, may be dismissed as impracticable. The length of the cable would be considerably greater. This would add to the cost, not only by the increase of length, but also by the increased weight of conductor required. It would also seriously diminish the speed of working and add to its difficulty. Moreover, the land connexions in Canada would be defective. It will be many years before the line to Prince Rupert reaches the standard of stability at present attained by the line to Bamfield.

8. There remains the alternative of a cable between Fanning and Honolulu. As Honolulu is already connected with San Francisco by a cable of the Commercial Pacific Cable Company, this connexion would provide a second channel between Fanning and the continent of North America, at very moderate expense (the estimated cost is £259,000), and by cables following entirely different routes from the present.

This scheme could not be undertaken without the concurrence of the United States Government and the Commercial Pacific Cable Company. The precise form it would take, would depend on the result of negotiations for obtaining such concurrence. The Fanning end of the cable would naturally be worked and owned by the Board, and it would probably be convenient that the Honolulu end should be worked and owned by the Commercial Pacific Cable Company. Arrangements as to maintenance would present no serious difficulty.

In order that this connexion might serve its purpose, it would be necessary that the Honolulu-San Francisco cable should be duplicated, since the existing cable is already congested. This duplication has already, it is understood, been under consideration, but has been postponed for the present. It appears probable that the prospect of handling the United States-Australasia traffic might determine the Company to lay a second cable.

9. The most obvious objection to this scheme is that Honolulu is not British territory, and that the Honolulu-San Francisco cable, an important link in the alternative route, is not British. It is true that the primary object of the Pacific Cable was to provide an all-British route between Great Britain, Canada, and Australasia; but, in fact, a large part of the traffic carried across the Pacific originates, or has its destination, in the United States. In 1918-19 such traffic was not less than one-third of the whole. It is the addition of this traffic which causes congestion in the Bamfield-Fanning link, and impedes the transmission of the British traffic. It would be a clear advantage if the United States traffic could be handled by a United States cable as far as Honolulu, and entered the Pacific Cable System by the proposed Honolulu-Fanning cable. The all-British route via Bamfield would thus be relieved, and enabled to fulfil its primary purpose with greater efficiency.

In the event of interruption of the Bamfield-Fanning Section, the Pacific Cable System would, it may be objected, depend upon a non-British alternative route. This, however, is already the position when the Canadian landlines are interrupted, and no serious inconvenience has resulted. So far as concerns interruption by hostile action in time of war, it may be taken as almost certain that any state of belligerency which would deprive us of the use of the route via Honolulu, would also involve the severing of the Bamfield-Fanning route, and that in any such contingency communication with Australasia would have to be maintained by the Eastern Route, or by Wireless. In any case, a second Fanning-Bamfield cable could not be expected to remain intact, if the existing cable were cut.

10. The Board recommend to the contributing Governments that negotiations for the Fanning-Honolulu cable should be undertaken; but they recognize that considerations of Imperial policy are involved, which extend beyond the sphere of their competence, and which will require the careful consideration of the Governments.

11. Southport-Sydney Cable.—Besides the above schemes for duplicating the main cable, the Board recommend the laying of a cable to connect Southport with Sydney.

Normally, the Norfolk-Southport cable carries the Queensland traffic only, the New South Wales and Victoria traffic being routed via Auckland and Sydney. If it is necessary, owing to an interruption or any other cause to send Sydney or Melbourne traffic via Southport, it is carried between Sydney and Southport over the landlines, which are subject to frequent interruption.

If a cable were laid between Southport and Sydney, it would be possible to employ direct working between Sydney and Suva, through repeaters at Southport and Norfolk, and this route would be made the normal route for Australian traffic, leaving the whole capacity of the Sydney-Auckland cable free for intercolonial traffic.

The cost of a cable from Sydney to Southport is estimated at £127,000.

Even if a more stable landline could be provided between Sydney and Southport it would not be so satisfactory as a cable, since it would not be practicable to work direct from Sydney to Suva through a repeater. In order to use that route it would be necessary to retransmit the traffic at Southport, and to maintain there the considerable staff necessary for that purpose.

12. Finance.—The estimated cost of the whole scheme suggested in the preceding paragraphs is £1,326,000. This figure must be taken with all reserve, as the cost of materials and labour constantly fluctuates, and it must be remembered also that these figures represent the cost of cable only, and do not include the cost of freight to the Pacific, and laying. If allowance be made for these charges and a margin added for contingencies, the total cost will hardly be less than £1,500,000, and may be more.

The sums contributed to the Reserve Fund at present amount to £833,000—or, if allowance be made for depreciation of securities, about £780,000. From the revenue of the year 1919-20 it will be possible to add about £350,000, making a total of £1,130,000, together with stock cable valued at £70,000. There are, therefore, funds available sufficient for completing as much of the scheme as it would be practicable to carry out in the next two years.

For the Pacific Cable Board,

H. BABINGTON SMITH,
Chairman.

Enclosure in No. 238.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 21ST JANUARY, 1921.

(P.C. 110.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 12th November, 1920, from the Postmaster-General, submitting herewith papers on the proposal of the Pacific Cable Board for the duplication of the Pacific Cable.

The Minister desires to point out that the Pacific Cable, reaching from Bamfield, Canada, to Sydney, Australia, touching at Auckland, New Zealand, is an Imperial enterprise controlled and operated by the Pacific Cable Board, on which there are representatives of each of the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, the representatives for Canada being the Canadian High Commissioner and Mr. Alexander Lang, C.M.G.

The Minister observes that it is proposed to duplicate the cable from Auckland to Fanning Island, touching at Fiji (Suva) and Samoa (Apia) at a cost of £940,000 ($4,700,000), and from Fanning Island to Honolulu to connect up with the Commercial Cable Company's line to San Francisco, at a cost of £259,000 ($1,295,000), and also to connect Sydney and Southport, Australia, the present termini of the Pacific Cable, by an additional line, costing about £127,000 ($635,000) or a total cost of £1,326,000 ($6,630,000), or, with a margin for contingencies, of £1,500,000 ($7,500,000) for the whole scheme.

There is in the Reserve Fund at present £1,130,000 ($5,650,000) together with stock cable valued at £70,000 ($350,000) which may be used to defray the cost of the new cable, leaving £1,500,000 to be made up from surpluses or by the various Governments interested.

The Minister states that funds are available sufficient for completing as much of the scheme as it would be practicable to carry out in the next two years, so that it is a question of Canada giving her consent to the proposed use of these funds, and the Minister, therefore, recommends that the proposal of the Pacific Cable Board with regard to duplication be accepted.

The Committee concur in the foregoing recommendation and submit the same for approval.

Clerk of the Privy Council.

RESOLUTION XV:—CHANNELS OF COMMUNICATION.

(1) That this Conference is of the opinion that the development which has taken place in the relations between the United Kingdom and the Dominions necessitates such a change in administrative arrangements and in the Channels of Communication between their Governments as will bring them more directly in touch with each other.

(2) That the Imperial War Cabinet be invited to give immediate consideration to the creation of suitable machinery for this purpose.

SIR,

Downing Street, 10th January, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's private and personal despatches, dated the 23rd and 28th of October,* respectively, on the subject of the new system of direct communication between the Prime Ministers of the Self-governing Dominions and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

2. I may explain that the telegram referred to at the beginning of your despatch of the 23rd October was one sent in identical terms to all the Dominions. Telegrams from the Prime Minister of this country to your Prime Minister had been sent on other occasions previously, as, for example, on the 31st March and the 11th April. The telegram under reference should not, therefore, I think, be considered as specially intended to inaugurate the new system of communication, but may be regarded as part of the now well-established system of keeping the Dominion Government fully informed in regard to the progress of events.

3. I agree with you in considering it as important that both the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Governor-General should be kept informed as to any messages that may be exchanged direct between the Prime Ministers. You will remember that paragraph I. (3)† of the resolution of the Imperial War Cabinet of 30th July, 1918, contemplates the use of the Colonial Office machinery, unless in exceptional circumstances, for such communications.

4. I fully appreciate the force of the considerations advanced in your despatch of the 28th October, with regard to the effect of the new procedure upon the position of the Governors-General. I am doubtful, however, as to the expediency of taking up this question in present circumstances, and my own opinion is that the best course is to wait until experience has shown how the system approved by the Imperial War Cabinet works in practice.

5. I may add that up to the present no action has, so far as I am aware, been taken under the Cabinet resolution leading to any serious inconvenience.

I have, &c.,

WALTER H. LONG.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Secret "P.")

MY LORD,

Melbourne, 16th June, 1919.

I AM under the impression that considerable modifications are contemplated, or have been effected, in the procedure controlling the commercial and other relations between the Commonwealth and foreign countries. I should be grateful for definite information on this subject as occasions have already occurred when my ignorance as to the Government's policy in this matter caused me some embarrassment as, for example, when drafting a letter to the British Ambassador at Washington introducing Mr. Braddon, Australian Trade Commissioner, of whose exact status and position versus the Ambassador I had no knowledge.

It would seem obvious, at any rate, that the new status of the Dominions as members of the League of Nations, and responsible to it and not to the British Government for the administration of the Island Possessions, does, ipso facto, alter their relations to the Mother Country and to other foreign Powers, and will result in the Dominion Governments conducting their own foreign and commercial policy through channels over which the British Government has no control.

The anomalous position will, therefore, arise that, whereas the British Government is kept pretty closely informed through its Diplomatic and Consular Agents as to what is happening in foreign countries, it will have no such direct source of information of what is going on in the Dominions.

A Governor-General cannot, in view of the nature of his office, play the spy on his own Government and, even if his staff were trained in diplomatic duties, it would not be expedient that they should be employed in ferreting out information or surprising the secrets of statesmen.

It cannot be assumed that the Governor-General will always be kept fully informed of his Government's policy for, naturally, should the latter desire to carry through certain negotiations unknown to the British Government, the proceedings will be carefully kept from one whose duty it is to report to the Colonial Office.

It has indeed come to my knowledge that on one occasion care was taken that the Governor-General should not become aware of certain commercial transactions which it was desired to conceal from the British Government. At this moment active communications are being carried on between the Japanese Consul-General and my Government, the purport of which is unknown to me. American commercial agents are also engaged in active propaganda, and I have no means of ascertaining what aims they are pursuing, or what instructions are being sent from this side to Mr. Braddon in New York, or what schemes he may be pushing.

There are other matters relating to the movements and propaganda of political agents of which it is highly desirable the Home Government should have secret and confidential information. It therefore appears to be necessary to draw Your Lordship's attention to the changed situation consequent on the constitutional alterations effected by the establishment of the League of Nations, and also partially by the change in channels of communication which places Prime Ministers of Dominions in direct touch with the British Prime Minister, in order that you may consider whether it may not be ultimately expedient for the British Government to have some species of Agent on this side appointed to serve the same end as a diplomat in a foreign country. The fact of Australia's proximity to Japan and to America creates a different situation here from that which prevails in South Africa, or even in Canada where the commercial and political relations between that Dominion and America have been gradually developed in peace time and are more or less fixed.

I have, &c.,

R. M. FERGUSON.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Lordship that my Prime Minister desires to be furnished with a cypher for use by him when communicating with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom by cablegram direct, in accordance with the resolutions passed by the Imperial War Cabinet on the 30th July, 1918, and embodied in your confidential despatch dated 18th [15] August, 1919, Dominions No. 442,* relating to channels of communication between the Governments of the United Kingdom and the Dominions.

I have advised the Prime Minister that in addition to the Colonial Office machinery which exists for the conduct of such correspondence, the Governor-General's cyphers are available for his purposes when required, subject to the instruction received by the Governor-General that they must, at all times, remain in the custody of himself or his Staff. The Prime Minister wishes, however, to have a cypher issued to him, and I submit his request accordingly.

DEAR MR. LLOYD GEORGE, Hotel Majestic, Paris, 27th March, 1919.
IN perusing despatches from the British Ambassador at Washington, I have been impressed from time to time with the importance of the information from a Canadian standpoint. Conditions in the United States, and the policy of the United States Government from time to time, are naturally of great moment to Canada by reason of the immediate proximity of the two countries and the constantly increasing commercial, industrial, and social intercourse between them. It has been the practice at the British Embassy to repeat to Ottawa telegrams directly affecting Canadian interests; but I think this practice should be carried farther and that all telegrams touching political, industrial, commercial, and social conditions in the United States should be repeated to Ottawa. A similar course might be followed with respect to telegrams from Downing Street to the Embassy at Washington.

May I hope, therefore, that pending the conclusion of arrangements for direct Canadian representation at Washington instructions may be given along the lines which I have suggested.

Copy of this letter is being sent to Mr. Balfour and to Lord Milner.

Faithfully yours,
R. BORDEN.

David Lloyd George,

Enclosure 2 in No. 246.

(No. 230.)

MY LORD, Foreign Office, S.W.1, 1st May, 1919.
I TRANSMIT to Your Excellency, herewith, copy of a letter from the Colonial Office forwarding one from Sir R. Borden to Mr. Lloyd George, in which he asks that pending the conclusion of arrangement for direct Canadian representation at Washington, all telegrams from His Majesty's Embassy to the Secretary of State touching political, industrial, commercial, and social conditions in the United States as well as similar telegrams from the Secretary of State to the Embassy, should be repeated to Ottawa.

Speaking generally, I consider it desirable to meet the wishes of the Canadian Government and to communicate to them all telegrams of the nature indicated, which there is no special reason to exclude from the arrangement.

Whatever form Canadian representation in Washington may take, it is to be hoped that it will be very closely linked with British representation, and the fuller our confidence now the more likely are we to achieve real co-operation later, so that the interpretation of what is proper to be communicated should be as liberal as possible.

Telegrams from the Embassy which are communicated to Canada should be marked accordingly; telegrams from the Secretary of State will end with the words "repeat to Canada."

The same principle will, of course, apply to despatches.

I am, &c.,
(For the Secretary of State).

ALMERIC FITZROY.

DRAFT CHARTER REFERRED TO IN THE FOREGOING ORDER IN COUNCIL.

GEORGE THE FIFTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting.

Whereas the Right Honourable Alfred Viscount Milner, Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, did, on the 12th day of April, 1919, transmit to the Lord President of Our Council for presentation to Us in Council a humble petition setting forth the importance of the establishment and organization of a bureau for the collection of information with reference to the mineral resources of all parts of Our Empire and for the promotion of the development and utilization of such resources and most humbly praying Us in Our Council to grant Our Royal Charter for incorporating the persons hereinafter designated "President" and "Governors" respectively, with the name and title of "The Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau" with such powers and privileges and in such manner in all respects as to Us in Our Council may seem fit.

And whereas We have taken the said petition into Our Royal consideration and are minded to accede thereto.

Now, therefore, know ye that We, being desirous of promoting the establishment and organization of the said Bureau, have by Our Royal Prerogative and of Our especial grace, certain knowledge and mere motion given and granted and by this Our Charter for Us, Our heirs and successors do hereby give and grant that—

The Lord President of Our Council for the time being;

The person appointed by the Lord President of Our Council for the time being as representative of the United Kingdom;

Such further persons as may from time to time be respectively appointed for that purpose by:—

The Government of the Dominion of Canada:

The Government of the Commonwealth of Australia:

The Government of the Dominion of New Zealand:

The Government of the Union of South Africa:

The Government of Newfoundland:

The Government of India:

The Secretary of State for the Colonies: on behalf of all other parts of Our Empire not hereinbefore mentioned, including territories under Our Protection.

And such further six persons as may from time to time be respectively appointed for that purpose by the Lord President of Our Council for the time being, and after due consultation by him with all important interests concerned, shall be the president and governors respectively of, and be a body corporate by the name of "The Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau," with perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to break, alter, or renew the same at discretion, and with capacity to sue or be sued in their corporate name, and with the further authorities, powers, and privileges, conferred and subject to the conditions imposed by this Our Charter.

And We do hereby accordingly will, ordain, give, grant, constitute, appoint, and declare as follows:—

—PURPOSES OF THE BUREAU.

The purposes of the Bureau are the following:—

- (i) To collect, co-ordinate, and disseminate information as to the resources, production, treatment, consumption, and requirements of every mineral and metal.
- (ii) To ascertain the scope of existing agencies, with a view ultimately to avoid any unnecessary overlapping that may prevail.
- (iii) To devise means whereby existing agencies can, if necessary, be assisted and improved in the accomplishment of their respective tasks.
- (iv) To supplement these agencies, if necessary, in order to obtain any information not now collected which may be required for the purposes of the Bureau.
- (v) To advise on the development of the mineral resources of the Empire or of particular parts thereof, in order that such resources may be made available for the purposes of Imperial defence or industry or commerce.

II.—POWERS OF THE BUREAU.

(i) To acquire by gift, purchase, or otherwise, and hold and dispose of personal or movable property of every kind in the United Kingdom or elsewhere.

(ii) To acquire by gift, purchase, or otherwise, and to hold (without a licence in mortmain or other authority than this Our Charter) lands in the United Kingdom, not exceeding five acres, and to acquire by the like means and to hold (subject to any local law for the time being in force) lands not exceeding five acres in any part of Our Empire with the approval of the Government thereof, and in any Foreign State (which expression in this Our Charter shall not include any State under Our protection) with the approval of the Government thereof.

(iii) To build or take by gift, lease, purchase, or otherwise suitable buildings and to dispose from time to time of any land and buildings when not required.

A Governor may be appointed, employed, and remunerated under this power but upon his appointment to any salaried office other than that of Chairman or Vice-Chairman he shall ipso facto vacate his office as Governor.

(v) With a view to the carrying into effect of any of the purposes aforesaid or the exercise of any of the powers of the Bureau but subject to the approval as to any part of Our Empire of the Government thereof and as to any Foreign State of Our Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to enter into any contract or arrangement whether within the United Kingdom or elsewhere, with any of Our subjects or with the Government or the subjects or citizens of any part of Our Empire or of any Foreign State.

(vi) To enter into such arrangements with any Department of the Government of the United Kingdom or of the Government of any part of Our Empire or of any Foreign State as may be desirable with a view to the exercise of any of the powers of the Bureau.

(vii) To do anything not expressly hereinbefore provided for which may be incidental or conducive to the exercise of any of the powers of the Bureau.

All the above powers shall be vested in the Governors to be exercised by them in accordance with the provisions of this Our Charter, but the power to acquire and hold land in a Foreign State specified in subsection (ii) and the power to enter into arrangements with any departments of the Government of any Foreign State specified in subsection (vi) shall not be exercised by the Governors except with the concurrence of Our Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

(i) The Lord President of the Council for the time being shall be the President of the Bureau, and the Right Honourable the Earl Curzon of Kedleston shall be the first President of the Bureau.

(ii) The President shall have the right to preside and vote at all meetings of the Governors and of Committees of the Governors at which he may be present.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to Mr. Long's despatch, Confidential, Dominions No. 653, of the 15th November, 1918,† a copy of a minute from Ministers, dated 4th March, 1919, on the subject of the petroleum position of the British Empire.

Enclosure in No. 250.

(No. 342.)

Prime Minister's Office,

Cape Town, 4th March, 1919.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Confidential minute, No. 52/244, of the 8th January, 1919, transmitting copy of despatch Dominions No. 653, Confidential, dated 15th November, 1918, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, on the subject of the petroleum position of the British Empire, Ministers have the honour to state that, though oil-bearing shales have been opened up in various districts in the Union, no payable proposition has yet been proved. These occurrences, however, have not been thoroughly tested.

* Printed on pages 343-349 of Dominions No. 69. See also Secretariat Note on page 238 in Dominions No. 61.
† No. 306 in Dominions No. 61.

With a view to stimulating interest in the Union's oil shales, the question of offering a bonus to parties who put up the first plant to treat oil shale is under consideration.

Under the Union laws, mineral oil belongs absolutely to the owner of the land, and, therefore, in respect of the acquisition of oil propositions on private land, any proposal to exercise control would raise questions of considerable difficulty. As regards Crown land, it is considered that, rather than impose any restrictions on prospecting every encouragement should be given to prospectors.

While fully sympathizing with the aims of His Majesty's Government, Ministers feel that the question of control of mineral oil in the Union is one that should be held over for consideration until more definite information is known as to the value and extent of the oil resources of the Union.

The suggestion of His Majesty's Government that it might be useful if particulars were furnished to the Petroleum Executive on questions of general interest, arising in connexion with the production of oil and its conservation in British hands, will be kept in mind.

The offer of advice and assistance, technical or otherwise, in regard to petroleum matters is greatly appreciated and will be taken advantage of should occasion arise.

HIS MAJESTY'S PETROLEUM EXECUTIVE.

PETROLEUM PRODUCTION.

The world's annual production of petroleum since 1913 has been approximately as follows:—

1913	51,274,981 tons.
1914	53,819,032
1915	57,880,362
1916	62,000,912
1917	70,519,464

* No. 306 in Dominions No. 61.

of which the British Empire's proportion is just over 2.5 per cent., as follows:—

Year.	India.	Other sources.	Total.
1913	1,107,821	411,269	1,519,090
1914	1,037,371	526,275	1,563,646
1915	1,148,373	481,348	1,629,721
1916	1,188,759	466,053	1,655,812
1917	1,131,038	643,651	1,774,689

In addition to this latter, however, the gross production from the Anglo-Persian Oil Company's concession in Persia since 1912 has been as follows:—

1912	73,842 tons.
1913	243,621
1914	381,890
1915	474,553
1916	587,502
1917	937,902

The distribution of the Empire's production (elsewhere than in the Self-governing Dominions) has been as follows:—

Great Britain.

The United Kingdom is a very small producer of petroleum, active operations being at present confined to the shale deposits of Scotland, chiefly in Linlithgowshire and Edinburghshire, and to a smaller extent in Lanarkshire. These oil-bearing strata produce about 3,250,000 tons of shale annually, the average yield being nineteen to twenty gallons per ton of shale, or approximately 250,000 tons of crude oil.

The output of oil shale and crude oil therefrom since 1911 has been as follows, expressed in tons:—

	Output of oil shale.	Crude oil produced.
1911	3,206,756	293,660
1912	3,284,956	294,899
1913	3,369,321	289,683
1914	3,388,869	295,464
1915	3,187,592	263,083
1916	3,102,036	247,471
1917	3,200,883	249,598
1918	3,223,076	242,501

Large areas of shale and other oil-bearing strata which may be developed in the future apparently exist in England, in the county of Dorset, and outcrop in Norfolk, the strata seeming to extend between these two points.

Africa.

Except in Egypt, no oilfield of any importance has been discovered. British Somaliland has afforded certain evidences of oil, which are at present being investigated, and in German East Africa finds of bitumen and lignite are reported.

There are also evidences of petroleum on the Gold Coast and in Southern Nigeria, and in the former the D'Arcy Exploration Company, Limited, is carrying out investigations. So far, however, no discovery of any important petroliferous territory has been made.

Egypt.—The oilfields in this country are at Jemsa and Hurghada, both situated on the Gulf of Suez. The latter field, which seems to be of remarkably regular formation, was discovered as recently as 1914, until which date the only finds of importance had been at Jemsa. The production of this field is now, however, practically negligible, whilst that of the Hurghada field has steadily increased until it now stands at over 15,000 tons of crude oil per month.

There are also indications of petroleum in the area adjacent to Jemsa, in territory on the east side of the Gulf of Suez and sixty miles south of Suez, on the Sinai Peninsula, and in the island of Jubal.

Production since 1912 has been approximately as follows:—

1912	27,962 tons.
1913	12,618 "
1914	103,605 "
1915	34,961 "
1916	54,800 "
1917	134,700 "
1918	263,550 "

India.

The total production in India increased from 665,041 tons in 1908 to approximately 1,133,333 tons in 1917, the principal producing areas being in Burma and Assam, whilst small quantities have also been obtained in the Punjab.

Burma.—The three chief fields are Yenangyaung, Singu, and Minbu. The Yenangyaung district, from which most of the production has hitherto been obtained, lies three hundred to three hundred and fifty miles north of Rangoon on the Irrawaddy River. Its upper oilsands are becoming exhausted, but deeper drilling has resulted in an increased production. There are several other districts which show good indications of the presence of oil, and the delay in prospecting is apparently chiefly due to transport difficulties.

The following table shows the production, in tons, from the areas mentioned for the years 1911-1917:—

Year.	Burma.	Assam.	Punjab	Total.
1911	888,902	14,261	6	903,169
1912	981,341	14,990	4	996,335
1913	1,089,062	18,754	5	1,107,821
1914	1,018,612	18,754	5	1,037,371
1915	1,129,168	18,200	1,005	1,148,373
1916	1,167,076	20,948	735	1,188,759
1917	1,091,181	37,379	2,478	1,131,038

Malay Archipelago.

British Borneo.—The D'Arcy Exploration Company have been granted extensive concessions on the Klias Peninsula and Mangalum Island, and the Kuhara Mining Company of Japan hold a concession over the greater part of British North Borneo. In 1915 exploitation was carried on by Americans.

Sarawak.—The principal field is the Miri district, which has been considerably developed since 1915. A deep-sea pipe-line is well under way, and a refinery at Lutong, adjacent to the field, is almost completed.

Production has been as follows:—

1914	45,039 tons.
1915	55,460 "
1916	90,570 "
1917 (estimated)	80,000 "
1918	71,500 "

Brunei.—A prospecting licence is held by the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company, Limited. Drilling has been carried out to a depth of about 2,370 feet, but continuous trouble has been experienced with water. There was a show of gas, but no oil, at 1,912 feet.

West Indies.

Of the West Indian Islands, Trinidad alone has given evidence of the existence of a payable oilfield, but indications of oil occur in Barbados.

Trinidad.—In 1915 ten companies were engaged in working petroleum, increasing in 1917 to fourteen. There are indications of petroleum on a large scale at many points in the southern half of the island, and the production from 1911-1918 was as follows:—

1911	17,516 tons.
1912	39,943 "
1913	70,506 "
1914	90,092 "
1915	147,015 "
1916	129,903 "
1917	223,920 "
1918	291,489 "

Barbados.—Oil indications have been found in the Scotland district, but the geological strata afford evidence that the deposits are small. The yield of oil, whilst at first encouraging, have fallen to an unremunerative level.

South America.

British Guiana.—Very favourable evidences of oil have been met with, particularly in the Waini River district, and a geological expedition is at present making detailed investigations.

CONSUMPTION.

Compared with production, the consumption of petroleum products in the British Empire has been:—

1912	4,212,534 tons.
1913	4,713,319 "
1914	5,467,577 "
1915	5,184,016 "
1916	6,128,726 "
1917	7,485,645 "

made up as follows:—

NEW ZEALAND.

THE DEPUTY GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 26th August, 1919.)

(Confidential (2).)

MY LORD, Government House, Wellington, 23rd June, 1919.
I HAVE the honour to inform Your Lordship that I duly referred to my Ministers your predecessor's Confidential despatch, Dominions No. 653, of the 15th of November,* on the subject of the petroleum position of the British Empire.

2. The Acting Prime Minister advises me that there does not appear to be any question of general interest arising in this Dominion in connexion with the production of oil and its conservation in British hands which requires to be submitted to the Imperial Petroleum Executive. In New Zealand the industry at present is only in the prospecting stage, and oil has not yet been discovered in payable quantities. All the prospecting bores are in British hands, so far as the Government of New Zealand is aware.

I have, &c.,

Deputy of the Governor-General.

MY LORD, Wellington, 5th September, 1919.
I HAVE the honour to inform Your Lordship that I duly referred to my Ministers your Confidential despatch Dominions No. 437, of the 31st of May,† enclosing copies of a statement prepared by His Majesty's Petroleum Executive on the subject of the petroleum production and consumption of the British Empire.

2. I am advised that the production of petroleum in this Dominion during the past three years has been very small indeed. The Government is at present assisting two companies who are boring for oil at New Plymouth, and one of them has succeeded in putting down a bore to over five thousand feet in depth. There are indications that oil is present below this point, and it is hoped that it may be tapped before the limit of practical drilling is reached. A bore is also being put down in Canterbury, and has reached a depth of two thousand five hundred feet; the manager at this place reports favourable indications.

3. There are no recent Government publications on the subject.
4. A statement showing the imports into New Zealand of petroleum and petroleum products for the years 1916, 1917, and 1918 is enclosed.

I have, &c.,

MY LORD,

Government House, St. John's, 20th October, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Confidential despatch Dominions No. 437, of the 31st May,* on the subject of petroleum production and consumption in the British Empire, and to inform you that my Ministers have arranged for the transmission of publications on the subject issued by the Government of Newfoundland direct to His Majesty's Petroleum Executive, 12, Berkeley Square, London, W.1, as requested in your despatch.

2. I think it may be useful if I transmit also to Your Lordship a copy of a report on the Parsons Pond oilfield, which has been furnished to the Minister of Mines for the above purpose.

I have, &c.,

C. ALEXANDER HARRIS.

Enclosure in No. 255.

General Oilfields, Limited, Parsons Pond,

Newfoundland, 29th August, 1919.

SIR,

Re the request of the Colonial Office for information about the Parsons Pond Oilfield, operated by General Oilfields, Limited.

This field (situate at Parsons Pond, within twelve miles of Cow Head, a deep-water harbour on the north-west coast) is being steadily worked by General Oilfields, Limited, of London. The operations include the pumping of three wells and the baling of a fourth. The entire production is refined, the gasoline and kerosene being marketed on the coast and the residual sent to the Gas Light Company at St. John's. The gasoline is used throughout each fishing season by fishermen in motor-boats, and is most valuable and useful immediately after the opening of navigation and before imported oil is procurable. The oil is also used in operations of the property. About three tons of oil go through the still weekly; this quantity represents a single throughput.

There are three new wells in drilling (unfinished). These represent about 3,000 feet of new drilling, and one of the wells has reached the oil source with 300-400 feet of oil standing in the casing. Work on these wells was suspended fourteen months ago owing to a shortage of drilling cable, unobtainable during the War, but it is expected that there will be a resumption of drilling when navigation opens in 1920 and the Manager has returned from a winter visit to London.

General Oilfields, Limited, although owning a valuable and extensive field equipment, have been hampered in their work during the past two years by finding it impossible to import duplicate parts of broken plant, but, the oil-well supply markets having been reorganized, there should be no difficulty in perfecting the equipment next year.

The field is one on which many favourable reports have been made. Oil has been struck on both sides of the pond; the formation is not only known, but absolutely proved, to be oil-bearing; there are oil indications at widely separated points; and in the two important matters of geographical position and a profitable market for production, it has been frequently pointed out that it excels most fields in the British Empire. It is believed to be a field which is capable of being developed into an exporting source. The Government of the Colony has in many ways encouraged its development, but, unlike territories in England, Australia, New Zealand, and other parts of the Empire, it has not had the advantages of Government financial assistance.

Yours, &c.,

J. D. HENRY,

Technical Adviser and General Manager.

Honourable W. J. Walsh,

Minister of Agriculture and Mines.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 18th February, 1921.)

(Confidential.)

MY LORD, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 17th December, 1920.

REFERRING to your predecessor's Confidential despatch dated the 15th November, 1918, Dominions No. 653,* covering a copy of a memorandum by Viscount Harcourt (Chairman of the Petroleum Policy Committee) on the subject of the position of the British Empire in respect of petroleum, which was laid before the Imperial War Conference, 1918, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government fully realizes the extremely unsatisfactory position of the British Empire in regard to petroleum supplies, and the necessity for development of the oil fields in British territories and elimination of foreign influence from control of such fields.

My Prime Minister states that as the suggestions in Viscount Harcourt's memorandum were largely matters for consideration by the several Australian State Governments the latter have been consulted, with the result that the following information has been obtained:—

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Letter dated 14th November, 1919.

Encouragement to prospectors.—On 29th December, 1915, a reward of £1,000 was offered to the person or company who shall produce 500,000 gallons of natural mineral oil within the State. Further encouragement to prospectors in the way of advances to carry out prospecting operations could be given, if considered desirable, by an extension of the regulations relating to the distribution of the Prospecting Vote.

(By Notice published in the New South Wales Government Gazette of the 8th October, 1920, the reward was increased to £10,000, which will be paid to the person or company who shall first produce 100,000 gallons of petroleum (natural mineral oil) within the State.)

Exclusion of foreigners: Grant of prospecting licences to persons or companies of British origin.—No general limitation at present exists under local legislation with regard to the granting of prospecting licences to foreigners. The Commonwealth War Precautions (Mining) Regulations provide, however, that no mining lease for a term exceeding five years may be granted to any person other than a natural-born British subject, except with the consent of the Commonwealth Attorney-General. A further extension of this principle could be applied to oil leases by local legislation, and, if necessary, in the meantime, pending passage of such legislation, a declaration of Government policy would be probably sufficient to prevent the issue of oil leases to any person other than a natural-born British subject, as the granting or refusal of any such lease is within the discretion of the Governor with the advice of the Executive Council. This principle could, of course, be extended also to the issue of prospecting licences in relation to mineral oils.

The question of introducing legislation where necessary to deal with this matter on the lines indicated will be taken into consideration.

Government control of issue of licences.—Under the provisions of the Mining Act, 1906, the Government has at present the absolute control of the issue of licences or leases to mine or prospect for mineral oils upon Crown land and upon private lands the minerals in which are reserved to the Crown. Legislation would be necessary to give the Crown exclusive rights in respect of mineral oils in land alienated without any reservation of minerals to the Crown.

Government to have majority holdings in oil companies.—This suggestion does not appear to be one which could be adopted with advantage.

It would perhaps be better to extend the principle embodied in Section 108A of the Mining Act, 1906, as amended, which provides that every lease or authority to mine for shale granted under that Act or any Act thereby repealed shall be subject to a special condition giving the Minister the right of pre-emption for the use of His Majesty's Australian Navy of all shale or the products thereof won from the land so held, at a price to be agreed upon or, in case of dispute, to be fixed by arbitration. This matter will be considered.

* No. 306 in Dominions 61.

Granting of leases of large areas to mine for oil.—Consideration is at present being given to the advisableness of introducing legislation to provide for this, subject to suitable labour conditions and rentals.

Letter dated 1st September, 1920.

... a Bill is being prepared for the amendment of the Mining Act to make provision in relation to petroleum mineral oils and natural gas as follows:—

1. Power to grant leases embracing large areas, with special conditions with regard to rent and labour, and that the land so leased shall be open to mining for other minerals so far as the same can be done without interfering with the mineral oil or gas operations.
2. Exclusion of foreigners and the granting of prospecting licences for petroleum or mineral oils to persons or companies of British origin only.
3. The existing right of pre-emption of all oil for the use of His Majesty's Australian Navy (at present restricted to Crown land) to be extended to private lands.

VICTORIA.

Letter dated 18th June, 1920.

It is believed that the amendment of the Mines Act which the Government of Victoria contemplates effecting during the next session of Parliament, by which all mineral lands in Victoria are to be made available for mining, will meet all requirements so far as that State is concerned.

The Premier on 27th September, 1920, intimated that a Bill to amend the Mines Act was not submitted to Parliament during the session just closed.

QUEENSLAND.

Letter dated 30th April, 1920.

The Petroleum Act, 1915, as amended by the Mining Acts Amendment Act, 1920, provides, inter alia, as follows:—

"Petroleum on or below the surface of all land in Queensland, whether alienated in fee-simple, or not so alienated from the Crown, and if so alienated whensoever alienated, is and always has been the property of the Crown.

Nothing in this Act shall prevent the Governor in Council from granting a just reward to the discoverer of a new oil-field or area situated not less than one hundred miles distant from an existing oil-well.

All Crown grants and leases under any Act relating to Crown land issued after the passing of this Act (22nd December, 1915) shall contain a reservation of all petroleum on or below the surface of the land comprised therein, and also a reservation of the right of access for the purpose of searching for and for the operations of obtaining petroleum in any part of the land.

The Minister is hereby empowered, by his officers, agents, and workmen, to carry on the business of searching for petroleum and of conducting all operations deemed necessary for obtaining, refining, and disposing of petroleum in or upon land in Queensland.

The Governor in Council may . . . resume on behalf of the Crown any land which in his opinion ought to be resumed for the purpose of this Act.

Any person who desires to prospect Crown land for petroleum may make application in the prescribed form to the nearest warden for a licence to occupy any Crown land described in the application and not being of greater area than two thousand acres, for the purpose of searching therein for petroleum . . . The Minister may either refuse the application, or require it to be amended, or may accept it. . . The Minister may grant to the applicant . . . a licence to occupy the land for a period of five years from the date of the licence, and to bore and search therein for petroleum.

Mineral leases under the principal Act may be granted of land for mining for petroleum. . . If the application of any person is refused, he shall be informed of the reasons for such refusal.

There shall be reserved in every such lease for mining for petroleum a royalty at the rate of twelve pounds ten shillings per centum of the gross value of all petroleum obtained during the term.

There shall be paid by the Minister to the original licensee (but to no other person whomsoever) who as aforesaid has been granted a lease of land comprised in his licence, during such period as he is occupying and working his said lease but no longer, a sum equal to two pounds ten shillings per centum of the gross value of all petroleum obtained during such period from mining therefor on any part of the land that was comprised in his said licence, exclusive of the land comprised in his said lease, whether such petroleum was obtained by the State or by any lessee from the Crown."

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Letter dated 29th January, 1920.

Encouragement to prospectors.—On 23rd August, 1917, a bonus of £5,000 was offered to the person or body corporate which first obtains from a bore or well in this State of South Australia 100,000 gallons of crude petroleum. Applicants must comply with certain specified conditions.

Exclusion of foreigners: Government control of issue of licences.—In accordance with the requirements of the War Precautions (Mining) Regulations, 1916, no prospecting nor mining rights have been issued since the outbreak of war to persons other than natural born British subjects. With regard, however, to the exclusion of foreign influence after the expiry of those Regulations there will be certain difficulties that cannot be overcome readily.

Existing legislation provides the Minister of Mines with discretionary power to refuse applications for search licences and leases; but not in any way to withhold a miner's right, and the claims that may be pegged out by virtue of that right from any person over the age of 16 years who is not precluded by the War Precautions (Mining) Regulations.

There is no means of controlling the rights to search or bore for oil on private lands whereon and whereunder the minerals, including oil, have been alienated from the Crown. The principal attempts to obtain oil in this State have been conducted on private property.

The suggestion that has been made in favour of the retention of controlling holdings in the companies by the Government does not appear to be a feasible one. This proposal would entail a financial outlay which the prospects of obtaining oil do not appear to justify.

It has been suggested that a means of excluding foreign influence might be brought into effect by approaching the problem indirectly by legislation designed to conserve supplies of water in the artesian basins of the State, since in these basins the search for supplies of mineral oil will be conducted.

This State has spent a considerable sum of money in investigating alleged indications of oil, but unfortunately without having obtained any confirmation of them.

Under the circumstances it does not appear necessary to introduce any alterations in existing legislation to ensure British control of possible supplies of petroleum that have yet to be discovered.

The problem brought forward by the Imperial War Conference will not, however, be overlooked, and the suggestions that have been made will receive all possible consideration should the need arise for exercising some form of control, by reason of a future discovery of oil.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Letter dated 12th March, 1920.

Consideration has been given to the views and suggestions expressed in Viscount Harcourt's memorandum, and it is proposed to introduce a Bill for an Act to govern the question of oil mining in the State of Western Australia for submission to the next session of Parliament, the provisions of which it is intended shall be so framed as to amply safeguard the interests of the Empire in the matter.

On the 8th November, 1920, the Premier furnished a copy of the Bill which has been prepared, and this is attached hereto.

TASMANIA.

In a letter dated the 17th August, 1920, the State Premier advised the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth as follows:—

"... In the opinion of Ministers, the position of the Empire, so far as oil supplies are concerned, is very serious. Turning to Australia also, the position is no less serious. Our oil production is at present very small; our requirements are increasing very materially—particularly in regard to oil fuel for the Navy—yet in spite of this, the possibilities of producing oil are not being exploited as they should be. We are consequently dependent on outside sources for our supplies which are to-day controlled by those who are friendly with Great Britain, but who may to-morrow be our enemies.

It is pleasing to my Government to note from the reports of the Conference that yourself and Sir Joseph Cook drew attention to the big undeveloped shale oil deposits in Australia, and I agree that it is a pity that these are not being more fully and systematically developed. May I say here, with all due respect, that in view of the requirements of the Australian Government for naval purposes, there is a wide field of opportunity for the development by the Government of our known deposits.

In this respect I would draw your attention to the deposits of shale at Latrobe, and the very favourable reports made thereon by Dr. Wade, the Commonwealth Oil Expert, and our own Public Works Committee, all of which are available.

"I would say, in conclusion, that the necessity for developing our own oil supplies is so apparent as to need no further comment, and I am satisfied that this can only be done successfully by the Government taking up the proposition here and in other parts of Australia, or by assisting in some concrete way. So far as our deposits here are concerned, my Government would be prepared to favourably consider any scheme whereby we could co-operate with your Government in developing the field, and thus assist in building up oil supplies which are so essential both from an economical and a naval point of view."

As to territories under Commonwealth control, the position is as under:—

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

The Mineral Oil Ordinance, 1913, provides for the granting of licences to search for mineral oil and of mineral oil leases, subject to such terms and conditions as are prescribed.

The ordinance lays down, inter alia:—

- (a) No licence nor mineral oil lease shall be granted to any company other than a company formed and incorporated under the law of the United Kingdom or a British Possession.
- (b) A foreign company shall not directly or indirectly be capable of acquiring or holding a mineral oil lease or any interest therein whether legal or equitable. (For the purposes of this section every company or body of persons formed under the law of any country not being a part of the British Dominions is deemed to be a foreign company.)
- (c) The Governor-General shall have the right of pre-emption of all oil produced by the lessee from any land held under mineral oil lease, and of all products of such oil.
- (d) In the event of war or danger of war, of the existence of which the Governor-General shall be the sole judge, the Governor-General may authorise some officer to assume control of the land included in any mineral oil lease and of any mineral oil refinery.

PAPUA.

As Your Lordship is aware, the Imperial and Commonwealth Governments are co-operating in the endeavour to locate payable quantities of oil in Papua. Each Government, having agreed to contribute equal sums not exceeding £50,000 towards the cost of the enterprise, entered into an agreement on 7th July, 1919, with the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, Limited, in which the Imperial Government holds a controlling interest, whereby the Company as from April, 1920, is conducting the investigations as the Government's agent.

Pursuant to this agreement several of the Company's geologists are now examining a wide stretch of country in Papua with a view to the selection of suitable sites for boring.

Private enterprise is excluded from all parts of this field.

(LATE) GERMAN NEW GUINEA.

The suggestions embodied in Viscount Harcourt's memorandum are being considered in connexion with proposals relating to the future Government of this Territory.

The Commonwealth Government has been giving, and still gives, assistance to the shale oil industry. The Commonwealth Shale Oil Bounties Act, 1917, provides for bounty as follows for a period of four years from 1st September, 1917, on crude shale oil, as prescribed, produced in Australia from mined kerosene shale:—

On each gallon up to 3,500,000 gallons	... 2½d. per gallon
On each gallon exceeding 3,500,000 and not exceeding 5,000,000 gallons	... 2d. per gallon
On each gallon exceeding 5,000,000 and not exceeding 8,000,000 gallons	... 1½d. per gallon
On each additional gallon	... 1½d. per gallon

These are the rates of bounty payable in each year to each producer on goods produced by him at each separate deposit as prescribed.

£67,500 was fixed as the maximum sum payable as shale oil bounty in any one year. The total amount paid up to the 30th September, 1920, is £65,086, the whole being received by Messrs. John Fell & Company, of Newnes, in the State of New South Wales.

To stimulate prospecting for well oil the Commonwealth Government, on 2nd January, 1920, offered a reward of £10,000 for the discovery of petroleum in commercial quantities in Australia subject to certain specified conditions. By notification dated the 9th September, 1920, this reward has been increased to £50,000.

Pursuant to an Agreement dated the 14th May, 1920, between the Commonwealth Government and the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, Limited, approved by the Oil Agreement Act, 1920, a company styled "Commonwealth Oil Refineries, Limited," with a capital of £500,000 in £1 shares, has been formed and registered in Melbourne. The Commonwealth Government holds 250,001 and the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, Limited, 249,996 shares. The main object of Commonwealth Oil Refineries, Limited, is the erection and operation of a modern refinery in Australia for treating indigenous oil when available. In the meantime up to 200,000 tons per annum of crude mineral oil is to be supplied by the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, Limited.

[MY LORD DUKE.] [MY LORD.] [SIR.]

Downing Street, 20th April, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Royal Highness.] [Your Excellency.] [von.] for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a despatch* from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington relative to the conditions and prospects of the Petroleum Industry in the United States.

* Not printed.

2. The document enclosed in this despatch was of an extremely voluminous and detailed character, and contained a large quantity of printed matter, extracts and cuttings from technical journals, etc. It was, therefore, thought best to have the Report carefully examined and summarized: copies of the summary are enclosed.*

3. It is thought that the following observations, which have been supplied by the Petroleum Department in connexion with the Report, may be of interest to your Ministers:—

"The petroleum industry in the United States has now developed to such tremendous proportions, and is of such a highly specialized character, that it is impossible to deal with it adequately in the course of a brief memorandum. The report was rendered in reply to a general questionnaire prepared by the Petroleum Department, and it was naturally impossible for some of the detailed information asked for to be supplied in the case of America in the same way as could be readily done for countries where the petroleum industry was far smaller and less developed.

"The United States produces about seventy per cent. of the petroleum output of the entire world, and controls an even larger proportion of existing refinery facilities. It is, therefore, in a position to dictate the prices of petroleum products which have become so essential to all civilized countries. The most outstanding and disquieting feature of the report under consideration is the fact that the consumption of the United States is now in excess of the production, in spite of every effort to secure additional production, efforts which have been rewarded by largely augmented and increasing supplies. One of the remedies which have been suggested is an embargo on exports, and unless American production and imports from abroad can keep well ahead of the growing demand it may be expected that the call for an embargo on exports will become more insistent. It has also been hinted that American views on international oil questions may in the last resort be enforced by a similar stoppage of supplies.

"Should such an embargo be placed on exports to the United Kingdom, the effect would be little short of disastrous, more particularly in respect to supplies of gasoline and lubricating oil. Nearly half of the petrol consumed in the United Kingdom comes from the United States, and, although much could, no doubt, be done to maintain such transport as was absolutely necessary by prevention of waste and the elimination of non-essential services, the shortage would probably be very serious for some time, pending the development of other sources of supply.

"The effect of cutting off the supplies of lubricating oil at present obtained from the United States is evident from the fact that ninety-five per cent. of the imports of this product, which is so essential to the carrying-on of our industries, comes from that country alone.

"It is improbable that kerosene supplies would be materially interfered with as fifty per cent. of the United States' production is exported, and very large quantities would presumably continue to be exported in order to prevent stoppage of refining.

"The fuel oil position also, while serious, is not so alarming as vessels burning oil under boilers can revert to coal, and it is noteworthy that many American ship-owners are said to be taking this step already. It is, however, likely that the first step at conserving fuel oil would be to refuse bunker supplies to any but American ships."

THE DEPUTY GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Secret.)

SIR,

Ottawa, 14th July, 1921.

WITH reference to your Secret despatch of the 16th May,‡ in which the hope is expressed that it may be possible for the outlet of any pipe-line carrying oil from the North-West Territories to be in British territory, I have the honour to inform you that the Petroleum Engineer of the Dominion Government is now in the Mackenzie District and much useful information upon the subject of oil is expected with his return.

So far as the Department of the Interior has been able to judge from the information already available, the only route of a pipe-line for the purpose mentioned, to which serious consideration appears to have been given, is that south, following the waterways to Edmonton, and application appears to have been made to the Government of Alberta for permission to construct a pipe-line following a portion of this route.

* No. 261.

† Published in Canadian Gazette of 12th February and 5th March, 1921.

‡ No. 262.

The alternative method for the conveyance of oil from the Mackenzie District was by linking up the navigable waters of the Mackenzie and Yukon Rivers by means of a pipe-line across the watershed from the mouth of Rat River to some point on the Porcupine River near its junction with the Yukon. The suggestion was that the oil be carried in barges down the Mackenzie and up the Peel to the mouth of the Rat River, and that a pipe-line be constructed by the valley of the Rat River and down the Bell and Porcupine to navigable waters, the oil to be carried in barges down the Yukon River to tide water in Alaska.

From the information received it would appear that this method of conveyance is not feasible, and that it has not been taken seriously by those who understand the conditions.

There would not appear to be any objection to the Petroleum Department entering into direct communication with the Department of the Interior upon the details of the oil and gas regulations.

I have, &c.,

JOHN IDINGTON,
Deputy Governor-General.

Secretariat Note.—There is nothing in subsequent papers to show that there has been communication between the Petroleum Department and the Department of the Interior.

RESOLUTION XIX: NATURALIZATION.

This Conference is of opinion that legislation should be passed throughout the Empire restricting, for a period after the War, so far as in the circumstances of each country may be possible, the naturalization of citizens of present enemy countries, and also the acquisition by them of any form of political rights or of land or mining privileges.

[The Government of the Dominion of Canada abstained from voting; the Government of the Union of South Africa recorded dissent.]

RESOLUTION XX: NATIONALITY AND NATURALIZATION.

The Conference refers to the Resolution X passed by the Imperial War Conference, 1917, recognizing the desirability and importance of securing uniformity of policy and action throughout the Empire with regard to naturalization, and recommends that a special Conference, representative of all parts of the Empire, should be held at the earliest practicable date to examine and report in the light of that Resolution upon any question connected with nationality or naturalization which any Government represented at the special Conference may desire to raise, and upon any suggestions which may be made for the amendment of the existing law.

MY LORD,

Government House, Wellington, 10th February, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Lordship that I did not fail to bring under the notice of my Prime Minister your predecessor's Secret despatch of the 24th of April, 1918,* on the subject of naturalization.

2. A peculiar collection of circumstances, due mainly to the visits of my Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance to the United Kingdom, has, however, prevented Ministers from sending a definite reply to the despatch referred to, and I enclose a memorandum which has been addressed to me by my Attorney-General, explaining in detail the reasons for the delay which has already occurred in tendering advice to me on the subject.

3. The enclosures† referred to by the Attorney-General accompany this despatch.

I have, &c.,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 266.

21st January, 1919.

Secret Despatch from Secretary of State, dated 24th April, 1918, on the Subject of Naturalization.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

I REFER to Your Excellency's letter to myself of the 3rd instant, on the above subject.

I have now obtained the file, and find that on the 11th September last I wrote a long memorandum for the Government, recommending a certain advice to Your Excellency in reference to the despatch. My memorandum was referred to Cabinet, which directed that it be circulated to Ministers, and that the decision should stand over until the return of the Prime Minister and Sir Joseph Ward.

The matter was referred to the Prime Minister by Cabinet on the 31st October, 1918, and would, I think, have been dealt with by him in the manner advised by me in my original memorandum before he left New Zealand, but for the fact that in the meantime the despatch from the Secretary of State, of the 10th October, 1918,‡ arrived, transmitting copies of the Imperial Act actually passed on the 8th August, 1918, and it was desirable to consider whether anything in that Act contained might modify the advice which I had recommended should be tendered to Your Excellency.

Moreover, during the last session of the New Zealand Parliament special provision was made prohibiting the acquisition of land in New Zealand by persons of enemy origin. The intention to introduce such legislation was stated in my memorandum to the Prime Minister, of 11th September, 1918, above referred to, and it is obviously necessary to redraft that memorandum so that reference should be made to legislation actually passed by the New Zealand Parliament instead of to contemplated legislation.

The reference to the Prime Minister by Your Excellency, of the despatch of 10th October, 1918, is dated 6th December, 1918, and I venture to think that the circumstances now stated to Your Excellency will be a sufficient explanation of apparent delay. I must still redraft the memorandum, and I think it probable that Cabinet with regard to my redrafted memorandum§ will act as it did with regard to the previous memorandum, namely, desire that the advice to Your Excellency on this important subject should not be tendered until the return of the Prime Minister and Sir Joseph Ward to New Zealand.

* No. 187 in Dominions No. 61. † Not printed. ‡ No. 191 in Dominions No. 61.

§ See enclosure in No. 268.

I respectfully suggest that a copy of this present letter, or a statement of its effect, might be communicated to the Secretary of State in explanation of the apparent delay which has already occurred, and of the further delay which I think it probable the Ministers in New Zealand may ask for. I further respectfully suggest that the special attention of the Secretary of State might in this regard be called to the New Zealand War Legislation Act, 1917, Part I., sections 2 to 10 inclusive, and Part II., sections 11 and 12, and also to the War Legislation and Statute Law Amendment Act, 1918, Part I., sections 2 to 12 inclusive. With that object I have now to enclose two copies of each of the Acts referred to. I also transmit a copy of this letter for Your Excellency's possible convenience.

Attorney-General.

MY LORD,

Government House, Wellington, 28th August, 1919.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch, Dominions No. 631, of the 31st October, 1918,† and connected correspondence on the subject of Naturalization, I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship the accompanying four copies of a Memorandum‡ prepared by Sir Francis H. 2. Your attention is also invited to Mr. Walter Long's Secret despatch of the 24th of April, 1918,§ relative to the New Zealand "Revocation of Naturalization Act" No. 8, of 1917, a copy of which is printed on page 16|| of the enclosed Memorandum, the advice of Sir John Salmond, Solicitor-General, being printed on page 7.¶ The concurrence of the Attorney-General in the view of the Solicitor-General will be noticed on page 7¶ of the Memorandum.

3. It is respectfully suggested that the Attorney-General's Memorandum be submitted to the Law Officers of the Crown in England, for their comments, which it is requested should be communicated to me, for the information of my Ministers, at the earliest possible moment, as, if it is at all possible, my Government will arrange to postpone legislation in New Zealand until a reply is received to this despatch.

4. The Government desires to lay upon the table of Parliament the Attorney-General's Memorandum, but is unable to do so without the permission of Your Lordship, as one of the despatches from the Colonial Office on the subject is secret. Would you be so good as to let me know by telegraph whether you will grant the permission required by my Ministers?

Enclosure in No. 268.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS IN NEW ZEALAND.

(Secret.)

Memorandum by Attorney-General for Consideration of Ministers.

PART I.—PRELIMINARY.

A SECRET cablegram, dated 24th April, 1918, from the Secretary of State to the Governor-General, in the following terms—"Naturalization legislation: reply required"—seems to have been referred by His Excellency to the Acting Prime Minister on the 19th June, and referred by the Acting Prime Minister to the Minister of Internal Affairs on the 20th June. On the 27th June the latter Minister referred the despatch to Cabinet. It was finally referred by Cabinet to the Attorney-General on the 1st July, 1918.

2. The cable despatch above referred to is a request for the reply of the New Zealand Government to communications contained in several previous despatches, which it appears unnecessary to specify in detail, because, if the New Zealand Government adopts the views expressed in this memorandum, His Excellency may be advised to send a reply to the last despatch, which will deal with the subject-matter of the several previous despatches. The delay in dealing with the previous despatches was explained to His Excellency in the Attorney-General's letter to His Excellency of the 21st January, 1919.* Immediately before the receipt by the Attorney-General of His Excellency's letter of the 3rd January, 1919, and before the Attorney-General's letter to His Excellency of the 21st January, 1919,† the despatch of the 31st October, 1918,‡ was received by His Excellency from the Secretary of State, and it will be observed that in that despatch the Secretary of State transmitted copies of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, reprinted as amended to be in accord with the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, together with copies of a memorandum prepared in the Home Office on the changes introduced into the Act of 1918 during its passage into law. The Secretary of State further, in paragraph 2, invites the attention of the New Zealand Government to Resolutions XIX and XX of the Imperial War Conference, 1918, and refers to the pages containing the reports of the proceedings of that Conference. Resolution XX advised that a Special Conference, representative of all parts of the British Empire, should be held at the earliest practicable date to examine and report in the light of Resolution X of the Imperial War Conference, 1917, upon any question connected with nationality or naturalization which any Government represented at the Special Conference might desire to raise, and upon any suggestions which might be made for the amendment of the existing law. The Secretary of State in paragraph 3 states that the first meeting of the Special Conference under Resolution XX was held on the 31st July at the Home Office, and that copies of the proceedings were circulated to those who attended the Conference. He goes on to say that further memoranda were in process of preparation, which would also be circulated, and that the Home Secretary informed him that he expected that the subjects thus raised would be referred by the members of the Special Conference to their Governments for instruction, and that he hoped that they would be discussed by correspondence, and at another meeting or meetings, at a time generally convenient.

* Enclosure in No. 266.

† No. 308 in Dominions No. 61.

3. I have not been able to find any reference to the copies of the proceedings of the Special Conference, or any correspondence on the subject, or any note of proceedings at any other meeting on the subject. Possibly this may be due to the fact that after the Imperial Conference of 1918 the Prime Minister of New Zealand and Sir Joseph Ward were only in New Zealand for the period of the short second session of that year and left immediately to attend the Peace Conference. Their return to New Zealand is not expected till the middle of August, 1919.

4. Before proceeding to state the exact question which arises for the consideration of the New Zealand Government and offering advice as to the reply which should be sent to the Imperial Government, I think it right to refer to the fact that at the Imperial Conference of 1918 (see p. clxxv of the report of the proceedings*) the Prime Minister of New Zealand himself moved a resolution on the subject of naturalization of enemy subjects, which was much discussed and finally amended and adopted by the Conference as Resolution No. XIX (see p. vii), the Government of Canada abstaining from voting and the Government of South Africa recording dissent. The resolution as amended was as follows: "This Conference is of opinion that legislation should be passed throughout the Empire restricting for a period after the War, so far as in the circumstances of each country may be possible, the naturalization of citizens of present enemy countries, and also the acquisition by them of any form of political rights or of land or mining privileges." This resolution was partially given effect to in the United Kingdom by sub-section (2) of section 3 of the Imperial amending Act of 1918; but that section does not prevent the acquisition by an alien enemy subject of land or mining privileges in the United Kingdom. The amending Act was passed on the 8th August, 1918, and there was no possibility of communication with the Governments of the Dominions between the date of the resolution of the Conference in July, 1918, and the passing of the Act. It appears probable, therefore, that the Secretary of State in the despatch of the 31st October, 1918,† is referring in paragraph 3 to further legislation which the Imperial Parliament may pass hereafter if an agreement is come to at later meetings of a Special Conference of Representatives from the Dominions. And I desire to express my opinion that, if later meetings of that Special Conference of specially qualified persons are still to be held, it is essential that the Government of New Zealand should be represented at such meeting by a person or persons able to appreciate the effect of the legal and constitutional questions which will be discussed as affecting this Dominion.

5. The original resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1917, which is referred to in Resolution XX of the Conference of 1918, appears on page xiii of the Report of the Proceedings of 1917‡ in the following terms: "The Conference recognizes the desirability and importance of securing uniformity of policy and action throughout the Empire with regard to naturalization. It is resolved that the proposals set forth in the memorandum submitted by the Home Office be commended to the consideration of the respective Governments summoned to the Conference."

6. I was not a Law officer of the Crown in the year 1917, and did not see the proposals of the memorandum of the Home Office referred to in the resolution of 1917. But with regard to the first paragraph of the resolution of the Conference of 1917, it is so manifest that uniformity throughout the Empire in the matter of naturalization of aliens is desirable that I have hesitated long before arriving at the contrary conclusion which I feel bound to submit to the New Zealand Government at the present time. Before the War I think there was no difference of opinion in any part of the Empire. At all events we in New Zealand were then willing to accept the Imperial Act of 1914 in substance and in letter. But the conditions created by the War, and circumstances which have arisen in consequence of the War, have made it essential that each Dominion of the Empire should consider with the utmost care the subject of naturalization of aliens in relation to its possible effect upon that individual Dominion, and consequently the attainment of the ideal of uniformity of legislation must, in my opinion, be postponed. New Zealand is a country capable of carrying a far larger population than its present numbers. It is still a country to which immigrants flock and are welcomed, and it is probable that in the future, as in the past, our newcomers will be—many of them—by birth aliens. We have no desire to bar our shores to foreigners, but there should be the strongest possible objection to the grant of political and other rights of a British subject in New Zealand to a foreigner unless and until he has first been subjected during a term of residence in New Zealand to such tests of qualification for admission to the franchise as the New Zealand Parliament finds it desirable from time to time to impose. And, further, it is at the present time obvious that it will be necessary in New Zealand to discriminate between classes of foreign nations in determining the tests of qualification for admission to the rights of a British subject in New Zealand. It appears to me that it is possible that a foreigner in England (for example) may by his conduct satisfy the Secretary of State that he is entitled in England to naturalization as a British subject, while he may be still a person whom the New Zealand Government might properly desire to be subjected to a further period of residence in New Zealand and further tests of qualification before he should be admitted to the rights of a British subject in New Zealand. If it be answered that the adoption by New Zealand of the English Act will not prevent New Zealand separately legislating in the direction of requiring further tests, because by section 26 of the English Act of 1914 it is provided that nothing in the Act shall disentitle the Legislature of a British possession to treat differently different classes of British subjects, I answer that that may be true (though I am by no means satisfied that a Court would necessarily construe section 26 in that way), but that it appears to me inconsistent to first adopt the principle that the grant of naturalization in any one part of the Empire shall create the status of a British subject in any other part, and simultaneously to legislate declaring that the grant of naturalization in part A of the Empire shall not alone be effectual to confer in part B the rights of a British subject.

* [Cd. 9177.].

† No. 308 in Dominions No. 61.

‡ Dominions No. 62.

PART II.—THE EXISTING LEGISLATION.

(a) Imperial Legislation.

The right of the Legislatures of British colonies or possessions abroad to legislate on the subject-matter of privileges of naturalization to be exercised and enjoyed within the limits of such colonies or possessions was first expressly recognized and conferred by the Imperial Act of 1847, 10 and 11 Vict., cap. 83. That recognition of the legislative power of British possessions was repeated in the English Naturalization Act of 1870, section 16, which continued in force with some slight modifications until repealed by the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914. The Act of 1914, again, by section 26 affirmed the full powers in this respect of Colonial Legislatures.

The Imperial Naturalization Act, 1870, contained in section 7 the provision that an alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted should in the United Kingdom be entitled to all political and other rights, powers and privileges, and be subject to all obligations to which a natural-born British subject is entitled or subjected in the United Kingdom, with the qualification that he should not when within the limits of the foreign State of which he was originally a subject be deemed to be a British subject unless he had ceased to be a subject of that State in pursuance of the laws thereof or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect. In section 10 the national status of married women and infant children was defined. In the second section it was provided that real and personal property of every description might be acquired, held, and disposed of by an alien (i.e., a foreigner not naturalized) in the same manner in all respects as a natural-born British subject, with a proviso that the section should not confer any right on an alien to hold real property situated out of the United Kingdom, and should not qualify an alien out of the United Kingdom for any office or franchise.

The British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, was finally passed on the 7th August, 1914. It repealed the Act of 1870 and all previous Acts on the subject. Copies of the Act as proposed to be introduced had been sent to the various dominions before the session of the Imperial Parliament of 1914. In Part I a natural-born British subject is defined. Part II makes provision for naturalization of aliens. Attention is specially directed to section 9, which provides that Part II of the Act shall not, nor shall any certificate of naturalization granted thereunder, have effect within any of the dominions specified in the First Schedule unless the Legislature of that dominion adopts Part II. New Zealand is one of the dominions named in the First Schedule. Part III is general, and deals, amongst other matters, with the national status of married women and infant children (sections 10 to 12 inclusive) and with the status of aliens (sections 17 and 18). Section 26 provides in sub-section (1) that nothing in the Act should take away or abridge any power vested in or exercisable by the Legislature or Government of any British possession, or affect the operation of any law at present in force passed in exercise of such power, or prevent any such Legislature or Government from treating differently different classes of British Subjects. Sub-section (2) of section 26 provides that all laws made by the Legislature of a British possession for imparting to any person any of the privileges of naturalization to be enjoyed by him within the limits of that possession shall within those limits have the authority of law. Sub-section (3) provides that where any parts of His Majesty's dominions are under both a central and a local Legislature the expression "British possession" shall for the purposes of this section include both all parts under the central Legislature and each part under a local Legislature, with a proviso that this is not to be taken to validate laws passed by a local Legislature in any case where the central Legislature possesses exclusive legislative authority with respect to naturalization. I am not aware at present whether by the respective constitutions of the Dominion of Canada, or the Commonwealth of Australia, or the Union of South Africa, the central Legislature has exclusively reserved to it the subject of naturalization, but if in any of the three cases that reservation has not been made it will be seen that an alien might be naturalized in an individual State of any of those three great self-governing dominions. That point is of minor importance, but cannot be wholly ignored in consideration of the possible effect if the New Zealand Legislature adopted Part II of the Imperial Act of 1914.

In 1918 the Imperial Parliament under the circumstances hereinbefore detailed (see p. 1) passed the Amendment Act, 8 and 9 Geo. V, cap. 38. The whole law of naturalization in the United Kingdom is now to be found in the Act of 1914 as amended by the Act of 1918.

(b) New Zealand Legislation.

In the year 1866 the Parliament of New Zealand passed the Aliens Act, 1866, in a form the precedent for which I am unable to trace. In 1870 was passed the Aliens Act, 1870, making special provision that every alien friend might acquire property, real and personal, in the same manner as if he were a natural-born subject of the British Sovereign. In the year 1880 a Consolidation Act was passed under the title of the Aliens Act, 1880. There is no substantial difference between the effect of the Act of 1880 and that of the later Act under the consolidation of 1908, intitled the Aliens Act, 1908 (which later Act contains the present law of New Zealand, with certain modifications created by recent war legislation), though there is considerable difference in the language and arrangement of the two Acts. The consolidating Act of 1908 adopted (as the previous consolidating Act of 1880 had) the precedent of the Act of 1866, and therefore our present Act of 1908 differs in its language and in its arrangement from the Imperial Act of 1914. Though I cannot advise the adoption by the New Zealand Legislature of Part II of the Imperial Act of 1914, and though I think that in some essential matters the New Zealand legislation should not be in exact accord with the Imperial legislation, I think it is clear that so far as possible the language and the arrangement of the New Zealand statute should be identical with the Imperial statute, and it is for that reason that, as will later appear, I advise that our present New Zealand Act should be repealed, and a new Act passed practically identical in language and form with the Imperial Act except in respect of the matters of substantial difference which I think must continue to exist.

The provisions of the Aliens Act, 1908, have been materially affected by certain war legislation—firstly, by the Revocation of Naturalization Act, 1917, No. 8; secondly, by the Registration of Aliens Act, 1917, No. 12—which, however, relates only to aliens who are not naturalized; thirdly, by the War Legislation Act, 1917, Part I, which empowers the Supreme Court to declare forfeited to His Majesty any estate or interest, legal or equitable, which is incapable of being held as against the Crown by an alien who is a subject of a State with which His Majesty was then at war, and makes future contracts for the acquisition of land by such aliens void and illegal; fourthly, by Part II of the same Act of 1917, dealing with the political status of enemy aliens; and, fifthly, by the War Legislation and Statute Law Amendment Act, 1918, Part I, which prohibits contracts for the acquisition of land by persons of enemy origin, notwithstanding that such persons are subjects of His Majesty or of a friendly State, whether by birth or otherwise.

PART III.—MATTERS TO BE NOW DETERMINED BY THE NEW ZEALAND GOVERNMENT.

A. Whether the New Zealand Legislature shall adopt Part II of the Imperial Act of 1914.

The object, intention, and effect of Part II of the Imperial Act is to enable naturalization of an alien as a British subject by the proper authority in any part of the Empire to be effectual throughout every part of the Empire, and to confer upon the aliens so naturalized the status of a British subject in every part of the Empire. Adoption of Part II by New Zealand would, unless limited by special legislation, surrender to the discretion of the authorities of any other part of the Empire New Zealand's present right to determine for herself what foreigners shall have the status and rights of British subjects naturalized in New Zealand. I cannot advise that surrender. I have in Part I of this memorandum indicated generally some reasons why New Zealand should continue to determine for itself who should have the full rights of New-Zealanders. It seems to me not desirable in a memorandum such as the present to attempt to define specific examples of the difficulties which I think might arise. I have already referred to the reply which I anticipate may be given by the Law Advisers of the Imperial Government—namely, that section 26 of the Imperial Act leaves it still open to the New Zealand Legislature to discriminate between different classes of British subjects, and therefore empowers the New Zealand Legislature to refuse to give full effect in New Zealand to letters of naturalization granted elsewhere. But if it be plainly necessary for New Zealand to so legislate I cannot see what advantage is to be gained by adopting Part II and thereby prima facie according full recognition to letters of naturalization wherever granted. The result may be the same whichever course is adopted—either (1) adoption of Part II and special legislation preventing Part II having its full effect in New Zealand, or (2) non-adoption of Part II and legislation making due provision for the grant of letters in New Zealand; but it appears to me that the second course is the more logical and the more consistent.

B. What Alterations should be made in the Law of New Zealand respecting Aliens in New Zealand?

I believe the Solicitor-General is of opinion that Part I and certain parts of the provisions of Part III of the Imperial Act, 1914, apply throughout the Empire. I am not sure whether Sir John Salmond has arrived at a definite conclusion upon this point, and I ought to say here that I should find some difficulty in adopting his view, having regard to the provisions of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865 (cap. 63), and also to the express provisions of section 26 of the Act of 1914 itself. If there be a difference between the Solicitor-General and myself on the subject, such difference will be unimportant if the New Zealand Government adopts my advice, first to refuse to adopt Part II of the English Act, and secondly to repeal the Aliens Act, 1908, and thirdly to pass a new Aliens Act either under the same title as the Imperial Act or under the title of "The Aliens Act."

In such new Act Part I of the Imperial Act, defining a natural-born British subject, can be either recited or enacted in New Zealand in the precise terms in which it is found in the Imperial Act. In place of Part II of the Imperial Act we should substitute provisions for the grant of naturalization in New Zealand by the Governor-General of New Zealand or the Minister of Internal Affairs substantially in accord with the provisions of sections 2 to 7 inclusive. In place of sections 10, 11, and 12 of Part III of the Imperial Act, defining the national status of married women and infant children, we should, I think, in the New Zealand Act use the exact language of the Imperial Act.

As to sections 13 to 16 inclusive, dealing with loss of British nationality, I think it doubtful whether we should attempt to include anything by analogy to those sections in a New Zealand Act. Clearly we could not legislate by analogy to section 15, and in a less degree the same difficulty appears to arise in regard to sections 13, 14, and 16. This special matter requires further careful consideration by the Law Officers of the Crown.

As to sections 17 and 18, under the heading of "status of Aliens," I think New Zealand should not use the language of the Imperial Act, though I do not think that there is any real distinction between the rights in this respect conferred by section 13 of the New Zealand Act of 1908 upon an alien friend and those conferred upon any alien by section 17 of the Imperial Act. In my view an alien should not be allowed to acquire real property in New Zealand (with the possible exception of inheritance) until such alien has been naturalized. The right to acquire personal property (with the exception of long leaseholds) should be allowed to a foreigner whether naturalized or not; but the subject-matter of freehold land in New Zealand is of real importance, and it seems to me to be essential that a foreigner arriving in New Zealand, though free to trade and live as he pleases, should not be allowed to acquire the freehold of land until by his residence for a prescribed term and his satisfaction of other tests he is found to be a person entitled to claim to be a British subject in New Zealand.

As to sections 19 to 24 of the Imperial Act, under the heading "Procedure and Evidence," in the new New Zealand Act, an endeavour should, I think, be made to provide by analogy similar procedure and evidence for the grant of naturalization in New Zealand.

We might re-enact section 25. Section 26 will, of course, be omitted. Sections 27 and 28 (the interpretation and repeal sections) would be transposed into their proper places in appropriate language according to our New Zealand form.

With regard to the provisions of the Imperial Amendment Act of 1918, I do not see any substantial reason for New Zealand in its new legislation adopting the provisions of section 1 of the Amendment Act relating to revocation of letters of naturalization. It is much simpler to insert in lieu thereof the provisions of our Revocation of Naturalization Act, 1917. The principal difference between the English Amendment Act of 1918 on this subject and our Act of 1917 is that the Imperial Act specifies certain definite grounds for which alone naturalization may be revoked, and also empowers the Secretary of State to refer the case for inquiry by a Committee presided over by a person who holds high judicial office. Whether the New Zealand Parliament can confer upon the Governor-General the powers conferred upon the Secretary of State by that part of section 1 of the Imperial Amendment Act which is headed "7A" must be the subject of further inquiry.

The amendments of the Imperial Act of 1914 effected by section 2 of the Imperial Amendment Act of 1918 should, with necessary modification, be observed and adopted in the new New Zealand Act.

Section 3 of the Imperial Amendment Act is the provision adverted to in Part I of this memorandum, requiring generally that no certificate of naturalization shall, before the expiration of a period of ten years after the termination of the present war, be granted to any subject of a country now at war with His Majesty, with exceptions in favour of persons who have served in His Majesty's Forces or in those of his Allies and of persons who are members of a race or community known to be opposed to the enemy Government, or who are by birth British subjects. This section might properly be included in the New Zealand statute.

C. Special Additional Provisions required in New Zealand.

Although the War Legislation Act, 1917, is not expressed to be temporary, yet its long title defines it as "An Act to make certain Additional Provisions rendered necessary or advisable by reason of the Continuance of a State of War." Part I of the Act of 1917 becomes ineffectual after peace, and is replaced practically by Part I of the War Legislation and Statute Law Amendment Act, 1918, prohibiting the acquisition without the licence of the Governor-General in Council of land by a person of enemy origin. But Part II of the Act of 1917, dealing with the electoral rights of alien enemies, should be continued in force for a term of years to prevent our present enemies voting after peace at our polls. It will require some amendment for that purpose. Part II of the War Legislation Act, 1917, and Part I of the War Legislation Act, 1918, should be repealed and re-enacted, and any new naturalization law passed in New Zealand should be made expressly subject to the provisions of that enactment.

There remains, I think, only the question whether the prohibition against the acquisition of land by persons of enemy origin should be further extended so as to include in such prohibition the acquisition of mining rights as recommended by the Imperial Conference of 1918 on Mr. Massey's motion.

PART IV.—SUMMARY.

I therefore advise:—

- (1) That the New Zealand Government decide not to adopt Part II of the Imperial Act, 1914.
- (2) That His Excellency be informed accordingly, and respectfully requested to cable to that effect to the Secretary of State, informing the Secretary of State that a memorandum containing the reasons for that decision will be forwarded by mail.
- (3) That copies of this present memorandum as printed be sent to His Excellency to be forwarded to the Secretary of State.
- (4) That, if the Secretary of State does not object, a copy of this memorandum be laid on the table of both Houses of Parliament.
- (5) That a New Zealand Aliens Act be prepared for consideration of Parliament, repealing the present Aliens Act, 1908, and enacting new provisions following as far as possible the language and form of the Imperial Act of 1914 as amended by the Imperial Act of 1918, but restricting the rights of foreigners in New Zealand as advised in this memorandum, and recognizing for purposes of naturalization only the grants of naturalization made in New Zealand in accordance with the conditions and terms of the New Zealand Act, and also making the provision for revocation above advised: one of the sections of the Act to expressly provide that it shall be subject as regards persons of enemy origin to the provisions of another Act of the same session.
- (6) That such other Act of the same session should re-enact with necessary modifications the provisions of the Acts of 1917 and 1918 disqualifying certain enemy subjects from exercising the franchise and from acquiring land without licence; and should also contain a provision following the terms of section 3 of the Imperial Amendment Act of 1914, preventing the grant of a certificate of naturalization to present enemy subjects until ten years after peace.

There remains one point for the Government to decide—whether the prohibition of acquisition of land is to be extended by the new Act to include prohibition of the acquisition of mining privileges. I leave this point without comment for the decision of Cabinet.

APPENDIX X TO MEMORANDUM.

Crown Law Office, Wellington, 30th July, 1918.

The Under Secretary of Internal Affairs.

Revocation of Naturalization Act, 1917.

THE despatch of the Secretary of State for the Colonies of the 24th April, 1918, relative to this Act contains the following comment with respect to the validity of the Act:—

* No. 187 in Dominions No. 61.

"Although the provisions in the New Zealand Act with regard to the national status of the wife of a naturalized British subject substantially agree with what is proposed in the Imperial Bill, it has been argued that until this Bill becomes law they may be held to be inconsistent with section 10 of the Imperial Act of 1914 and are not in fact valid. Although this point is one which may never be raised, it might of course at any time come up in a Court of law, which could alone decide it. Similar considerations arise with regard to section 2 (d) of the New Zealand Act, which, when read with section 3, enables the Executive to cancel the British nationality which a woman of foreign origin may have acquired by marriage to a natural-born British subject."

As to this I desire to offer the following observations:—

If the New Zealand Act, so far as it relates to the nationality of married women, could on its true construction be read as affecting British nationality acquired by women under the provisions of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, these provisions would be clearly ultra vires and void as in conflict with the Imperial Act. British nationality conferred by the Imperial Act cannot be taken away by New Zealand legislation. I do not think, however, that the New Zealand Act correctly interpreted extends to any such case. It is true that paragraph (d) of section 2 includes within the term "naturalized British subject" a woman naturalized by her marriage to a British subject. The whole section, however, is governed by the introductory words "British subject naturalized in New Zealand." I understand these words to limit the operation of the Act to persons who possess the status of British nationality in New Zealand only and by virtue of New Zealand legislation only. The only alien woman who are "naturalized in New Zealand" by their marriage to British subjects are those who marry aliens who have become naturalized in New Zealand, and it is to them only that the New Zealand Act applies. Alien women who have married natural-born British subjects are by virtue of section 10 of the Imperial Act British subjects throughout the Empire and are not included within the scope of the recent New Zealand Act.

As so construed, therefore, the New Zealand Act does not seem to be ultra vires. It is true that section 10 of the Imperial Act provides that the wife of a British subject shall be deemed to be a British subject, and makes provision that when her husband ceases during the marriage to be a British subject she may make a declaration of her intention to retain British nationality. This section, however, has no application to British subjects who are such by naturalization in a Colony only. The term "British subject" is defined in section 27 of the Imperial Act as meaning a natural-born British subject or a person to whom an Imperial certificate of naturalization has been granted. The status of the wife of an alien naturalized in a Colony is a matter wholly dependent upon colonial legislation.

(No. 588.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Downing Street, 8th December, 1919.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have learnt with much satisfaction that it was found possible during the first session of the Dominion Parliament of 1919 to amend the Canadian Acts relating to British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens on the lines of the Imperial Act of 1918.*

2. It is noted with reference to Section 8 (4) B of the new Act 9-10 George V, c. 38, that it was stated in the course of the Debate in the Canadian House of Commons, on the 1st of July, that it is proposed to ask His Majesty's Government to amend the Imperial legislation so as to leave Canada free to omit the provision contained in the Section above mentioned. As regards this point I may observe that it was explained in the Home Office Memorandum on the Imperial Act of 1918, a copy of which was enclosed in Mr. Long's despatch Dominions No. 631 of 31st October, 1918,* that the provisions in Section 3 of the Imperial Act, corresponding to Section 8 (4) (A) and (B) related only to the United Kingdom, and were not intended to form part of the Imperial Law of Naturalization.

* 9-10 Geo. V., ch. 38 (amended by 10 Geo. V., ch. 3.).

I have, &c.,

TELEGRAM.

(Paraphrase.)

WITH reference to your Secret despatch of 28th August,† Attorney-General's memorandum suggests complete reversal of policy of Imperial citizenship, which has been affirmed at three consecutive Imperial Conferences, and until there has been further opportunity of considering question at next Conference that may be held, I would venture strongly to deprecate individual legislation by New Zealand Government. It would not appear possible for the Law Officers to advise upon the main question, as to the adoption of Part II of the Imperial Act, as this is one of policy for your Government to decide. Minor points raised in the memorandum would appear to be matters which could be dealt with more conveniently by the Special Conference on Nationality and Naturalization which held one meeting 31st July, 1918, as stated in the second paragraph of the memorandum, and which, it is hoped, may re-assemble in connexion with the next Imperial Conference that may be held. If Attorney-General or some expert in questions of nationality and naturalization could attend on his behalf at the next meeting of the Conference it would be of great advantage; and in the meantime Attorney-General may like to circulate a memorandum for consideration of the Special Conference on any points which he may desire to bring before it. If so, I shall be happy to arrange for circulation if a copy is sent to me. I observe in this connexion that Attorney-General does not appear to have seen the Minutes of Proceedings of the first meeting of the Special Conference and papers circulated in connexion with it which were sent to Sir J. Ward. Copies being sent by mail.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

[My Lord.] [Sir.]

Downing Street, 10th September, 1921.

As recorded in Section XII, page 9, of the Parliamentary Paper [Cmd. 1474], of which copies were enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 335, of the 19th of August,‡ a memorandum prepared in the Home Office with reference to the nationality of children of British parents born abroad was considered by a Special Committee of the recent Imperial Conference, and the following resolution, which was finally approved by the main Conference, was adopted:—

* No. 308 in Dominions No. 61.

† No. 268.

‡ See Note on Page 226.

"The Committee, having considered the memorandum prepared in the Home Office, regarding the nationality of the children born abroad of British parents, commends in principle the proposals contained therein to the favourable consideration of the Governments of the Dominions and India."

2. The memorandum referred to is printed as Appendix VII of the same Parliamentary Paper.

3. I now have the honour to transmit to [Your Royal Highness,] [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of a draft Bill which has been prepared embodying the proposals contained in the memorandum.

4. This draft Bill amends the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914 (as amended in 1918), which was the result of deliberations at successive Imperial Conferences and which aimed at establishing a uniform law of nationality throughout the Empire. Effect has been very largely given to this intention by the adoption of Part II of the Act of 1914 by all the self-governing Dominions, except New Zealand and the Union of South Africa. [To New Zealand and Union of South Africa only: And His Majesty's Government venture to express the hope that the Bill may afford a suitable opportunity for the further consideration of the matter by your Government with a view to giving full effect to the agreement embodied in the Act of 1914.]

5. The particular matter dealt with in the draft Bill came before the recent Conference solely on account of the urgency of the demands made by the British communities in various foreign countries for the preservation of the British status of their descendants born in these countries, and no other of the points of nationality law (such, for instance, as the nationality of married women) which have attracted attention since the passing of the Act of 1914, and which still await further consideration (in continuation of the special Conference in 1918) were brought before the Conference. The Bill is strictly limited to the scope of the proposals set out in the Home Office memorandum.

6. It is hoped that an early opportunity of pursuing the other points will be found, but it is not considered desirable to delay the present Bill and so reduce what prospects there may be of passing it into law in the next Session of the Imperial Parliament.

7. The Secretary of State for Home Affairs has furnished the following observations on certain points in connexion with the draft Bill which require perhaps some explanation beyond that contained in the Home Office memorandum:—

(a) The recasting of Section 1 (1) (b) of the existing Act in the form set out in Clause 1 of the Bill has been rendered necessary for the sake of clearness and does not involve any change in the law beyond what is required to carry the present proposals into effect.

(b) Paragraph (ii) of the Proviso which is added to the Principal Act by Clause 1 (2) of the Bill has been inserted in order to take advantage of any opportunity there may be of reducing the number of cases of dual nationality resulting from the operation of the proposed amendment. It is, therefore, provided that a person shall not have the benefit of the new provisions if he possesses the faculty of discarding any other nationality which he may possess and does not make use of it.

(c) The provision contained in lines 36 and onwards on page 2 of the Bill is intended to enable the children of the second generation born abroad of British parents before the passing of the Bill to acquire the British nationality which they were prevented from acquiring by the repeal (without re-enactment) of the Act 13, Geo. III. c. 21, by the Act of 1914, and to this extent the Act will be retrospective.

(d) The effect of the present scheme will be to enable the British nationality of successive generations born abroad to be maintained so long as the prescribed conditions are fulfilled. The absolute stop placed at the second generation by the law obtaining before the Act of 1914 is removed.

8. I shall be glad to receive an early expression of your Ministers' views on the draft Bill. Copies of the revised instructions to Consuls regarding the registration of births of British subjects abroad were enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 357, of the 29th August.*

I have, &c.,

DRAFT OF A BILL TO AMEND THE BRITISH NATIONALITY AND STATUS OF ALIENS ACTS, 1914 AND 1918.

A.D. 1921.

Be it enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

Amendment

born British subject.

8 & 9 Geo. 5,
c. 38.

1. (1) Section one of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914 (hereinafter referred to as the "principal Act"), as amended by section two of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, shall be further amended as follows:—

"(1) The following paragraph shall be substituted for paragraph (b) of subsection (1):—

"(b) Any person born out of His Majesty's dominions whose father was, at the date of that person's birth, a British subject, and who fulfils any of the following conditions, that is to say, if either—

"(i) his father was born within His Majesty's allegiance; or

"(ii) his father was a person to whom a certificate of naturalization had been granted; or

"Provided also that if any person whose British nationality is conditional upon registration at a British consulate—

"(i) does not assert his British nationality by a declaration of retention of British nationality made within one year of attaining the age of twenty-one or within such extended period as may be authorized by regulations made under this Act, and registered in such manner as may be prescribed by such regulations; and

"(ii) is a subject or citizen of a foreign country under the law of which he can, without being naturalized in another country, divest himself of the nationality of that foreign country by making a declaration of alienage, or otherwise, and does not, before he attains the age of twenty-two, divest himself of such nationality accordingly;

he shall cease to be a British subject as from the time when he attains the age of twenty-two."

"Provided also that in the application of this section to any territory where there is no British Consulate, but there is a British Resident or other representative of His Majesty, references to the office of such resident or representative shall be substituted for references to a British Consulate.

"Paragraph (b) of this subsection shall apply to any person born out of His Majesty's dominions on or after the first day of January nineteen hundred and fifteen who would have been a British subject if born before that date, but for the purposes of the requirement that such person's birth must be registered at a British consulate, this provision shall apply to persons born before the day of nineteen hundred and twenty-one as though for the words 'twelve months after its occurrence' there were substituted the words 'twelve months after the day of nineteen hundred and twenty-one.'"

2. (1) At the end of subsection (1) of section twenty-seven of the principal Act, the following words shall be inserted:—

"The expression 'British Consulate' means the office of any British consular officer where a register of births is kept."

(2) The following words shall be substituted for the words in paragraph (1) of section two of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, down to and including "inserted," that is to say:—

Consequential amendments.

"At the end of section one the following subsection shall be inserted:—"

3. (1) This Act may be cited as the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1921, and the principal Act, the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, and this Act may be cited together as the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Acts, 1914 to 1921.

(2) Every enactment and word which is directed by the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, or by this Act to be substituted for or added to any portion of the principal Act, shall form part of the principal Act in the place assigned to it by the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, or this Act; and the principal Act, and all Acts, including this Act, which refer thereto shall, after the commencement of this Act, be construed as if the said enactment or word had been enacted in the principal Act, in the place so assigned, and where it is substituted for another enactment or word, had been enacted in lieu of that enactment or word.

A copy of the principal Act, with the amendment, whether by way of substitution, addition or omission, required by the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1918, and by this Act, shall be prepared and certified by the Clerk of the Parliaments and deposited with the Rolls of Parliament, and His Majesty's printer shall print, in accordance with the copy so certified, all copies of the principal Act, which are printed after the commencement of this Act.

(3) This Act shall come into operation on the day of nineteen hundred and twenty-one.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 22nd November, 1921.)

(No. 717.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 2nd November, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch No. 303, of 10th September,* copy of a minute from Ministers on the subject of the draft Bill to be introduced into the Imperial Parliament providing for the nationality of children born abroad of British parents.

I have, &c.,
ARTHUR FREDERICK,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 272.

MINUTE No. 1047.

Prime Minister's Office, 31st October, 1921.

WITH reference to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's minute No. 48/1212, of the 11th October, 1921, on the subject of the amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Acts, 1914 and 1918, Ministers have the honour to state that they concur in the terms of the draft Bill providing for the nationality of children of British parents born abroad.

Ministers have to add, for the information of the Secretary of State, that it is proposed to include the terms of the amendments in the Bill to be introduced into the Union Parliament at the forthcoming session.

In regard to paragraph 4 of the Secretary of State's despatch No. 303, of the 10th September, 1921, Ministers desire to add that, as previously advised,† they have agreed to the adoption of Part II of the Act of 1914, and have been awaiting a suitable opportunity of introducing the necessary legislation.

* No. 271.

† Ministers' minute announcing their decision to adopt Part II. of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, was transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies under cover of Lord Buxton's Secret despatch of the 20th January, 1915. (No. 29 in Dominions No. 61.)

RESOLUTION XXI.: RECIPROCITY OF TREATMENT BETWEEN INDIA AND THE DOMINIONS.

The Imperial War Conference is of opinion that effect should now be given to the principle of reciprocity approved by Resolution XXII of the Imperial War Conference, 1917. In pursuance of that Resolution it is agreed that:—

1. It is an inherent function of the Governments of the several communities of the British Commonwealth, including India, that each should enjoy complete control of the composition of its own population by means of restriction on immigration from any of the other communities.

2. British citizens domiciled in any British country, including India, should be admitted into any other British country for visits, for the purpose of pleasure or commerce, including temporary residence for the purpose of education. The conditions of such visits should be regulated on the principle of reciprocity as follows:—

(a) The right of the Government of India is recognized to enact laws which shall have the effect of subjecting British citizens domiciled in any other British country to the same conditions in visiting India as those imposed on Indians desiring to visit such country.

(b) Such right of visit or temporary residence shall, in each individual case, be embodied in a passport or written permit issued by the country of domicile and subject to ~~use~~ there by an officer appointed by and acting on behalf of the country to be visited, if such country so desires.

(c) Such right shall not extend to a visit or temporary residence for labour purposes or to permanent settlement.

3. Indians already permanently domiciled in the other British countries should be allowed to bring in their wives and minor children on condition (a) that not more than one wife and her children shall be admitted for each such Indian and (b) that each individual so admitted shall be certified by the Government of India as being the lawful wife or child of such Indian.

4. The Conference recommends the other questions covered by the memoranda presented this year and last year to the Conference by the representatives of India in so far as not dealt with in the foregoing paragraphs of this Resolution to the various Governments concerned with a view to early consideration.

Secretariat Note.—This matter was further discussed at the Imperial Meetings 1921. See page 8 of Cmd. 1474. The correspondence on the subject is printed in Dominions No. 70.

RESOLUTION XXII.: IMPERIAL COURT OF APPEAL.

The Conference is of opinion:—

(1) That the question of replacing the present dual system of appeal by the constitution of one Imperial Court of Appeal demands the prompt consideration of His Majesty's Government.

(2) That the Lord Chancellor should be invited to prepare and circulate to the Governments of the Dominions and of India, as soon as possible, a memorandum of such proposals as in the opinion of His Majesty's Government are practicable for that purpose with a view to decision at the next Imperial Conference.

(3) That each such Government as soon as possible thereafter shall communicate to the Government of the United Kingdom its views with regard to such proposals.

Secretariat Note.—No correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Dominion Governments took place subsequent to the despatch Dominions No. 630 of 13th October, 1918 (see Dominions No. 61, page 243).

The Lord Chancellor received a communication from the Canadian Government on the subject in reply to his memorandum of 30th August, 1918, but no further action has been taken (see 15254/19).

DEAR MR. LONG, Savoy Hotel, Strand, W.C., 10th January, 1919.
WITH reference to the attached minute of the 12th September, 1918,* on the subject of the abolition of shorthand reports of debates of the Imperial Conference, which was handed to me just prior to my departure from South Africa, I have the honour to state that, in the opinion of General Smuts and myself, Sir Robert Borden's proposal should be accepted. We think that all that need be recorded are the motions moved and the resolutions taken and voted upon.

DEAR LORD MILNER,

Hotel Majestic, Paris, 8th April, 1919.

I AM in receipt of Major Thornton's letter of the 24th March,† enclosing copy of a despatch of 12th September, 1918, sent by Mr. Long to Australia and other Dominions, as to a suggestion by Sir Robert Borden that the shorthand reports of the debates of the Imperial Conference should be abolished; and also a despatch of 2nd December, 1918,* from the Governor-General of Australia, stating that the Commonwealth Government concurred in the proposal, subject to my agreement.

I have considered the proposal carefully, and do not think that it ought to be agreed to. It is a matter which, in my opinion, each Imperial Conference ought to have the right to decide for itself; and the proper way to bring it up is to place it on the agenda paper of the Imperial Conference.

I note that Sir Robert Borden is said to have stated that his colleagues at the Conferences of 1917 and 1918 entirely agreed with him that much time was wasted, and that this waste was due in no inconsiderable degree to the fact that the speeches were recorded.

I was not present at the 1917 Conference, but at the 1918 Conference I did not express such an opinion. There was a debate, at the opening of the Conference, about the extent to which the debates and proceedings of the Conference should be issued to the Press from day to day. I did—in common with other members—express the view that full daily reports in the Press would lead to "talking to the gallery," and would be undesirable. But the question of abolishing the official shorthand report of the proceedings was not raised in the Conference, and I do not remember its having been discussed among the members.

Yours, etc.,

W. M. HUGHES.

SIR,

Downing Street, 22nd May, 1919.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's Confidential despatch of the 2nd December,* relative to the abolition of the shorthand reports of the debates of the Imperial Conference, I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of correspondence† with Mr. Hughes.

2. The Governments of the Union of South Africa, Newfoundland, and India have expressed their agreement with the proposal made by Sir R. Borden last year, but the Government of New Zealand is opposed to it.

3. In the circumstances it seems necessary, as Mr. Hughes suggests, that the matter should be held over until the next Conference meets, and accordingly His Majesty's Government propose to defer until then an expression of their own views on Sir R. Borden's proposal. It must, however, be borne in mind that should the next Conference be the Special Imperial Conference contemplated under Resolution IX. of the Imperial War Conference, 1917,* to deal with the Constitutional Relations of the Empire, it will doubtless be necessary to arrange in any case for a verbatim report of the proceedings to be taken.

I have, &c.,

SECRET. 4th March. Following from General Smuts for Lord Milner Begins: . . . I consider that it is very desirable that Imperial Conference on Constitutional Relations in the Empire should be held latter portion of this year. The subject of new status of Dominions is being largely canvassed in Dominions and is involved in reservations raised in American Senate, and there is some risk of misunderstanding inside the Empire which should be avoided by holding Conference early. Present British Cabinet has been largely responsible for great constitutional changes in Empire during the War and armistice, and it is right that they should finish the great work by taking the lead in definite settlement of constitutional relations in Empire at an early date. I hope therefore that, as to Conference and date, other Dominions will be consulted as soon as possible. . . . Ends.—BUXTON.

SECRET. 27th March. Following for your Prime Minister. Begins: With reference to your telegram of 4th March,* have consulted Prime Minister.

With regard to Imperial Conference we both feel considerable doubt whether the special Constitutional Conference contemplated in Resolution IX. of Imperial Conference of 1917 could be held before next year with any advantage, in view of the inevitable pre-occupation both of Parliaments and of the public all over the Empire with urgent problems of reconstruction and resettlement. We do feel, on the other hand, that there are many matters of Imperial consequence such as position with regard to League of Nations, the situation in Russia and the Near East, question of the renewal in 1921 of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, in addition to matters of inter-Imperial concern which make it very desirable that the Prime Ministers of the Empire should meet again in the course of the present year. In fact this would only be in accordance with the conclusions arrived at in 1917 as to the desirability of the Imperial Conference and Cabinet meeting annually.

Such a meeting will also be desirable from the point of view of the subsequent Constitutional Conference both for a preliminary discussion of the subjects to be raised and to settle the actual composition of the Constitutional Conference, for instance whether Conference, like other Conferences, should be purely governmental or should include representatives of other parties and in fact be conference of small parliamentary delegations.

* No. 278.

Further, a short time ago, when raising the question of a meeting of the Imperial Conference in the coming autumn, the Canadian Government suggested that it might be convenient to hold it at Ottawa. The Prime Minister replied that he was much attracted by the idea of meeting the Prime Ministers of the Empire at Ottawa, and that, if circumstances made it practicable and it was convenient for others, so far as he was concerned he would be ready to go there, though he did not feel in a position at present to commit himself in any way, for the international and the internal situation may make it impossible for him to be absent from this country for some weeks at that time. The Prime Minister added that he would consult his colleagues in the other Dominions as to how far such an arrangement would suit them. The Government of Canada have now again inquired as to whether it would be convenient to hold the meeting at Ottawa, have suggested October as the time and have extended an invitation to the Prime Ministers to go there. The Prime Minister, therefore, has requested me to ascertain the views of the Governments of the Empire on this proposal. As we cannot foresee the international situation so far ahead, it is, of course, impossible to settle anything finally at this moment. But I should be glad to know whether you would attend such a meeting, whether you would agree to its being held in Ottawa if it were otherwise practicable, and if October would be suitable date. I personally think the end of September would be better. Prime Minister is cabling in similar terms to New Zealand and Australia as to Canadian suggestion.—MILNER.

27TH MARCH. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister. Begins: Question of date and meeting place of next Imperial Conference was recently raised informally by Canadian Government and suggestion made that this Conference might meet at Ottawa. In view of the inevitable pre-occupation both of the public and of Parliaments all over the Empire with urgent problems of resettlement and reconstruction, I do not consider that the special Constitutional Conference contemplated in Resolution IX. of the Imperial War Conference of 1917 could be held with any advantage before next year. On the other hand I do feel that there are many matters of Imperial consequence; I need only mention the position with regard to the League of Nations, the question of the renewal in 1921 of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, the situation in Russia and the Near East as instances, not to speak of matters of inter-Imperial concern which make it very desirable that the Prime Ministers of the Empire should meet again in the course of the present year. This would, in fact, only be in accordance with the conclusions arrived at in 1917 as to the desirability of the Imperial Cabinet and Conference meeting annually. I am much attracted by the suggestion that this meeting should take place in Ottawa in the coming autumn and if such an idea proves to be practicable on other grounds and convenient to all concerned, I will, personally, be very ready to go there, though I do not feel in a position to commit myself in any way at present, for the international and internal situation may make it impossible for me to leave this country for some weeks at that time. I replied in this sense to Canadian Government expressing my willingness to consult my colleagues in the other Dominions as to how far such an arrangement would suit them, and Canadian Government have now again inquired as to whether it would be convenient for the meeting to be held at Ottawa, have extended an invitation to the Prime Ministers to go there and have suggested October as the time. It is, of course, impossible to settle anything final at this moment as we cannot, of course,

VERY Secret. With reference to your telegram of the 27th of March,* following from my Prime Minister for Mr. Lloyd George. Message begins: With reference to your message conveyed to me by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, have no objection to the next Imperial Cabinet or Conference being held at Ottawa. As a matter of fact, if the Conference is to be held this year, Ottawa would, for several reasons, suit New Zealand even better than London, but I am very doubtful whether I should be able to get away. At the present time there is very serious unrest in New Zealand and I think it would be unwise for me to go outside of the Dominion for even three or four months if the position does not improve before September or October. Moreover, it is almost certain that the New Zealand Parliament will be in session from June to November. I am of opinion that the proposed Conference should be postponed until the following year if possible. I realize the importance of the other questions, and without having enough inside information to be able to express a definite opinion, I consider that the Anglo-Japanese Treaty should be renewed. The question of the League of Nations rests almost entirely with the United States, and I am not inclined to recede from the position which was taken up by us at the Peace Conference. New Zealand and Australia are concerned vitally in the defence of the Pacific, and on this matter some definite understanding should be arrived at. The question of inter-Imperial shipping and other matters are also waiting to be dealt with. Message ends.—LIVERPOOL.

It should be remembered also that the Dominions have much business to transact in London and the meeting of the Prime Ministers in London affords a much more suitable opportunity for such business than a meeting at Ottawa would. I hope that the end of September or October would be suitable for me to come to London though I prefer end of September. As I have made all my arrangements on that basis it will be impossible for me to attend. In any case as the visit of the Prince of Wales, which does not terminate until August, precludes my absence I could not leave Australia as suggested. 28TH APRIL. Secret. Please inform your Acting Prime Minister with reference to recent correspondence between Perley and Rowell that Prime Minister of United Kingdom has been in communication with Prime Ministers of New Zealand, Commonwealth of Australia, and Union of South Africa regarding Canadian Government's suggestion that next meeting of Imperial Cabinet and Imperial Conference should be held at Ottawa this year.

The replies received show that other Prime Ministers see insuperable difficulties in holding any meeting this year, and Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia is most anxious that meeting of Imperial Cabinet should take place in London next year.

On the other hand, there seems to be general agreement that it is most desirable to hold special Constitutional Conference agreed upon under Resolution IX, Imperial War Conference, 1917, next year. As to place for meeting of this Conference, Union of South Africa and, we gather, New Zealand, would be prepared to accept Ottawa, and it is possible that above-mentioned objection of Australia may not apply to place of meeting special Conference, and might in any case be overcome.

* No. 280.

In the circumstances it seems clear (1) that no meeting of Imperial Cabinet can be held this year; (2) that meeting of Imperial Cabinet and also special Constitutional Conference should take place next year if possible.

Question of place for meetings, both of special Conference and Cabinet, must remain undecided for the moment. His Majesty's Government hope, however, that Government of Canada will keep open invitation that meeting should take place at Ottawa.—MILNER.

SECRET. Several Press cables report Amery as having said inter alia (1) that Conference would not be held next year, but (2) that Dominion Prime Ministers might meet in London to confer with you, view to formulate for submission to respective Parliaments of decisions arrived at.

I do not know how far Press statements coincide with your views, but I think it most undesirable that any statements should be made by Colonial Office to Press unless and until Dominions have had opportunity to settle something definitely with you. It is most embarrassing to be asked questions in House re Conferences or meetings on Imperial relations when one is entirely in the dark as to what your intentions are.

* No. 289. † Nos. 288 and 282.

In my opinion it is absolutely essential that Dominions Prime Ministers should meet in London next year.

We ought not, in fact, we dare not, allow ourselves to drift along. The necessity for a clear understanding—policy—call it what you will, on certain matters vitally affecting Empire, is urgent and obvious. We must at least try to evolve some workable scheme re foreign policy. The Dominions now are asserting themselves in a way—e.g., Canadian appointment at Washington—that may lead us anywhere. Then again the British Government shapes its foreign policy in main without consultation with or even notification to Dominions, whose very existence may be vitally affected thereby, e.g., Egypt, India.

I know, of course, the difficulties in the way of a common foreign policy are most formidable; the idea of an Imperial Parliament is chimerical, and in any case the Dominions would not look at it. I think, however, a working understanding would be possible, and machinery could be devised to make this practicable.

Of course, there are very many other questions to be considered besides relations with foreign countries, e.g., Empire shipping, trade resources, wireless defence—quotas for naval defence in particular—the British Empire is confronted by a host of enemies. Britain herself must fight for her trade and financial as well as national supremacy. We must circumvent our enemies. Empire problems are many and complex—they clamour for settlement, and I feel quite sure that as time goes on a solution will be less easy. I most earnestly recommend that you call a meeting of the Dominion Prime Ministers next year in London—say about June.

Delay for another year is most dangerous. For one thing Australia cannot be represented in 1922 as an election will then be in sight.

May I then ask you to make such arrangements as will ensure a meeting of the Prime Ministers next year? You are passing through most troublous days. The Irish question, industrial upheaval, trade and financial difficulties with which you are grappling, are simply appalling, but I feel sure you will win through. Kindest regards. Reply.—HUGHES.

13TH OCTOBER. Secret. Following from Mr. Lloyd George for your Prime Minister. Begins: I have been anxious for some time that we should renew that personal consultation between Prime Ministers which was productive of such good results in the last two years of the War and at Paris. I fully realize that the British Government, in the absence of such consultation and of some machinery for giving it more continuity, must inevitably tend to take upon itself the responsibility for settling the many urgent questions of foreign policy which arise from day to day, and which require immediate decision, but which yet often involve consequences by which the whole Empire is vitally affected. This I feel to be fair neither to the Dominions nor to the British Government. I know, also, that there are many other matters of common interest which call for consultation and decision.

I have received from the Prime Minister of Australia a telegram* in which similar views are expressed, and he urges that a meeting of the Imperial Cabinet should be held next year.

* No. 300.

I would, therefore, suggest that we should hold a meeting of the Imperial Cabinet not later than June next year on the lines of the Imperial War Cabinet meetings in 1917-18. At such a meeting we could as far as possible clear the decks of the more urgent problems which will have accumulated, and we could try to devise some practical working method for arriving at a common Imperial policy in foreign affairs. The composition, agenda, and meeting place of the Constitutional Conference, which it was contemplated in 1917 should be held immediately after the War, but which I incline to think could hardly be held with advantage till public opinion in the Empire has had time to give somewhat more attention to the whole problem, could also be discussed.

Will you please let me know whether you can attend such a meeting of the Imperial Cabinet, and whether the approximate date which I have suggested would be convenient to you? Ends.—MILNER.

23RD OCTOBER. With reference to your telegram of 13th October,* I am asked by my Prime Minister to say, for the information of Mr. Lloyd George, that owing to the fear that at any time an industrial upheaval may occur, Mr. Massey thinks at present that it will be almost impossible for him to leave New Zealand during next year. The Attorney-General (Sir Francis Bell) proposes to visit England early next year, and it could no doubt be arranged for him to act. The Prime Minister considers that he is well qualified capably to represent New Zealand either at the Imperial Conference, if held, or at meetings of the Imperial Cabinet. Sir James Allen is also fully qualified; in this respect there should therefore be no difficulty so far as the representation of this Dominion is concerned. Prime Minister will be better able to judge later on of the position, and will definitely advise me then.—JELlicoe.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE (JUNE, 1921.)

COMMANDER OLIVER LOCKER-LAMPSON asked the Prime Minister whether it is intended to summon an Imperial Conference next year; and, if so, upon what date.

THE PRIME MINISTER, in reply, said: I have been anxious for some time past to renew as soon as possible that personal consultation between Prime Ministers which produced such good results in the last two years of the War and at Paris. I recently made inquiries of my colleagues in the Dominions as to the date which would be most generally suitable for them, and I am glad to say that a meeting with the Prime Ministers of the Empire has been arranged for the middle of June, 1921.

* No. 298.

MR. BONAR LAW, in reply, said: As there appears to have been some misunderstanding of the answer given to the honourable and gallant Member for Huntingdonshire on 11th November, I should like to explain that the meeting of Prime Ministers summoned for June, 1921, will be a meeting on the lines of the Imperial War Cabinet meetings, which took place in 1917 and 1918, to deal with the many urgent problems of common interest which call for the co-ordination of policy and action by the different Governments of the Empire. It will not be the special Constitutional Conference contemplated by Resolution IX of the Imperial War Conference, 1917. The agenda will, of course, be a matter for subsequent settlement with the Dominion Ministers. There is general agreement that Imperial defence matters will require joint examination in the near future, but I am not yet in a position to say precisely what arrangements will be made for their discussion.

MAJOR O'NEILL: Are we to understand from the right honourable gentleman that the very important question of the readjustment of the constitutional relations between different parts of the Empire will be debarred from being discussed at the forthcoming Conference?

MR. BONAR LAW: No, Sir. We have been in negotiation with the Dominions on this matter. There has been a good deal of interest in regard to it, and there is a general feeling that it would not be right to press it at present.

26TH FEBRUARY. Secret. Meetings of Prime Ministers next June. His Majesty's Government have had under examination question of Agenda, and it appears to them that following subjects are of first importance:—(1) Renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, see my Secret despatch Dominions No. 197, of 10th May,† and connected correspondence. (2) Naval, Military, and Air Defence. (3) Arrangements for securing a Common Imperial Policy in Foreign Affairs. (4) The composition, meeting place, and agenda of the Constitutional Conference contemplated in Resolution IX of Imperial War Conference, 1917.‡

* No. 314. † No. 266 in Dominions No. 75. ‡ See page XIII. in Dominions No. 62.

As in case of sessions of Imperial War Cabinet, 1917 and 1918, it is also proposed that opening meetings should include statements as to general position on the main issues of foreign and Imperial policy by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and other Ministers concerned.

Question of Inter-Imperial Communications by Land and Sea has been proposed by Australia, and "Position of British Indians in other parts of Empire" by India in addition to above subjects. I have suggested inclusion in former of Communications by Air.

Other matters which will or may require discussion are:—

- (a) The recommendations of the Oversea Settlement Conference recently held in London.
- (b) Development of Civil Aviation.
- (c) Reports of the Imperial Shipping Committee appointed as a result of Resolutions XI and XXIV* of the Imperial War Conference, 1918.
- (d) Findings of Technical Commission appointed in connexion with Imperial Wireless Scheme; see my telegram of 21st January, 1921.†
- (e) Reparation (division of any amount received between various parts of British Empire in particular).
- (f) Imperial Statistical Bureau.
- (g) Imperial Patents.

If your Prime Minister has any subjects not included in above list to suggest, we should be grateful if he would telegraph them and also furnish, as soon as possible, explanatory memoranda.

Memoranda on all questions named above, except those proposed by Australia and India, are being prepared here and they will be despatched as soon as ready.

It is suggested that, as questions of Defence and Civil Aviation both seem likely to need a good deal of detailed examination with Departments here, any expert advisers on these subjects required by your Prime Minister should reach United Kingdom, if possible, three weeks before commencement of actual meetings.

SIR H. BRITAIN asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he is able to give the House the date for the opening of the Imperial Conference?

THE UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES (Mr. E. Meetings will begin about the middle of June. With regard to subjects to be discussed, the most important will be the question of the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, certain defence questions, arrangements for securing a common Imperial policy in foreign affairs, and the question of the composition, meeting place, and agenda of the Constitutional Conference contemplated in Resolution IX of the Imperial War Conference of 1917.

MR. ALFRED T. DAVIES asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the business of the forthcoming Imperial Cabinet in London has been arranged; what are the subjects for discussion; and on which will definite decisions be taken?

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES (Mr. Churchill): The Prime Ministers are alone competent to decide the business with which they will deal at their forthcoming meeting, but certain proposals on the subject have been made, the more important of which were stated in reply to a question in this House on 28th April.* I cannot undertake to forecast what action will ultimately be taken.

EARL WINTERTON: Is it intended to inform the House at all of any questions which are to be discussed, and does the right hon. Gentleman not think that this House would be abrogating its functions if it does not have an opportunity of discussing them?

MR. CHURCHILL: I will consider whether the suggested agenda, the draft agenda, can be laid before the House. Of course, I could not guarantee that it would be exhaustive, because there might be topics discussed which, perhaps, it would be better not to announce, though matters of public interest.

EARL WINTERTON: Would the right honourable Gentleman consider whether all questions to be publicly discussed at the Conference could be stated to this House beforehand, and that, if possible, the House be given an opportunity of expressing its views?

THE PRIME MINISTER: If there is a general desire in the House for a discussion, I should be willing to try and arrange it, but unless more precise indications are given of the matter or matters which it is desired to discuss, it would seem useless to give a day.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE: Will the right honourable Gentleman follow the example of the Prime Ministers in the self-governing Dominions where, in each case, the Prime Minister himself made a statement as to the business to be examined and discussed at the Conference?

IMPERIAL CABINET.

MR. HURD asked the Prime Minister whether, seeing that the term Imperial Cabinet, as officially applied to the forthcoming gathering of Empire statesmen in London, implies collective executive powers, and seeing that General Smuts has declared the term to be a complete misnomer, and that this gathering is purely advisory in character as regards the Dominion and Indian representatives who attend, he will, in order to avoid misapprehension overseas, call it an Imperial Cabinet Conference?

THE PRIME MINISTER: I propose to discuss with the other Prime Ministers how the forthcoming Conference should be described.

MR. HURD: What are we to call it in the meantime?

THE PRIME MINISTER: Simply call it a conference.

"That, while recognizing the necessity of co-operation among the various portions of the Empire to provide such Naval Defence as may prove to be essential for security, and while holding that equality with the naval strength of any other Power is a minimum standard for that purpose, this Conference is of opinion that the method and expense of such co-operation are matters for the final determination of the several parliaments concerned, and that any recommendations thereon should be deferred until after the coming Conference on Disarmament."

SECTION VII (a)—IMPERIAL AIR COMMUNICATIONS.

The Conference having carefully considered the Report* of the expert Sub-Committee on Imperial Communications are of the opinion that the proposals contained therein should be submitted for the consideration of the Governments and Parliaments of the different parts of the Empire.

On the understanding that the cost involved will be in the region of £1,800 per month they recommend that, pending such consideration, the existing material, so far as useful for the development of Imperial Air Communications, should be retained.

[My Lord,] [Sir,]

Downing Street, 5th September, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the consideration of your Ministers, copies of the Report* of the Imperial Air Communications Committee, which was submitted to the recent Conference of Prime Ministers and representatives of the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India.

2. This Report has been reprinted, for convenience of reference, from the Parliamentary Paper ([Cmd. 1474]) entitled "Conference of Prime Ministers and Representatives of the United Kingdom and the Dominions and India—Summary of Proceedings and Documents," which was enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 335 of the 19th August.†

3. The Resolution adopted by the Conference was in the following terms:—
"The Conference, having carefully considered the report of the expert Sub-Committee on Imperial Communications, are of opinion that the proposals contained therein should be submitted for the consideration of the Governments and Parliaments of the different parts of the Empire.

"On the understanding that the cost involved will be in the region of £1,800 per month they recommend that, pending such consideration, the existing material, as far as useful for the development of Imperial Air Communications, should be retained."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OFFICIAL REPORT. 16TH AUGUST, 1921.

HOWDEN, PULHAM, AND CROYDON AERODROMES

VISCOUNT CURZON asked the Secretary of State for Air whether it is the intention of the Government to dispense with the aerodromes, sheds, and all gear now at Howden, Pulham, and Croydon in connexion with the handling of airships should the ships themselves be disposed of; and whether any use is made of the aerodromes pending the Empire decision?

Captain Guest: The reply to the first part of the question is that Howden will be given up, as it is not considered that it would be necessary to a future airship undertaking; that Pulham will be placed in charge of a care and maintenance party pending the result of the deliberations of the Dominion Governments, when, if the result is unfavourable, it will be disposed of; and that Croydon will be retained permanently as an aerodrome, the airship appliances being temporarily stored. The reply to the second part is in the negative so far as the Air Ministry is concerned, except for the tests which remain to be carried out in connexion with R 38.

13TH DECEMBER. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Following motion carried unanimously by Senate and House of Representatives prior to close of Session on 10th December:—

"That this House, recognizing the vital importance to the British Empire of aerial communication views with concern the prospect of the abandonment of the proposals for the establishment of an Imperial Airship Service, and expresses the earnest hope that the period during which the airships and other existing material will be available will be extended, in order that Parliament may have an opportunity for discussing proposals to co-operate with Great Britain and with the other Dominions for the establishment of an Imperial Air Service."

I regret that pressure of other important public business precluded an opportunity for discussing inter-Empire airship communication before the close of the Session, but I do most strongly urge that your Government will accede to the request of the Commonwealth Parliament and extend the period, and that the airships, etc., be not scrapped or plant and experts dispersed until the Parliament of the Commonwealth and other Dominions have an opportunity of fully considering the scheme. Ends.

My Ministers represent that this matter is one of great interest to Department of Naval Service in that there is at the present moment considerable agitation for establishment of high-power radio station on Pacific coast to provide communication with Orient owing to delays on cables. Several months ago Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada, Limited, filed application with that Department for licence to instal and operate medium-power station in British Columbia to communicate with San Francisco station of trans-Pacific chain of their affiliated American Company. This application was refused by Department of Naval Service on ground that it merely provided duplication of existing telegraph routes to San Francisco, and would in no way assist in relieving cable congestion to Orient. Company now advise that they propose to file in the immediate future application for licence to instal and operate trans-Pacific station to work directly with corresponding station in Japan, and it is understood that they are in negotiation with Government of Japan with a view to obtaining licence for latter station, or, failing this, working arrangement under which Government of Japan station will handle their traffic. Matter for establishment of high-power station on Pacific coast for naval work has been before Department of Naval Service for several years and need for same is apparent. Expense, however, of establishing and operating such station is considerable, and unless station can be used for commercial purposes and sufficient revenue messages were in sight to pay major portion of operating expenses it would be difficult to justify necessary expenditure. Department of Naval Service accordingly await with interest report of Committee. In the meantime will be glad to know if you are of opinion that Department should refrain from taking action in matter of granting licence to Marconi Company pending receipt of Committee's recommendations.—DEVONSHIRE.

Your despatch 3rd July, Dominions No. 274, and your telegram 11th August,‡ Imperial Wireless Committee, 1919-1920:—

First, New Zealand Government concurs in general principles of the scheme outlined in report.

Secondly, the existing New Zealand and Australian wireless stations referred to in the report (page 9) are designed largely to meet strategic emergencies, and are not adequately equipped for inter-colonial commercial work, or to compete with the submarine cable services operating between New Zealand and Australia, even though such competition were desirable or necessary.

Thirdly, from report it apparently follows that unless a New Zealand and an Australian station, say Awarua and Pennant Hills, be modernized as valve stations of the class proposed for the Imperial chain, and be devoted by mutual consent to the conduct of inter-colonial wireless traffic, there is no indication that New Zealand has been considered as a possible link in the proposed chain. Even though proposed scheme be modified to include New Zealand, in this way New Zealand would be the last link in the chain, and traffic between New Zealand and European centres would, as a natural consequence, be subject to a maximum delay, and this it is feared to such an extent as to render service unsatisfactory and unreliable from New Zealand's point of view.

Fourthly, apart from foregoing it is not apparent from the report proposed inclusion of New Zealand as a link in the Imperial chain of wireless communication is considered practicable or probable.

Fifthly, it is suggested as a practical alternative that when sufficient experience of the working of proposed valve stations has been obtained the possibilities of a wireless route from New Zealand to Canada and the United Kingdom via Awarua (New Zealand), Apia (Samoa), and Honolulu might well receive consideration as affording a more direct route and a greater probability of a satisfactory commercial service. The Awarua and Apia stations would under such a scheme require modernizing as already indicated. For strategic purposes in time of war the existing wireless service between New Zealand and Australia would still remain.—STOUT.

The substance of the first paragraph of this letter I telegraphed to Your Lordship on the 10th instant.‡

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 347.

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS to GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR,

Ottawa, 9th December, 1920.

With reference to the Secret telegram to His Excellency from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, asking for the views of the Canadian Government on the recommendations contained in the report of the Imperial Wireless Telegraphy Committee, I have the honour to state that the Department of the Naval Service which is in control of wireless telegraphy in the Dominion has reported that the only point in which Canada is interested would appear to be Recommendation No. 5: "That similar communication be established by valve stations between England and

* Nos. 341 and 340.

† No. 347.

‡ No. 346.

Canada, subject to decision in conference between the Imperial and Canadian Governments," and that Canada is quite prepared to discuss this proposal with the Imperial authorities.

As regards the issue of licences for radio stations in the Dominion to provide communication with foreign countries, it is proposed to continue to consider each application for licence on its merits.

The Department of Militia and Defence, which has also examined the proposals, highly recommends the system of communication suggested, that is, the generation of continuous wave radio telegraphic energy by means of thermionic valves, not only for the recommendations so excellently summed up in this report, but also on account of the fact that this system, which was so extensively developed during the late War for general Army purposes, is the only system of radio-communication to be employed in connexion with the post bellum Army of the Empire.

Further, the art of radio-telephony, which is now becoming of so much importance, is intimately bound up with the development of the thermionic valve generator.

It is considered that when the report is being discussed in detail, and the question of communication between England and Canada comes up for consideration, it will be necessary, also, to consider the problem of trans-continental communication for Canada, in order to obtain the fullest possible use from the Canadian terminal station. In order to put such a system of communication on a business basis, it is essential that all stations be kept continuously busy handling paying messages. This will necessitate the Canadian terminal station being employed for communication both with England and elsewhere.

At the present time there are no inland stations in Canada operating on the continuous wave principle. The larger patterns of Army radio-telegraph and telephone sets, now coming out from England for use in the various military districts, are of sufficient range, and of the proper type, to be incorporated in any Canadian trans-continental radio scheme.

It is further pointed out that up to the present radio-communication in Canada has been under the Naval Department, and is almost entirely concerned with navigation on the Great Lakes and on Canadian coastal waters, but that now since this report of the Imperial Committee brings forward the whole question of internal radio communication in Canada, it is felt that the Department of Militia and Defence should be in a position to keep in the closest touch with this development. This would be particularly desirable in case of a general or sympathetic strike among telegraph and telephone operators, when that Department would, as in previous instances, at once be called upon to supply some means of communication between the various Military District Headquarters. Therefore, it is considered that the Department of Militia and Defence should be represented on the Committee referred to in sections 5 and 6, page 28, of the above mentioned report.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to communicate the substance of the foregoing to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 428/22.]

(No. 378.)

Sir,

Downing Street, 19th November, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Royal Highness's despatch No. 390, of the 10th June,† as to the Windhuk Wireless Telegraph Station. Dr. van der Byl's report was duly communicated to the Wireless Telegraphy Commission, and I now transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a report by the Commission as to the possibilities of utilizing Windhuk as the African terminal station of the Imperial Wireless Chain.

2. Since the discussion at the Conference of Prime Ministers and Representatives of the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India as to the Imperial Wireless Chain, and the Resolution there passed (see page 6 of [Cmd. 1474]), it has been decided that the Postmaster-General shall assume more direct responsibility for the construction of those stations of the Chain for which His Majesty's Government is responsible, and shall act as Chairman of the Commission of experts.

3. The present position is that there is an arc station already working at Oxford (Leafeld) capable of communicating with Cairo, and it is hoped that the corresponding station in Egypt will be ready by the end of the year. The designs for other stations have not yet been finally settled, and it is understood that the Wireless Telegraphy Commission is still engaged in the study of alternative systems of transmission. It is expected that they will shortly furnish a report on this aspect of the matter, which will, of course, be communicated to your Ministers at once.

4. The Commission has just sent out to Egypt two officers lent by the Admiralty, Commander E. C. Watson, R.N., and Major E. H. Ward, R.M.A., who will carry out preliminary tests there. These officers, after completing their work in Egypt, will probably visit Kenya in order to carry out receiving tests and consult with the Governor as to the site of the station, and it has been suggested that they should then proceed to South Africa in order to carry out similar tests and to consult with the advisers of the Union Government (see in this connexion my despatch No. 153, of 5th May‡). I should be glad to know by telegram whether your Ministers would now agree to a visit to South Africa by Commander Watson and Major Ward. If so, His Majesty's Government would be grateful if the Union Government could arrange to waive the Customs duties payable on any apparatus and equipment that these officers may bring.

I have, &c.,
WINSTON S. CHURCHILL.

Enclosure in No. 351.

REPORT ON WINDHUK AS THE TERMINAL STATION OF THE AFRICAN CHAIN.

At the Twenty-First Meeting of the Wireless Telegraphy Commission, Lieut.-Col. Harrison, representing the Government of the Union of South Africa, suggested that the Commission should make estimates of the comparative expenditure involved in establishing the South African terminal station of the Imperial Wireless Chain at Windhuk or Johannesburg. Accordingly the Commission have studied the possible alternatives in the manner of equipping and siting the terminal station, and have prepared a tabular statement of the capital cost and annual charges for several of these alternatives.

It will be understood that the estimates now put forward are liable to adjustment in consequence of the fluctuations in the prices of machinery and materials and in the cost of labour. The relative magnitudes, however, of the various sums may be regarded as trustworthy guides in spite of these fluctuations.

The alternatives which have been considered are as follows:—

(a) Utilize the Windhuk masts, buildings, and machinery, re-equip for quenched spark, arrange for duplexing, and erect a new land line to Johannesburg.

(b) The same as (a) except that instead of a land line small wireless stations be erected at Windhuk and Johannesburg for the transmission of messages.

(c) Utilize the Windhuk masts, buildings, and machinery, equip as a thermionic valve station, and erect a new land line to Johannesburg.

(d) The same as (c) except that instead of a land line small wireless stations be erected at Windhuk and Johannesburg for the transmission of messages.

(e) Erect the Imperial Chain station at Johannesburg.

The letters in the left-hand column of the following table have the significations just explained.

Capital Cost.		Annual Charges		Remarks
(a) Quenched spark	6,000	Engineering Expenses	30,000	* Very uncertain
Duplexing	13,000	Operating costs (Windhuk and Johannesburg)	24,000
Lines for Retransmission	30,000	Line Maintenance*	6,000
Residences	25,000
Total	74,000	Total	60,000
(b) Quenched spark	6,000	Engineering Expenses	36,000
Duplexing	13,000	Operating costs (Windhuk and Johannesburg)	32,000
Wireless Retransmission	70,000
Residences	25,000
Total	114,000	Total	68,000
(c) Thermionic Plant	20,000	Engineering Expenses	30,000	* Very uncertain
Duplexing	13,000	Operating costs (Windhuk and Johannesburg)	24,000
Lines for Retransmission	80,000	Line Maintenance*	6,000
Residences	25,000
Total	88,000	Total	80,000
(d) Thermionic Plant	20,000	Engineering Expenses	36,000
Duplexing	13,000	Operating costs (Windhuk and Johannesburg)	32,000
Wireless Retransmission	70,000
Residences	25,000
Total	£128,000	Total	£68,000

Capital Cost.	Annual Charges.	Remarks
£	£
(a) Duplex Thermionisation at Johannesburg using public electricity supply ... 118,000	Engineering Expenses ... 15,000 Operating costs ... 16,000	All operating done from room in Johannesburg Central Post Office.
Total £118,000	Total £31,000
Add cost of Site if no Government land available within 50 miles of city.

In the above estimates salaries and wages and costs of engineering supplies have been assumed the same at Windhuk and Johannesburg.

From the telegraphic traffic point of view the advantages are overwhelmingly with Johannesburg. In the first place, Johannesburg is the commercial centre of the Union, and is only thirty-six miles from Pretoria. Therefore, retransmission of messages would be reduced to a minimum. In the second place, very good open wire communication with other important points of the Union already exists. Further, the concentration of staff obtained by operating directly from the Johannesburg Central Post Office is an economy. As regards staffing the stations, there is considerable difficulty in the case of Windhuk and none at Johannesburg.

If Windhuk were utilized as the terminal station, practically all messages would have double transmission: this leads to delays and mistakes. If land lines were used stoppages lasting many hours might be only too frequent in view of the fact that the pole route traverses several hundred miles of desert.

If Windhuk were not utilized as the terminal chain station it might still be equipped to perform useful services as a part of the internal communication system of the Union.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Sent 12.45 p.m., 19th December, 1921.)

TELEGRAM.

REPORTED in Press that Commonwealth Parliament has referred to Joint Committee of both Houses two proposals of private Companies for direct wireless communication between Australia and United Kingdom.

His Majesty's Government earnestly hope that Commonwealth Government will defer decision on these schemes pending consideration of report of Wireless Telegraphy Commission (see my telegram of 21st January*), which has been just completed, and will be sent to you within next few days.

As present policy here is to maintain Imperial wireless communications in Government hands, His Majesty's Government would be considerably embarrassed by application from private company for erection of special station in this country for direct communication with Australian station. On the other hand, if it were found necessary to refuse licence to private company, His Majesty's Government might find it difficult themselves to erect corresponding station here in addition to Imperial Chain Station. Their experts are confident that thermionic valve stations proposed for chain would be powerful enough to ensure direct communication between United Kingdom and Australia for several hours per diem.

Should your Ministers desire further information as to position, His Majesty's Government would gladly arrange for discussion between Wireless Telegraphy Commission and any experts nominated by Commonwealth Government.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

(Paraphrase.)

WITH reference to your telegram of 18th October,† a long letter from Ministers, and a somewhat blunt letter from Mr. Coaker, have been received by me, in which they ask to be informed in what way the Imperial Government's policy could be affected by the proposed agreement with Marconi Company of Canada, the main point of which is given in my telegram of 12th October* and in a despatch which I sent you 26th October.‡ Letter explains that Ministers desire to secure additional means of communication with the United Kingdom and the neighbouring continent and the benefit which should accrue from Government control of such services. At the present time there is but one channel of cable communication, viz., by the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, from which practically no revenue is got by this Government.

† No. 354.

‡ No. 356.

Ministers have kept in mind the desire of His Majesty's Government in relation to retaining, as far as possible, freedom of action in making wireless agreements, and they urge that proposed contract, limited in scope, is merely intended to meet present conditions.

Ministers further ask whether it is true that His Majesty's Government have purchased cable of the Direct Cable Company, and, if so, what privileges, and on what terms, His Majesty's Government could offer to Government of Newfoundland in respect of commercial business with United Kingdom and neighbouring continent in relation to use of said cable.

I suggest that there is no objection, provided that I obtain promise of delay in the other matters, to arranging at once for the new direction-finding station at Signal Hill.—HARRIS.

MY LORD,

Government House, St. John's, 26th October, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 18th instant,* in reply to my telegram of the 12th instant,† inquiring whether the contract which my Ministers had proposed to make with the Marconi Company of Canada conflicts with any general rights of the Admiralty or the policy of His Majesty's Government.

2. I have sent down your telegram for the consideration of Ministers, informing them that on perusal of its contents I presume that they will concur in my not now signing the Agreement, which is in any case subject to ratification by the Legislature.

3. I had received no intimation of the intention to make an agreement with the Marconi Company, though I was aware that there were projects for improving the system of directional wireless telegraphy as an important aid to navigation in these dangerous waters. The Agreement, however, which was suddenly brought up to me for signature, went far beyond anything of that sort; besides providing for the addition of another directional wireless station it contemplated connecting up the whole of the telegraph system of Newfoundland with those of the outside world by means of two great wireless stations, one at Witless Bay, not far from Mount Pearl and St. John's, and the other at Grand Falls. Further, the Agreement proposed to give the Marconi Company a monopoly of ten years from the present date, which in effect extended the present monopoly under the Wireless Telegraph Act of 1906, 6 Edward VII, ch. 9, for a further four years.

4. I may add that I inquired of the authorities at Mount Pearl whether the large stations which are proposed were likely to jam Mount Pearl, and found that there was no doubt whatever that they would.

I have, &c.,

(No. 209.)

MY LORD,

Government House, St. John's, 16th November, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 15th instant,* on the subject of the Agreement with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada, and in accordance with your request to transmit a copy of the Agreement which Ministers submitted for my signature.

2. After sending my despatch No. 190, of the 26th October,† I received a formal letter from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is at present my chief adviser, urging that the Government could not delay the work under the contract, and suggesting that, if necessary, a clause should be added providing that nothing contained in the Agreement should interfere with an Imperial or Inter-Imperial arrangement which would embrace the Empire and link up Newfoundland in a wireless Empire system. Immediately afterwards I received a formal letter, written by direction of Ministers at the instance of the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, urging that they would be glad to receive any information as quickly as possible, and explaining that the desire of Ministers is to provide additional means of communication with the United Kingdom and the neighbouring continent, and to secure to the Government of this Colony the benefits which would accrue from Government control of such services. The material part of the letter is covered by the enclosed extract.

3. Later, Mr. Coaker, in discussing this and other matters, urged that we should try and get on as soon as possible with the direction-finding station at Signal Hill, and that it is desirable to do this even if some special reservation is made in the agreement.

I have, &c.,

C. ALEXANDER HARRIS.

27. For the purpose of ascertaining the damage that may be occasioned to any person or corporation whose interest in any lands or tenements may be in any way affected under the preceding section, the Company shall appoint one arbitrator, the person interested in the said land another, and the two arbitrators so appointed shall appoint a third or umpire; and in the event of the person so interested in the land failing so to appoint an arbitrator after seven clear days' notice so to do, then the Company may apply to the Supreme Court or a Judge thereof, who shall, after due notice to the said person interested in the land, appoint such arbitrator, and the arbitrators so appointed by the Company and the Court or Judge shall thereupon appoint a third arbitrator, and if the said two arbitrators shall refuse or neglect to appoint such third arbitrator after seven clear days' notice from the Company so to do, the Supreme Court or a Judge thereof shall on the application of the Company appoint such third arbitrator, and the award of such arbitrators or any two of them, shall be final and binding between the parties.

30. In consideration of the Company's undertakings herein the Government undertakes to pay to the Company the sum of Four Thousand Dollars ($4,000-00) per annum.

Enclosure 2 in No. 358.

(Extract.)

Sir, Department of Colonial Secretary,
St. John's, Newfoundland, 29th October, 1920.

YOUR EXCELLENCY'S Ministers have noticed lately in the public Press a statement that His Majesty's Government had purchased the cable of the Direct Cable Company. It is presumed that this is the line coming from Canada, landing at Harbour Grace and proceeding thence to the United Kingdom. In view of the desire of His Majesty's Government that we defer action in relation to the proposed Wireless Agreement as above set forth, Ministers would be glad to learn what privileges in respect of commercial business with the United Kingdom and the neighbouring continent His Majesty's Government could offer the Government of this Colony in relation to the use of the said cable, and upon what terms.

In view of the fact that for a period of some months negotiations have been in progress with the Marconi Wireless Company, resulting in the present draft agreement, and that Ministers are anxious that as soon as possible some satisfactory arrangement may be made, either by wireless or by cable, to meet the pressing conditions here, Your Excellency's Ministers would be glad if this matter could be given prompt attention, and communication respecting the same sent by wire to the Secretary of State, whose reply would also be cabled.

One of the pressing matters is that of the direction-finding station at Signal Hill, and Ministers are anxious to proceed with this at the earliest possible moment. It may be that the Secretary of State would have no objection to this feature of the Agreement being adopted at once.

I have, &c.,
ARTHUR MEWS,
Deputy Colonial Secretary.

His Excellency
Sir C. Alexander Harris, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O.,

TELEGRAM.

24TH DECEMBER. Your telegram 30th October, your telegram 17th December;† proposed Marconi Agreement. No objection to arrangements being made at once for new direction-finding station, Signal Hill, provided you are able to obtain promise of delay in other matters. Terms of draft agreement enclosed in your despatch of 16th November, No. 209,‡ now being examined, and views His Majesty's Government will be telegraphed as soon as possible.

As regards cable communication, position is that Direct United States Company's cable has been purchased by His Majesty's Government in order to provide for increase of traffic by Imperial cable. Trans-Atlantic section of former cable lands Newfoundland, but is worked direct from London to Halifax by means of Halifax-Harbour Grace section, station at latter being used for relaying only. Hence impracticable at present to arrange for transmission or reception of Newfoundland telegrams at Harbour Grace. Working of cable at present being continued by Western Union Company under six months' lease, terminable at end of that period by three months' notice. Arrangements to be made when working of cable taken over by General Post Office under consideration, and hoped that it may be possible to afford additional facilities as regards telegrams between Newfoundland and United Kingdom.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

MY LORD,

Government House, St. John's, 21st December, 1920.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 209, of 16th November,‡ transmitting a copy of the proposed new Agreement with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada, I have the honour to state that my Ministers, at a Council meeting which was held at Government House on the 17th instant, expressed some annoyance and irritation at the delay which has occurred in this matter. In particular the Minister of Justice observed that he could have explained matters if only he had been brought into consultation while he was still in England, and complained that he had been placed in a false position.

* Nos. 355 and 358.

† Nos. 355 and 359.

‡ No. 358.

2. Although it is necessary to obtain the approval of the Legislature before the Agreement can become operative, my Ministers had apparently intended to push on with certain local works contemplated by the agreement, and they now desire me to urge that they are entitled to know at least whether there is any definite Imperial interest involved which will be likely to be affected by their action.

3. The most important statement at the Council was made by the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, who pointed out that he was particularly interested in a statement in the public Press that His Majesty's Government had purchased the cable of the Direct Cable Company, and this might be utilized to satisfy the needs of Newfoundland to a very large extent without the large schemes contemplated in the proposed Wireless Agreement. His view was that at present Newfoundland was losing a very large amount of revenue over telegraph business, and that the proposed Agreement, or something in lieu of it, was likely to remedy this; therefore, from the point of view of the local Government, the matter had become a somewhat urgent matter of finance.

TELEGRAM.

22ND JANUARY. In continuation of my telegram 24th December,* on examination of proposed Agreement† with Marconi, His Majesty's Government observe that Imperial interests will be affected in following respects:—

(1) Company will have full and complete monopoly over all wireless in Newfoundland, and in connexion therewith, except purely Government wireless traffic.

(2) Whoever in future maintains present Admiralty Wireless Station at St. John's (sometimes referred to as Mount Pearl Wireless Station) will be prevented from handling commercial work, thus practically rendering the station of no value in peace time.

(3) Company will be in a position to refuse to co-operate with Imperial Chain Stations, or to allow any such stations to be erected in Newfoundland.

In view of above considerations of Imperial policy, His Majesty's Government hope that your Government will grant no complete monopoly, as forecasted in paragraph 21 of the Agreement, without safeguarding itself with regard to future Imperial schemes and the right of a Government station (e.g., St. John's) to handle commercial or other traffic as desired from time to time. Desirable also that there should be stipulation requiring observance of regulations of International Telegraph Convention. No objection to a private company erecting and working direction-finding or ship-to-shore stations provided they observe the regulations of the International Telegraph Convention, and will link up with Imperial scheme at later date if required.

As regards question of improving cable facilities for business with United Kingdom and neighbouring continent, His Majesty's Government would suggest most effective means of improving cable facilities between Newfoundland and Europe would be by extending the Port-aux-Basques-Canso cable to Halifax, as suggested in my Confidential despatch of 30th October, 1919.‡ Such a cable might be used not only for trans-Atlantic traffic, but also (by arrangement with the Canadian land line authorities) for traffic between Newfoundland and Canada. His Majesty's Government will be glad to learn whether it is not possible to adopt this course. Should your Government not be prepared to consider it possibly some relief could be afforded by taking off local messages at relay station on United Kingdom-Halifax line at Harbour Grace, although that would not be so satisfactory a solution as extension of Port-aux-Basques-Canso cable to Halifax.—MILNER.

SIR, Government House, St. John's, 4th July, 1921.
 REFERRING to my Confidential despatch of the 21st December, 1920,* on the subject of the proposed agreement with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada, I have the honour to enclose an extract from the Evening Telegram of the 28th ultimo containing certain criticisms on the failure of the Government to proceed with it.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

THE Government accused the Board of Trade last year as not being fit for a fourth class form, but the tables can be turned on the Government with far greater truth, when we look for a brief moment at the way the present incompetents are handling such an important matter as the Telegraph question. The life of our daily papers is to get the best news at the cheapest cost, and therefore we stand to the back of the Council of the Board of Trade in their efforts to get cheaper telegraph rates with foreign countries, which is life blood in extending business connexions.

At the recommendation of the Board of Trade the Government concluded a contract with the Marconi Wireless Company last September for the following:—

- 1st.—Cut Telegraph rates to Europe nearly half.
- 2nd.—Estimated revenue to the Government approximately $60,000.
- 3rd.—Improved Labrador Service with several new stations, and extension to the Moravian settlements.
- 4th.—Erections of Stations on Signal Hill, Bay Bulls, and Grand Falls.
- 5th.—Installing new apparatus for giving steamers their exact position during foggy or bad weather when approaching the coast.
- 6th.—Installing Wireless Telephones similar to experiment on Signal Hill last summer.
- 7th.—New devices for sailing vessels.

These are a few of the projects in view to make Newfoundland one of the main world centres for Wireless Telegraphy. This contract was held up by Governor Harris all winter, and only recently it was found out that a Canadian British Scheme had used their influence to prevent Newfoundland proceeding with this work, because they were afraid it would conflict with a project they had in view for what they called an All British Company to connect the Dominions with England.

Our readers will be astounded when they hear that this All British Empire Wireless Telegraphy was to jump right over Newfoundland and to work from England direct with Canada. Further information has come to light that competent authorities have scrutinized in the minutest way both the plans of the Canadian British Service and that proposed by Newfoundland and they find they do not conflict in any way. With such facts before them any Government of business men would at once insist on the ratification of our Contract by the British authorities, but we find now that the Government appear determined to prevent the Marconi Company from going ahead with this beneficial work, and force this country to continue its present high tariff with the Cable Companies to the disadvantage of everyone who has any business to do.

These facts should be ventilated in the House of Assembly at once.

SIR,

Downing Street, 27th August, 1921.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Confidential despatch of the 4th of July,* relative to the proposed agreement between the Newfoundland Government and the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada.

2. The Postmaster-General, to whom a copy of your despatch was communicated, observes that the objection taken to the draft Agreement in the Post Office was limited to the monopoly provisions of the draft contract, and particularly to the extension of those provisions to the working of high-power stations for communicating with stations outside Newfoundland, in so far as this extension would be likely to embarrass arrangements for linking up the proposed Imperial Wireless Service with Newfoundland. The suggestions in the last two paragraphs of the newspaper extract enclosed in your despatch are not understood in the Post Office, and it is not seen on what grounds exception is taken by the Newfoundland Press to a scheme for "jumping right over" Newfoundland, inasmuch as the working of the contemplated station at Grand Falls would apparently have necessitated traffic between Newfoundland and the United Kingdom being transmitted via Canada in both directions. At the same time, if a station sufficiently powerful to reach this country direct should be erected in Newfoundland, the Postmaster-General sees no reason why a British station should not communicate direct with that station as well as with the proposed Government station in Canada.

3. With regard to the question of improving cable facilities for business with the United Kingdom and the neighbouring continent by the extension of the Port-aux-Basques-Canso cable to Halifax, the Postmaster-General states that the matter has been discussed with the various Telegraph Companies, and the present position explained to Mr. Coaker in a letter dated the 15th July, of which a copy is enclosed. No reply has yet been received from Mr. Coaker.

I have, &c.,

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL.

Enclosure in No. 364.

DEAR MR. COAKER,

General Post Office, London, E.C.1, 15th July, 1921.

WITH reference to our conversation in March last, we sent you a telegram on the 5th instant in the following terms:—

"Our telegram 31st May. Western Union offer provide special line Halifax-Canso reasonable terms. C.P.R. state existing lines capable carrying traffic, thus avoiding expense special line, and suggest contract similar draft furnished Newfoundland Government August, 1919. Unrouted traffic for Europe transferred Imperial-Halifax, allowing four cents Newfoundland Government, four C.P.R., 17 Imperial. McMillan coming London 25th July, take opportunity discuss matter. Please write if desired call attention any point."

The Western Union Company would charge about 8,170 dollars a year for a wire between Halifax and Canso with a further charge of about 5,000 dollars a year for providing and working a repeater at Canso, the latter charge being subject to increase or decrease with any rise or fall in the cost of the service to the Company.

We have just received from the Pacific Cable Board a copy of a letter from Mr. McMillan, of the C.P.R., in which he furnishes particulars of their scheme. A copy of this letter is enclosed. There would be no need to provide a special wire; and, as far as we are in a position to judge at present, the C.P.R. scheme would seem preferable to the other. We should be glad to be favoured informally with your views on the subject.

* No. 363.

By means of either arrangement, the Newfoundland Government and public would be enabled to make use of the Imperial cable, and it would be highly agreeable to us from every point of view if the whole of the "unordered" traffic from Newfoundland for the United Kingdom and Europe were sent by that route. Under the C.P.R. scheme there would also, apparently, be improved facilities for communication between Newfoundland and Canada.

Yours very truly,

F. J. BROWN.

The Hon. W. F. Coaker.

J. Jarand, Esq.,
Superintendent,
Pacific Cable Board.
Montreal.

Canadian Pacific Railway,
Office of the Manager of Telegraphs,
Montreal, 30th June, 1921.

DEAR SIR,

REFERRING to your memorandum of the 27th.

The Canadian Pacific is anxious to complete the contract with the Government of Newfoundland for the handling of all their landline business for points in Canada and the United States. We would also agree that all "unordered" trans-Atlantic traffic from Newfoundland be routed Imperial.

In the draft of the contract we have the following clause:—

"Clause 2.—Receipts on all traffic so exchanged shall be divided as follows: The Government shall be entitled to its tariff rates between Canso and points in Newfoundland, and the Company shall be entitled to the tariff rates of the Company and its connexions between Canso and points outside Newfoundland, provided that the Government shall reimburse the Company for excess tolls which the Company may be obliged to pay a competitor on exchanged traffic for points not reached by the Company or its connexions. Provided, also, that the Company will pay to the Government the Company's proportion of tolls on trans-Atlantic traffic to or from Newfoundland and exchanged with the Commercial Cable Company at Canso."

The clause given you deals with landline traffic except the last clause, where special reference is made to cable traffic. The division of the cable rate of twenty-five cents between Newfoundland and Great Britain was to be twenty-one cents to the Commercial and four cents to the Government of Newfoundland. The reason that the Canadian Pacific is to receive no portion of these tolls is that the Newfoundland Government is to pay the cost of operation at the Canso end of the Newfoundland cable.

Would suggest that the rate from Newfoundland to Great Britain, via Imperial, be twenty-five cents, divided:—

Four cents per word to the Government of Newfoundland,

Four cents per word to the Canadian Pacific,

Seventeen cents per word to the Imperial, on full rate traffic. This suggested rate would give the Canadian Pacific the same rate per word on this traffic that it receives from all Companies on traffic originating in the Eastern Zone. The Canadian Pacific would require to carry this traffic from Canso to Halifax, and we could not agree to accept from the Imperial a lower rate than our contract rate with the Commercial Cable Company.

Would suggest that whatever deferred rate is established between Great Britain and Newfoundland should be the same deferred rate as via other Companies, so that in event of interruptions to the Port-aux-Basque route, the public would pay the same rate and the Government would be enabled to transfer to other Companies without loss.

Would suggest that the division of the cable rate be placed before the Government of Newfoundland, so that they will understand that their proportion of cable traffic will be four cents per word on full rate traffic, whether routed via Imperial or Commercial.

We also emphasize the point that the Canadian Pacific will receive all landline traffic for Canada and the United States.

Yours truly,

J. McMILLAN,
General Manager of Telegraphs.

SIR, Government House, St. John's, 28th November, 1921.

4. As regards your Confidential despatch of the 27th August last* the most practical question raised seems to be that of communication by cable. On this I recently sent for the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs and discussed with him the position of the matter. I gather from him that there is a division in the ranks of Ministers about it. He himself is anxious to carry out an arrangement on the lines of the letter, a copy of which was sent by the Postmaster-General of England and enclosed in your despatch of the 27th August. Apparently, however, the Prime Minister desires to negotiate with the Anglo-American Company. So far, I have been unable to find what reason may be at the back of a negotiation which certainly does not commend itself to the responsible Minister, i.e., of Posts and Telegraphs.

I have, &c.,

SECTION VII (c): IMPERIAL COMMUNICATIONS (SHIPPING).

As regards the Report of the Imperial Shipping Committee on Bills of Lading,* it was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

"The Conference approves the recommendations made in the Report of the Imperial Shipping Committee on the Limitation of Shipowners' Liability by Clauses in Bills of Lading, and recommends the various Governments represented at the Conference to introduce uniform legislation on the lines laid down by the Committee."

A Resolution was also adopted to the effect that, pending the constitution of a permanent Committee on Shipping, the existing Imperial Shipping Committee should continue its inquiries.

The representatives of His Majesty's Government and the Governments of New Zealand and India were ready to agree to a wider resolution recommending the constitution under Royal Charter of a permanent Committee to carry out the duties specified in the Report of the Imperial Shipping Committee dated 3rd June,† viz.:—

(i) To perform such duty as may be entrusted to them under laws in regard to Inter-Imperial Shipping, applicable to the whole or to important parts of the Empire;

(ii) To inquire into complaints in regard to ocean freights and conditions in Inter-Imperial trade or questions of a similar nature referred to them by any of the Governments of the Empire;

(iii) To exercise conciliation between the interests concerned in Inter-Imperial Shipping;

(iv) To promote co-ordination in regard to harbours and other facilities necessary for Inter-Imperial Shipping.

The representative of Canada, however, did not agree to this wider Resolution, and the representatives of the Commonwealth of Australia and the Union of South Africa reserved the matter for further consideration.

The position as regards rebates was discussed and strong representations were made by Dominion Ministers in regard to it, but no resolution was passed, it being understood that the matter is at present under consideration by the Imperial Shipping Committee.

SECTION VII (d): IMPERIAL COMMUNICATIONS
(WIRELESS TELEPHONY)

"That the Radio Research Board be asked to investigate the subject of Wireless Telephony and to report on its development, whether Governmental or private.

"That the Postmaster-General shall supply to the Governments of the Dominions and India technical reports showing its position and possibilities."

Secretariat Note.—No correspondence with the Dominions took place on this subject until 1922.

SECTION VII (e): IMPERIAL COMMUNICATIONS (CABLE AND WIRELESS RATES FOR PRESS MESSAGES).

"The Committee agrees with the Resolution passed at the Second Imperial Press Conference, held at Ottawa in 1920, that any assistance given by the Governments of the Empire towards the reduction of rates for Press services by wireless and cable should appear specifically in the Estimates of Public Expenditure, and should be so directed as not to affect the quality of the news service supplied or the freedom of the newspapers so served.

The Committee is in full sympathy with the object of reducing rates, both by cable and wireless, for press messages, and recommends the most favourable examination by the Governments concerned of any practicable proposals to this end."

Secretariat Note.—See under Resolution IX of the Imperial War Conference, 1918 (page 96 and following of this volume).

SECTION X.: EMPIRE SETTLEMENT AND MIGRATION.

"The Conference having satisfied itself that the proposals embodied in the Report* of the Conference on State-Aided Empire Settlement are sound in principle, and that the several Dominions are prepared, subject to Parliamentary sanction and to the necessary financial arrangements being made, to co-operate effectively with the United Kingdom in the development of schemes based on these proposals, but adapted to the particular circumstances and conditions of each Dominion, approves the aforesaid Report.

The South African representatives wish to make it clear that the limited field for white labour in South Africa will preclude co-operation by the Union Government on the lines contemplated by the other Dominions.

(2) The Conference expresses the hope that the Government of the United Kingdom will, at the earliest possible moment, secure the necessary powers to enable it to carry out its part in any schemes of co-operation which may subsequently be agreed on, preferably in the form of an Act which will make clear that the policy of co-operation now adopted is intended to be permanent.

(3) The Conference recommends to the Governments of the several Dominions that they should consider how far their existing legislation on the subject of land settlement, soldier settlement and immigration, may require any modification or expansion in order to secure effective co-operation; and should work out, for discussion with the Government of the United Kingdom, such proposals as may appear to them most practicable and best suited to their interests and circumstances."

Secretariat Note.—See correspondence printed in Dominions No. 60.

SECTION XI: BRITISH EMPIRE PATENT.

[MY LORD DUKE,] [MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, 20th January, 1920.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a letter from the Board of Trade on the question of the institution of a patent which should be valid throughout the British Empire.

I should be glad if you would invite your Ministers to furnish me with their observations on the proposal.

L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 366.

SIR, Industrial Property Department, Board of Trade,
25, Southampton Buildings, London, W.C.2, 31st December, 1919.

I AM directed by the Board of Trade to say that, from time to time, representations have been made to them as to the desirability of instituting a patent which should be valid throughout the British Empire.

This subject has recently again become prominent in connexion with suggestions for amendments of the patent laws, and the Board are of opinion that the time has now come when the proposal for an Empire patent should be examined in detail in order to ascertain how far such a patent is practicable.

It is thought that the quickest and best method of dealing with the matter would be to submit the proposal to a special conference of representatives of the Patent Offices of His Majesty's Dominions at an early date.

I am accordingly to transmit herewith, for the information of the Secretary of State, copies of a memorandum by the Comptroller-General of Patents upon the subject, and to suggest that, if Lord Milner approves, this memorandum should be circulated to the various Governments of His Majesty's Dominions, who should at the same time be invited to send a representative from each of their respective Patent Offices to a conference on the matter to be held in London in the spring or early summer of 1920.

I have, &c.,
W. TEMPLE FRANKS,
Comptroller.

The Under Secretary of State,
Colonial Office.

"BRITISH EMPIRE PATENT."

Note by the Comptroller of the Patent Office, London.

It is constantly urged that Patents granted in the United Kingdom and the Dominions should be valid throughout the Empire. At the present time, separate patent rights have to be obtained in India and all the self-governing Dominions.

In the Crown Colonies, British patents are for the most part registered, and become valid in the Colony by registration. Under the existing system, all the self-governing Dominions, with the exception of South Africa, make an examination for novelty before the grant of patent rights. This is in addition to the investigation as to whether or not formalities have been properly observed. It is obvious, therefore, that an Empire Patent is practically impossible with the present system, as there is no security that a specification accepted in one country of the Empire will be accepted in another, or that amendment may not be required in each country modifying the original invention claimed. The United Kingdom cannot accept a Canadian or Australian specification without the examination required by the Patents Acts, 1907-19, and without the necessary amendments which may be required. Equally the Dominion Patent Offices will not necessarily grant a patent on a specification accepted in the United Kingdom to which patent rights have been accorded.

If an Empire patent is required, there would appear to be only two practicable methods for attaining the end.

1. The abolition of all local offices and the establishment of one Imperial Office for the receipt of applications for patents, examination and grant. The example often cited is the Patent Office at Washington, which grants patents throughout the United States. The chief objections raised to this proposal are:—

(a) That the United Kingdom and self-governing Dominions will be reluctant to give up their independent Patent Offices and forgo the fees which result from the procedure adopted under their respective laws as at present framed;

(b) There are practical inconveniences in the proposal.

If London were the seat of the Imperial Office it would entail the sending specifications from all the Dominions, and this would cause considerable delay, while the subsequent correspondence in reference to amendments, etc., which would necessarily ensue, might still further increase the difficulties and delay in securing patent rights. Though much can be done by agents on the spot, there are certain matters which must be referred to the inventor himself. It would be difficult to suggest another centre than London, as the United Kingdom patents are, at present, far more numerous, and possibly of greater importance, than the others granted in the Empire.

2. Alternatively the local Patent Offices might be retained both in the United Kingdom and throughout the Empire for the receipt of applications, for examination as to formalities, and for the grant of patent rights, but examination for novelty and power to demand amendments as a result would be abolished. The fees for such locally granted patents would be comparatively small.

In addition to the local offices, a central office for the whole Empire would be established where the locally granted patents would be recorded; all patents so recorded to have prima facie validity throughout the Empire, but the actual rights and scope of each patent to be determined in the Law Courts as and when any dispute arose. The Central Office, however, apart from its duties as a registering office, might be equipped for a search into novelty, and such search should comprise not only the patents of the Empire, but the specifications and publications of all the world. Any inventor who had already obtained a patent in one of the branch offices would have the right, on payment of a substantial fee, to have such search for novelty made in respect of his patent, and the specification amended as a result of the examinations reported. In such a case, the fact of the search having taken place would be recorded on the patent, and it would probably be advisable to have the new specification printed in a different form.

Such an examination would afford a very considerable security to the inventor, and be useful commercially. It would further prevent any necessity for having recourse to the German and American Patent Offices which purport to make universal search. Opposition in the Central Office would also have to be allowed on the part of any prior patentees, etc.

This probably is a more feasible proposal than 1. inasmuch as local rights are not disturbed. Small fees only are payable for an unexamined patent, and a really effective universal search is made for those who desire it on payment of a larger fee.

There is no substantial difference between the procedure and practice in the Dominions and that of the United Kingdom in Patent matters, although there are a few minor divergencies. The establishment of a Central Office would not in any way affect any special local regulations, such as those regarding working, etc., as it would solely be concerned with the examination and search for anticipations, with oppositions and with the grant of a Patent, which would have in consequence a strong presumption of validity throughout the Empire.

The real complaints of inventors in the British Empire are:—

(1) The expenses and difficulty of obtaining patent protection throughout the Empire.

(2) The uncertainty as to the position and validity of his patent in the various parts of the Empire.

The establishment of a Central Office would go some way to meeting these complaints if the local fees were generally reduced. The Central Office might indeed finally become the means of transmitting the necessary documents and receiving the necessary fees for the purpose of obtaining patent rights in the various portions of the Empire.

It seems highly desirable, in view of the demands for a more simple and effective protection of inventions throughout the Empire, that some such scheme, of which but a bare outline is suggested above, should receive the consideration of the technical experts of the various Patent Offices throughout His Majesty's Dominions.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 25 of the 20th of January* on the question of the institution of a patent which should be valid throughout the British Empire.

2. The Minister of Justice has already had the question of the Patent Law under consideration, being of opinion that the present law of Newfoundland is in some particulars quite obsolete, and needs revision. (No. 359.)

Prime Minister's Office, 20th April, 1920.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 57/32 of the 16th February transmitting for their consideration a copy of a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the subject of the desirability of instituting a scheme under which letters patent having validity throughout the British Empire could be issued.

The abolition of the local Patent Office and the relegation of its functions to a central administration is an idea which, so far as the Union of South Africa is concerned, must, in the opinion of Ministers, be definitely eliminated from consideration. The maintenance of a patent law adapted to local conditions and the continuance of a local organization for the administration of that law are potent forces in the industrial development of a country, and Ministers would find themselves unable to agree to the adoption of any scheme which might tend, even remotely, to retard the operation and growth of such forces.

While a large number of inventors are content with protection in that part of the Empire in which they are resident or carrying on their business, Ministers recognize that where an inventor desires protection throughout the Empire considerable trouble and expense is, under the present system, occasioned him, and if it were practicable to devise a scheme under which an application to one authority by such an inventor would be all that was necessary, they would be prepared sympathetically to consider it. But power to issue letters patent enforceable in a particular part of the Empire could not, in the opinion of Ministers, be conceded without adequate guarantee that the laws of that part were duly regarded and the rights under those laws of persons resident or trading therein preserved, and Ministers apprehend that a central office would find much practical difficulty in attaining these ends.

If some definite principle in the matter were accepted by the United Kingdom and all the self-governing Dominions, a conference such as is suggested by the Board of Trade might be productive of good results, but Ministers fear that, in the absence of any such agreement, no definite results from such a conference could reasonably be anticipated. Ministers regret that they are unable to perceive in the note of the Controller of the Patent Office, London, which accompanied His Excellency's Minute now under reply the outline of any scheme which would be likely to form the basis of any such agreement.

MY LORD, Government House, Wellington, 17th April, 1920.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 20th January, Dominions No. 25,* relative to the question of the institution of a patent which should be valid throughout the British Empire, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that while my Government is in sympathy with the proposal, it regrets that the difficulties in the way of instituting such a patent prevent it from taking any action without the fullest consideration.

2. Although unable to concur in the holding of a Conference at present, my Ministers agree that an exchange of the views of the different countries concerned might be effected with advantage, and they will have a statement prepared on the matter for transmission to you.

I have, &c.,
LIVERPCOL,
Governor-General.

MY LORD,

Government House, Wellington, 15th May, 1920.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 61, of the 17th April,* and with further reference to your despatch, Dominions No. 25, of the 20th January,† on the subject of the institution of a British Empire Patent, I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship herewith the statement to which reference was made in the concluding paragraph of my despatch referred to above.

2. As pointed out, the statement only refers briefly to certain aspects of the question, and a definite opinion must necessarily be deferred until further information is received and until the views of other parts of the Empire are known.

Enclosure in No. 370.

BRITISH EMPIRE PATENT.

Notes on Memorandum of Comptroller, Patent Office, London.

THE promotion of inventions by facilitating applications has always been a feature of the policy of this country with regard to Patents.

With this object in view it has supported uniformity of law and practice throughout the Empire, and is in favour of the proposal of a single Patent for the whole Empire if that can be effected without undue sacrifice by any part. Though the question has been raised from time to time no satisfactory scheme has hitherto been formulated.

The first of the proposals now submitted, i.e.,

One Patent Office for the whole Empire and abolition of all local offices and separate branches by different countries, is desirable if practicable, but as it involves the loss of independent status and sacrifice of revenue by various parts of the Empire, delay in dealing with cases and other objections, the proposal does not appear to be a feasible one, and is not, apparently, thought by the Comptroller to be likely to commend itself to the countries concerned.

The alternative proposal, i.e.,

The maintenance of present local offices, and the full right to grant Patents to residents and others, but without power to examine into novelty and amend or reject applications on that account, and

The establishment of a Central Office where all locally granted Patents could be recorded to have prima facie validity throughout the Empire, and where a thorough search into novelty might be made on payment of a substantial fee, seems to offer a fair prospect of success.

In accordance with this scheme an inventor, by means of a single application in any part of the Empire, would obtain protection throughout it.

While New Zealand would undoubtedly benefit by this arrangement she would, however, only do so to a small extent as compared with the larger manufacturing countries, and would appear to be affected by it detrimentally in the following respects:—

(1) Although all applications would be recorded at the Central Office it would apparently be necessary for this country to record, index, and classify applications and specifications lodged throughout the Empire, in order to enable the Patents on any subject to be as far as possible readily ascertainable by the people of this country, which would be a work of considerable magnitude.

* No. 369.

† No. 366.

(2) At present most of the revenue is derived from outside New Zealand either from British possessions or foreign states. By obtaining protection here by means of application in another part of the Empire without extra fees the revenue from both of the sources referred to would be lost.

(3) It is not clear whether local specifications would require to be printed here or whether all printing would be done at the Central Office. This country has not yet been able to see its way to print specifications, and although with the number reduced to local cases the cost would be considerably lessened it would still be heavy as compared with the amount likely to be derived from sales.

(4) As inventions of other countries though protected here from the date of application would not in most cases be available for inspection for a considerable time afterwards, inventors and manufacturers would be embarrassed by a much greater number of pending and unpublished cases than at present. The scheme, however, appears to be a considerable advance on any hitherto proposed, and the difficulties in the way of it, so far as this country is concerned, might be possibly to some extent removed by

Modifying the proposal that application in one part might be effective throughout the Empire without further action or fee by prescribing that

The applicant shall

- (1) Indicate the parts of the Empire in which he desires protection;
- (2) Pay such fees as may be prescribed in respect of each, and
- (3) Lodge, in addition to the other documents required, a copy of the specification for each country in which protection is desired.

The copies could be duly sent to the Central Office and the other countries concerned, and fees adjusted between them periodically. This course, while not possessing all the advantages of the scheme,

Would (with adjustment of fees, if necessary) avoid undue loss of revenue to countries like New Zealand, which would otherwise suffer financially under the scheme;

Would avoid local printing if otherwise necessary;

Would avoid protection of inventions in countries where it is not desired and where the inventions would not be worked. (It is recognized as desirable that protection should, as far as possible be restricted to inventions in use or about to be put into use.)

Would considerably lessen existing cost and simplify present procedure.

Without further information and consideration a definite opinion cannot be expressed on the matter, but leaving the maintenance of Central Office out of the question the alternative proposal, subject to the modifications proposed, and adjustment of working and matters of detail (which could only be satisfactorily dealt with at a Conference) appears likely to be successful and to merit careful investigation.

MY LORD,

Government House, Ottawa, 25th June, 1920.

WITH reference to your despatch, Dominions No. 25 of the 20th January,* on the question of the institution of a patent which should be valid throughout the British Empire, I have the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of an Approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada dealing with this matter.

Enclosure in No. 371.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 17TH JUNE, 1920.

(P.C. 1372.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 12th June, 1920, from the Secretary of State for External Affairs, to whom was referred a despatch, dated 20th January, 1920, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies transmitting copy of a letter from the Board of Trade, proposing that there should be a special technical conference representative of the Patent Offices of the Empire to examine in detail the question of instituting a patent which should be valid throughout the Empire, in order to ascertain how far such a patent is practicable.

The Minister represents, with the concurrence of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, that:

(a) The desirability of a patent which should be valid throughout the Empire, having been affirmed in general terms by successive Colonial and Imperial Conferences since 1902, the Canadian Government agree that the consideration of the matter should be committed to a special conference of representatives of the Patent Offices of the Empire at an early date, in order to ascertain how far such a patent is practicable.

(b) The proposed special conference, in considering and making recommendations upon the technical aspects of the question, should be subject to the principle that, while co-operation and uniformity are desirable, each constituent part of the Empire should retain within its own jurisdiction the control of the patent laws affecting it, and of their administration.

The Committee concurring advise, on the recommendation of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy of this Minute to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the information of His Majesty's Government.

All of which is respectfully submitted for approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 258.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 2nd December, 1920.

WITH reference to Lord Liverpool's despatch No. 71 of the 15th May* on the subject of the institution of a British Empire Patent, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that as regards their criticisms of the proposed scheme the Board of Trade desire to make the following observations:—

(1) There would appear to be no reason why the work of recording, indexing and classifying applications and specifications lodged throughout the Empire should not be done by the Central Office. In fact, it would seem highly desirable that the printing of specifications and indexes should be centralized as far as Empire patents are concerned. Each Dominion could, of course, prepare such indexes of its own patents as it thought desirable.

(2) As regards the possible loss of revenue to the New Zealand Government which might be entailed by the adoption of the scheme, while the revenue might suffer to some extent from the fact that a certain number of inventors would not file separate applications for patents in New Zealand, this loss would to some extent be met by the curtailment of the expenses of the Office in so far as the work at present done by the New Zealand Office would be done by the Central Office.

(3) The objection raised with regard to the necessity for printing specifications might be met by the Central Office undertaking the duty as suggested above.

* No. 370.

(4) As regards the possible delay in the publication of specifications this would no doubt occur to some extent, but since specifications are not at present printed in New Zealand any delay which might occur would not appear to affect the public seriously in New Zealand. Moreover, it may be noted that delay does at present arise as regards applications filed under the International Convention, such applications not being open to inspection until twelve months after the date of filing in the country of origin. The disadvantages which might arise, in this respect, under the proposed scheme would not, it is thought, be much greater than at present exist. The normal time for acceptance in England is fifteen months from the date of application; if this were retained for Empire patents and were taken advantage of by inventors, which would not happen in every case, it would merely be an extension of three months beyond the time fixed for the publication of specifications filed under the International Convention.

2. The Board of Trade are of opinion that all these questions are such as might well be discussed at a conference of technical delegates, and they hope that the New Zealand Government will see their way to take part in the proposed conference. The Governments of Canada, Newfoundland, and India have agreed to participate in such a conference, while the Board of Trade are still in communication with the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia and the Union of South Africa on the subject.

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd December, 1920.

WITH reference to Lord Buxton's despatch No. 203, of the 22nd April,* on the subject of the institution of a British Empire Patent, I have the honour to state, for the information of Your Royal Highness's Ministers, that the Board of Trade fear that some misunderstanding may exist as regards the second proposal contained in the memorandum by the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks, which formed the enclosure to my despatch Dominions No. 25, of the 20th January.†

2. It was not intended to suggest that the local Patent Offices should surrender their rights to grant patents: in the above-mentioned memorandum there is a statement to the effect that "the local Patent Offices might be retained both in the United Kingdom and throughout the Empire for the receipt of applications, for examination as to formalities, and for the grant of patent rights." Further, it was proposed that while all patents recorded in the Central Office should have prima facie validity throughout the Empire, the actual rights and scope of each patent should be determined in the respective Law Courts as and when any dispute arose.

3. The Board of Trade are of opinion that the points raised in Ministers' minute of 20th April,‡ are such as might well be discussed at a conference of technical delegates, and they hope that the Union Government will see their way to take part in the proposed Conference. The Governments of Canada, Newfoundland, and India have agreed to participate in such a Conference, while the Board of Trade is still in communication with the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia and of New Zealand on the subject.

Summary of the Proceedings, of which copies were enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 335 of the 19th August,* I have the honour to state, for the information of [Your Excellency's] [Your Royal Highness's] [your] Ministers, that the Board of Trade suggest that the opening day of the proposed Conference of representatives of the Patent Offices of His Majesty's Dominions, should be fixed for the 1st May, 1922.

2. The Board of Trade do not feel able to draw up a detailed Agenda, as the procedure to be adopted would naturally be determined by the Conference itself. In accordance, however, with the above-mentioned Recommendation, the business of the Conference would be to discuss the practicability of instituting a system of granting patents which should be valid throughout the British Empire, and the memorandum enclosed in the despatch under reference would be put forward as a basis for discussion.

3. It would be convenient for the Board of Trade to know as soon as possible whether the date suggested above is acceptable to your Ministers, and also who will be the representative of [Canada] [the Commonwealth of Australia] [New Zealand] [the Union of South Africa] [Newfoundland] at the Conference.
